Of work there is none, and no prospects of any. It is the hopelessness of future employment that makes the situation so distressing. Fully a third of the population of St. John's must be pinched with hunger.

In the outposts, or fishing settlements, the conditions are similar.

Confederation appears the most probable and fitting conclusion to a hopeless, enervating struggle. Newfoundland is the only British dependency in North America not included in the Canadian Federation, and it has been the dream of every Canadian Premier to "round off the Dominion" by the admission of Newfoundland, thus forming a United Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It seems as if Newfoundland will accept confederation as the only remedy for a desperate disease.

The Far-Reaching Mongoose.

Some time ago the mongoose was introduced into the island of Jamaica to destroy the rats, which were doing much damage to the sugar cane. But the Kingston papers say its activity did not stop there. It destroyed snakes, toads, insectivorous birds and other enemies of the insect race, and as a result there has been a great increase in the number of ticks, grass lick, beetles, flies and other small pests. Horses suffer severely, and sometimes die, from the attacks of the ticks, which get into their ears, nostrils and throats. As the mongoose finds the rats, snakes, toads and crabs disappearing it attacks sitting fowls and carries off their eggs, and kills young pigs, kids, lambs, calves, puppies, kittens, poultry and game birds, destroys fruits and vegetables and is suspected of sucking sugar cane, eats meat and salt provisions and catches fish.

A Deadly Burglar Alarm.

Among recent patents is one issued for a burglar alarm particularly adapted for use in connection with a safe, which is inclosed in a movable case provided with electrical contacts, the electric circuit including an alarm and a connection with an electrically operated mechanism for opening a fluid-containing case, whereby the room in which the safe is located will be filled with noxious vapors, in which a person cannot live.

NO CLEMENCY.

To Be Extended to Irish Political Prisoners—Other British News.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—In the House of Commons yesterday John J. Clancy, member for North Dublin, moved that the sentences which had been imposed upon Irish political prisoners be reconsidered.

Home Secretary Asquith replied that the various sentences had been fully considered, and he was convinced that the prisoners had been justly and properly convicted. In view of the atrocious character of their crimes he found himself unable to extend clemency.

Mr. Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland, denied the assertion that he had ever promised amnesty to dynamiters.

The British steamer British Prince from Norfolk January 24 for Liverpool which was spoken on February 8 in lat. 48 n., lon. 19 west, proceeding at the rate of 8 miles an hour and which arrived at Scattery, Ireland, reports that she experienced terrific weather during ten days of the passage. She ran short of coal and was obliged to use her spare spars and much of her dunnage for fuel. She also burned thirty tons of her cargo of wheat.

A Montreal Star special cable from London says: "In well informed city circles it is expected that the Canadian Pacific will declare no declare no dividend for the past half year. It is admitted here that the present traffic is not earning a dividend.

British imports from Canada declined 55 per cent. in January. The largest decreases were in wheat, bacon, cheese, fish and wood. The exports to Canada declined ten per cent.

Another Steamer Long Overdue.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—The steamer City of St. Augustine from Jacksonville, Fla., lumber laden, for New York, is now nine days overdue. She has not been heard from since she was seen by the schooner Ida Lawrence on February 5th off the coast of North Carolina. The captain of the St. Augustine is J. H. Gaskill and the chief engineer Peter Murphy. Her crew numbers 18 men including officers.

Gold Coming In.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—The total amount of gold deposited in the treasury by the bonds syndicate to date is $8,015,000. The syndicate was completed yesterday and allotments made. The managers declined to give a list of the members.

More Bodies.

LIVERPOOL, N.S., Feb. 14.—Three more bodies from the wrecked Clara F. Friend were washed ashore this afternoon.

Sunday Pool All Right.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Justice Ingraham yesterday in the court of Oyer and Terminer listened to an argument on a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Robert Kenny a pool and billiard room proprietor, who has been locked up since Sunday charged with violating the Sunday law in keeping his place open on that day. The billiard room proprietor made this a test case and his counsel argued that Kenny had not violated the penal code as he had never admitted gambling in a public place and had not disturbed the quiet of the community. The playing was behind closed doors. Justice Ingraham after listening to the peoples side of the question discharged Kenny from custody. He held that he had not violated any law.

Bismark is Ill.

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—Dr. Schweinger went to Friedrichsruhe yesterday to attend Prince Bismarck, who is suffering from a cold. The Prince had a chill four days ago and has been indisposed ever since, but there is nothing in his condition to excite alarm.

K. of L. Dissension.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 14.—At a meeting last night the Knights of Labor miners decided to secede from the General Assembly and form a new organization. The new organization will be formed this week.

The Steamer Crathie's Damages.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The Board of Trade has ordered an enquiry as to the damage sustained by the steamer Crathie in the collision with the steamer Kibe. The enquiry will be held in London soon.

The Sweet Child.

A sweet child sat at a table near me in a restaurant not long ago. He was a child of the Lord Fauntleroy type, and its mother's back hair had that hopeless, tired-of-life look that only the possession of that sort of offspring can give. The sweet child was frank in his comments on everything he saw.

"Oh, ma!" said he, pointing to a man whose ears were so arranged that they could freckle on the under side, "get on to them ears."

"Hush, Georgie," remonstrated the mother, visibly embarrassed, "the gentleman will hear you."

"Huh!" said Georgie, "if he couldn't with them ears he ought to be ashamed."

And only the strident voice of a waiter somewhere in the distance broke the silence.

Piano Tuning.

Mr. S Gamspright is in town. Orders may be left at Messrs Taylor & Macdonald's or at Peterborough Bookstore.

OTTAWA ITEMS.

Activity in Political Circles—Davin After a Grant.

OTTAWA, Feb. 14.—Nicholas Flood Davin, M.P., who is here on agricultural matters with the Government, is awaiting the arrival home of Hon. Mr. Angers. He wants Government assistance for the erection and maintenance of a home for consumptives at Regina or Medicine Hat.

Hon. John Costigan, Minister of Marine, and Controller J. F. Wood left yesterday for South Renfrew to attend the Liberal-Conservative convention there. Mr. Ferguson will no doubt be re-nominated to contest the riding for the Government at the next general election. Mr. Brady is spoken of as the Liberal candidate.

R. R. MacLennan, M.P., Dr. Bergin, M.P., C. C. Cleveland, M.P., were in the city yesterday.

The liabilities of the estate of John Shepherd, painter, are put at $14,000 and the assets at $18,000.

METHODIST'S LOSE AGAIN.

Another London Church Goes Up in Smoke.

LONDON, Ont. Feb. 14.—Once more the Methodist denomination of this city is subjected to a severe loss in the destruction by fire about two o'clock this morning of the Dundas street Methodist church. In less than an hour after the alarm was given the church was nothing but a ruin, its destruction being as complete as that of its sister church on Queen's avenue, which was destroyed ten days ago. While the firemen were fighting the flames the north end gable wall fell, and it is astonishing that a number of firemen were not buried in the ruins; as it was, Chief Ros and Fireman McDonald and Riddle were badly cut and shaken up. Incendiarism is strongly suspected, although the fire started in rear of the church, near the furnace. Lose, $35,000; insurance, $15,000.

WEIGHILL RESPONSIBLE.

For the Fatal Accident on the Midland—So Say the Jury.

AGINCOURT, Ont., Feb. 14.—The coroner's inquest on the body of Engineer John Rigg, who was killed in the railway collision near here last Friday evening, was concluded late last night. The jury, after being locked up for seven hours, shortly after midnight brought in the following verdict: "We find that the deceased came to his death by No. 12 express running into the snow-plough train, and that Albert Weighill, station agent at Unionville, was guilty of negligence in not displaying his signal board. We find further that the Grand Trunk railway rules are not sufficiently specific regarding the running of snowploughs." Albert Weighill is now under arrest.

Ormond Is Recovering.

Engineer Thomas Ormond and the other men injured in the snow-plow accident on Saturday night are recovering.

McLeod Sent for Trial.

BUFFALO, Feb. 14.—United States Commissioner Fairchild held Herbert T. McLeod, the young Canadian charged with having procured naturalization papers by fraud for the purpose of being licensed as a marine engineer on the lakes, for the term of the U. S. Court. The commissioner said that he had given the case great consideration but saw no other course open to him. McLeod gave bonds in $1,000 to appear.

The case has attracted considerable attention from the romantic story of the defendant's parentage which was brought out at the examination before Commissioner Fairchild. Until the prosecution was begun, McLeod had believed the Rev. Dr. McLeod of Barrie, Ont., to be his father. At the hearing Dr. McLeod divulged the true relation; he had adopted the young man when an infant. He farther stated that nothing was known of the boy's real parents.

Williams Goes Free.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Feb. 14.—W. A. Williamson, who pleaded guilty yesterday to the conspiracy charge in the Dempster bigamy case, was brought before Judge Reynolds and released, owing to the previous good character he had. He was bound however on his own recognizance of $1,000 to appear for sentence when called on. The judge's very lenient view of the case has occasioned considerable surprise and comment.

A Georgia Meteor.

ATLANTA, Feb. 14.—A meteor produced a panic across the northern part of Georgia. The flash was accompanied by a loud and rumbling noise. Houses trembled as though shaken by an earthquake. Those who saw the brilliant illumination and felt the swaying of the buildings without witnessing the flight of the meteor supposed that either a terrific explosion had occurred or that it was an earthquake with a volcanic eruption.

Fire at St. Mary's.

ST. MARY'S, Ont., Feb. 14.—At about five o'clock this morning fire was discovered in one of the warehouses of G. Carter, Son & Co., on the G.T.R. siding here. It was totally destroyed, together with a portion of its contents, composed of flour, grain, etc. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss on the building was about $1,500 and contents about $3,000, which was fully covered by insurance in the Millers and Manufacturers.

Cruelty to Animals.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 14.—The alleged cruelty to animals cases, in which the London Street Railway Company, through three of their employes, are defendants, were heard at the Police Court yesterday morning. There was a large attendance of horsemen and others, most of whom were present as witnesses. The defendants were fined $10.

Canadian Crooks.

BUFFALO, Feb. 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Kane got six months each in the penitentiary for working the panel game on Geo. Hess Tuesday night. This sentence was imposed by Police Justice King yesterday after the pair admitted that their names were Diamond and they belonged to London, Ont., whence they came six weeks ago.

Fielding Sustained.

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 14.—The first party division in the new House of Assembly occured yesterday when the Fielding Government was sustained by 28 to 11. Two Liberals and one Conservative were absent Important Decision.

TORONTO, Feb. 14.—This morning judgment was given by Judge McDougall deciding the question as to whether or not the interest received by the Confederation Life Association could be assessed as revenue. The amount involved is about $180,000.

The case was an appeal from the assessment as income of the sum received by the association upon the interest on their investments.

To Bridge the St. Lawrence.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The leading newspapers publish advertisements inviting offers of plans and estimates for the bridge to be constructed over the St. Lawrence river at Montreal. Keen competition among British and continental engineers is probable.

Frightened the Politicians.

AYLMER, Ont., Feb. 14.—Owing to the existence of smallpox in this section the East Elgin Reform convention, which had been called for yesterday to nominate a candidate for the Commons, has been adjourned for a short period.

Then He Does the Catching.

He—Do you ever fall down, Miss Frost?

She—It depends upon with whom I'm skating.

A Hint.

Teacher—In what year was the battle of Waterloo fought?

Pupil—I don't know.

Teacher—It's simple enough if you only would learn how to cultivate artificial memory. Remember the twelve apostles. Add half their number to them. That's eighteen. Multiply by a hundred. That's eighteen hundred. Take the twelve apostles again. Add a quarter of their number to them. That's fifteen. Add to what you've got. That's 1815. That's the date. Quite simple, you see, to remember dates if you only will adopt my system —Judy.

DIRT!

Your watch needs cleaning and oiling, once every eighteen months if you would preserve its time-keeping qualities. Consider: In that time the balance wheel turns on its delicate axes 12,960,000 times. It does not "rest" at night like ordinary machines, but keeps at its work unceasingly like an engine, or a sewing machine, or any other mechanical contrivance, daily or weekly; but that delicate instrument of precision—your watch—is allowed to go uncared for until it is clogged with dirt, and stops. The best of oil becomes thick and dirty in time; in this condition it wears the pivots and destroys that exactness of their fit in the jewel-holes which is necessary to a correct performance. Let me look at your watch—I will give you a conscientious opinion as to whether it needs attention.

WILL NEGOTIATE WITH JAPAN.

Japan Reconsiders Her Terms of Peace and will Demand More From China—Admiral Ting Said to Have Suicided at Wei-Hai-Wei.

TIEN TSIN, Feb. 15.—The Emperor has re-conferred upon Li Hung Chang the yellow jacket and the peacock feather and all other honors of which he had been deprived. His Majesty has summoned him to proceed immediately to Pekin, where he will be given an audience by the Emperor. Thence he will proceed with all haste to Japan to arrange terms of peace. Viceroy Wang-Wan-Shao will take temporary charge of affairs in Pei Yang.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The Standard's correspondent in Berlin says: When Pekin shall be seriously threatened the Chinese Emperor will retire to Paigan in Mongolia. When Pekin shall be captured Prince Kung will be authorized to conclude peace. Japan has altered her terms and declines to inform the powers yet of her views, but suggests that the foreign diplomatists ascertain what indemnity China is willing to pay and what territory she will cede."

The Central News correspondent in Shanghai says that after the surrender of the last forts and the Chinese fleet at Wei-Hai-Wei Admiral Ting and the Chinese General committed suicide.

PICKED UP AT SEA.

Two Crews Rescued after a Great Deal of Suffering.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 15.—The ship-wrecked crews were brought into port yesterday by the British steamer Queensmore from Liverpool. The men had suffered terribly and two died from exposure before the rescuers arrived. On Monday night at ten o'clock Capt. Hawkett of the Queensmore, when within about 100 miles of Cape Charles saw signals of distress and running alongside found the schooner Alma Cummings from Port Royal, S. C., for Boston with lumber, in command of Capt. Cummings with a crew of seven men. The boat was leaking badly and had been kept afloat for two days only through the unceasing efforts of the crew at the pumps. They had gone without food and most of the men had their hands and feet badly frost-bitten. They were completely exhausted when taken from the sinking vessel.

On the following morning the Queensmore found 100 miles from Cape Charles a small boat in which were six men and two corpses, the crew of the Marion F. Sprigg. The Sprigg was bound from Lamberts Point for Boston with a cargo of coal in charge of Captain Ira W. Hatch. The heavy ice cut her through and she sank at the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay almost before the small boat could be launched. There was no time in which to provision her or to save the crews effects. The boat was blown out to sea and for four hours the men battled with the waves, biting winds and the pangs of hunger and thirst. E. W. Patterson, of Chelsea, Mass., and Charles Urban, of Philadelphia, died of exposure.

The Duke Weuten's Fight.

Paris, Feb. 15.—In consequence of a quarrel which occurred on the occasion of the recent funeral of the ex-King of Naples, the Comte de Bart sent a challege for a duel to the Duke of Parma. Twenty Injured in an Explosion.

ODIN, Ill., Feb. 15.—An explosion occurred in the coal mine here at noon yesterday in which twenty men were injured, some of whom may not recover. All the others were affected by the gas and shock, many of them having their hair and beards burned off. Fears are entertained that there may be other mines further back and not yet found.

Pacific Cable Progress.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Sidney Buxton, in reply to Sir George Baden-Powell, stated that negotiations for the construction and laying of the Pacific cable were in progress, but it was not considered advisable at present to make any public statement on the subject.

WELLS' BODY EXHUMED

The Circumstances Attached to His Death to be Fully Investigated.

TWO IMPORTANT WITNESSES

Some Evidence That Will Have an Important Bearing at the Inquest—Something of the Past Life of the Accused Hyams Brother Crops Up.

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—Crown Attorney Curry, accompanied by Dr. Caven, Detective Cuddy and a brother-in-law of young Wells, went to Oshawa yesterday and exhumed the remains. They returned last night with the body and an inquest will undoubtedly be held. The Crown officials are now thoroughly aroused and nothing is being left undone that will serve to unravel the mystery surrounding the tragic death of William C. Wells.

Ebenezer Aylesworth will be an important witness for the Crown. He was bookkeeper for the warehouse when Wells was killed. When talking over the matter he said that on the night before Wells was killed, Dallas T. Hyams came to his house and instructed him to go out to Toronto Junction on the following morning before coming down to the warehouse. The typewriter, a girl, was also given letters to deliver personally, so that she did not get down until late. Wells was instructed to be down sharp on time at 8 o'clock.

Robert Wright, of 408 Young street, will also be a material witness. He knows the building well, having put gas pipes in there, and says that Wells could not have been killed by the weight in the manner described. Wright said: "The weight was about 5 inches in thickness, 14 in breadth and 2 feet deep, and ran in a box on the outside of the elevator shaft. The body was found in the basement, at the foot of the box in which the weight ascended and descended, with the weight lying on the head. If Willie Wells was standing on his feet, as the Hyams people say he was, when the weight fell, he could not have been found in the position in which he was. If he was looking up to see the weight when it dropped the whole side of his face would have been cut off by the massive iron and the body would have fallen backward. If he was even lying with his head on the floor directly at the foot of the box, and that weight fell from the third story, his head would have been crushed to a jelly. More than this, there was no way by which that weight could have become loosed from its fastenings to fall as it did."

The great question now is whether or not Mrs. Harry Hyams will testify against her husband. She will not go to New York as stated in other newspapers, but will remain here. She is too ill yet to be interviewed, and even the authorities have not yet been allowed to see her.

It is said that Wells first met the Hyams brothers by answering an advertisement for a confidential clerk. They found that he had money, and instead of taking bonds in the customary way, made him put up $1,200 in cash. It is known that a short time before his death Wells was pressing the firm to return this money to him, and the Crown will advance this as an additional motive. Some time before his death Wells had taken out an endowment policy on his life for $1,000 and some time afterwards was induced by a friend to insure in another company. This he did, but made arrangements to have the first policy cancelled. It is said that the $36,000 was put on his life about two weeks after he met the Hyams, showing that he did not care to have more than $1,000 on his life.

Recent New York despatches assert that Harry P. and Dallas T. Hyams started a real estate office on Broadway, in that city, in 1881. They were arrested by Detective Sergeant Heidelberg on a charge of swindling Emmanuel Martinez out of $1,400. This case was withdrawn, but the brothers were arrested in Jersey City a month later, charged with another real estate swindle, and their bail of $6,000, according to the despatches, was estreated, on account of their non-appearance for trial.

Montreal has reported that the Messrs. Hyams are also quite well known in that place. On the charge that Harry Hyams inserted the words, "with interest from date at 10 per cent. per month till paid in full," in a note after it was signed, an accusation of forgery has, it is said, has been made against him by William Morrison, a reporter on the Montreal Star, and Judge Dugas has issued a warrant for his arrest.

Silk Mill Destroyed by Fire.

PATTERSON, N.J., Feb. 15.—Doherty & Woodworth's silk mill was destroyed by fire last night. The flames were discovered at eight o'clock in the elevator shaft. The entire fire department was called out but only managed to save $20,000 worth of raw silk. The loss is estimated at $200,000. There was an insurance of $240,000 on the building, machinery and material. There were 400 people employed in the factory.

Panic in a School.

ORLWAIN, Ia., Feb. 15.—The two storey frame school house at Lamont, ten miles from here, burned to the ground yesterday shortly after school opened. The fire started from the furnace. The children became panic-stricken. Alfred Brown, a pupil, was caught by a falling chimney and his head crushed. He will not recover. Clarence Lake was also badly injured.

FOSTER GIVES UP KINGS

His Health Demands That He Run for a Safe Constituency.

SPLIT AMONG PROHIBITIONISTS

Rev. Dr. McLeod Nominated as Their Candidate in That Riding Although He Was Strongly Opposed—Hon. Mr. Pugsley the Nominee of the Conservatives.

HAMPTON, N.B., Feb. 15.—The prohibition convention which was held here yesterday proved a very lively affair, and before its close, showed a big split in the party, some favoring a third candidate while many good temperence men opposed it. Hon. Mr. Foster was present by invitation. Rev. E. J. Grant said the meeting was called to lay before the party the nomination of Rev. Jos. McLeod, who was a good man and true, and just such a man as the temperance party wanted. J. W. Smith opposed Dr. McLeod, as he believed it would result in a victory for the Liberal candidate and place the prohibition party in a worse position than it is at present. This question was discussed by many present with very little satisfaction until Mr. Grant said that no matter what was thought there are a few who will nominate McLeod if they only get votes for him.

Mr. Foster then addressed the meeting. He dropped all political questions. He said he spoke as a temperance man on the prohibition question. He made several suggestions to Mr. Grant and his party and called their attention to the manner in which the conference States across the border had secured their law.

Mr. Grant then said that it was evident that there was nothing to be hoped for from either political party. He further said he would endeavor to defeat the candidate the Government now intended to put in the field. It was after 11 o'clock and they were interrupted with howls from all parts of the hall to adjourn to the Conservative convention which was called for eleven. The chairman tried to get order with little success. Mr. Foster asked that the motion that had been made by some one during the row be put to the meeting and decide whether it was best to put a third man in the field or put their resolutions before the Conservative convention. The meeting got so disorderly that it was impossible to do anything after the disturbing element had left the hall. Mr. Grant collected his little band around him and passed a resolution offering the nomination to Dr. MacLeod.

At the Conservative convention George W. Fowler moved a resolution asking Foster to reconsider his determination to retire from Kings. This was carried. Mr. Foster in reply said it was just twelve years since he first contested this county. He thanked them one and all and said it was now with regret that he had to inform them that in accordance with advices he had received from the best doctors in London that he would be unable to contest this county the coming election, as it would require more physical vim than he could put in. He said that he would have to look for a constituency that would be able in return for his services to elect him without a fight. He spoke at considerable length about the position of the Conservative party.

The committee on nomination then considered the selection of a successor to Mr. Foster, and after deliberation reported that Hon. Mr. Pugsley had received 71 votes and Rev. Dr. McLeod 11. Pugsley's nomination was made unanimous.

Suicide at Chatham.

CHATHAM, Ont., Feb. 15.—An unusually sad death occurred last evening at the residence of Mr. Walter Savage, Lorne avenue, it being that of his wife, who had a very painful and sudden end from taking a dose of arsenic as it is supposed. For the last eight or ten years Mrs. Savage has been subject to fits of melancholia, and while in this state she twice attempted to take her life, once about nine years ago and again last summer. She had been in a delicate state of health for some time, and yesterday afternoon unknown to her sister must have taken some irritant poison when in one of her fits of melancholia. A physician was called and asked her to say what she had taken that he might be the better able to help her, but she refused to tell what it was she had taken. She evidently was determined that the poison should do its work, which it did too well, for Mrs. Savage lived only about an hour after the doctor saw her, and passed away in great agony at seven o'clock. She was 44 years of age.

Carriage Works Burned.

MILLBROOK, Ont., Feb. 15.—About ten o'clock yesterday fire was discovered in the work shops of the Clarry carriage works. Although the firemen were promptly on hand and succeeded in saving the adjoining buildings which were several times on fire. The carriage works were completely destroyed. Most of the carriages in the building were saved. All the tools and a quantity of material was burned, but Mr. Clarry's loss will be heavy. The loss will be partially covered by insurance.

Fined for Keeping Open on Sunday.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—In the Court of Special Sessions yesterday the case of Geo. E. Slosson, the billard hall proprietor, who was arrested for keeping open on Sunday, was decided by Presiding Justice Hogan who imposed a fine of $105. The fine was paid under protest. An appeal is to be taken by Slosson to the case.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

During their stating that the Ministers have placed much emphasis upon the prosperous condition of the country and especially upon the excellent condition of our finances. During the Mackenzie regime there were deficits and the government was villainously abused by the then Opposition—now government—party and held responsible. Their deficits are, however, dwarfed into insignificance by the deficit that stares us in the face this year. Seven months only of the twelve of the fiscal year have passed and already the deficit—the excess of expenditure over revenue—amounts to almost three millions of dollars, and there is every indication that the shortage will increase to such an extent that on the 30th of June the deficit will amount to six millions of dollars. And yet our having the Trent Valley Canal depends upon the good will of our finances. Even if they wished the government are not in a position to implement their bogus promises in reference to the Trent Valley Canal. We have a huge deficit and our debt is growing larger every day. It has, since the present government took power, risen from $140,326,699 in 1878 to $249,407,485, an increase of between six and seven millions per year. How this is accomplished is easily seen from the fact that the expenditure for January, 1895, was $6,000,791—and the revenue $2,955,347. The discrepancy between income and outgo, as represented by collections of revenue in the first seven months of 1894-95—$19,244,882, as against $21,414,553 in the same period of 1893-4, did not suggest to Hon. Finance Minister Foster the advisability of shortening sail, for instead of decreasing the expenditure to keep pace with the decreasing revenue, Hon. Mr. Foster actually increased it three quarters of a million more than for the same period of last year. This is economical government. Nobody will accuse Mr. Foster of keeping up the expenditure to give an excuse for keeping up high taxation, but such an accusation would a be charitable explanation of his reckless extravagance. In the face of these facts we are asked to believe that the country is prosperous. Anyway we take these facts, there is no escaping the conclusion that the country is becoming poorer—that the purchasing power of the people is diminishing or that stagnation of business discourages imports and therefore lessens revenue. No wonder the Government does not like to face Parliament.

SALTING THE CONSUMER.

A few days ago the salt manufacturing combine met at London to "fix" the price of salt—that is to take the full pound of flesh out of the Canadian consumer, according to the gracious permission of Hon. Mr. Foster. The present range of prices is from 50 to 60 cents, but it is understood that the combine has raised it to 75 cents. Last session Mr. Foster was inclined to regard the salt duty as a "mouldering branch," and in the original draft of the revised tariff submitted to parliament last March, salt was placed on the free list. But the salt makers came down upon him, took him by the throat and insisted that the duty be retained and Mr. Foster, with a greater desire to please the combine than to benefit the farmers and the dairy industry, kept the old duty in operation and the combine can be counted upon, doubtless, for both a round sum towards the election sinews of war, and to advance the price of salt as much as a duty of 5 cents per pound in bulk, and 7½ in bags, etc., will allow them. Thus the industries of the great farming community are encouraged.

DR. MONTAGUE AND PORK.

Dr. Montague realised at Peterborough, says the Globe, the other day how an eloquent speech may be completely destroyed by one pertinent question. He was discoursing on the great advantages the farmer enjoys by having his products protected from the cheap farmers' produce from the United States, when a farmer in the audience asked him if he knew the difference between the price of pork in Buffalo and in Peterborough. The doctor does not need facts for his speeches, and he had to confess amidst the laughter of his auditors that he did not know. The point of the query was that pork had been ranging about two cents per pound higher in the Buffalo market than here, and that, too, for a quality of pork inferior to the Canadian commodity.

FIRE IN BELMONT.

A good frame house built only a year ago, the property of Mr. Daniel J. Young, situate on lot 14, in the 9th concession of Belmont, near Rapid Point, was totally destroyed by fire early last week.

At 4 o'clock in the morning Mrs. Young arose and made a fire, and returned to her room. Soon afterwards she heard something fall, and on going to ascertain the cause she found that the upper flue in the house, and the safety brick and mortar around the pipe had fallen down, the fire having burned it clear. Mr. Young first directed his efforts towards saving the building, but finding this impossible, he and his wife looked to the safety of their five children, and then proceeded to save what furniture and clothing they could. They got out the organ, and sewing machine, some beds, and many other articles of value, but the upper rooms could not be reached and the contents were consumed. In another part of the house were five quarters of beef and three hundred cap baskets, etc., and in the cellar one hundred bushels of potatoes, many bushels of apples, a large quantity of pork and butter and over a hundred sealers of fruit, all of which was destroyed. Much of this might have been saved had anyone been present to assist Mr. Young. The loss in full is more than $1,200 partly covered by an insurance of $500 on the house. Mr. Young is an industrious man and highly respected, and his neighbours deeply sympathise with him in the loss he has sustained.

BURGLARY.

A Store Broken Into and Money and Knives Stolen.

(Campbellford Herald.)

On Tuesday night the hardware store of Mr. E. T. Morton was entered and the till relieved of about $3.50, and the show case of nine pocket knives and a $5.50 revolver.

The burglary was committed soon after ten o'clock, and was discovered while the parties were engaged at their work. Shortly after 10 o'clock Mr. Morton went into the store to get his books, and while there he heard a noise in the cellar. Going quickly outside he secured the assistance of John Peters and the two went down into the cellar, struck a light and looked about but saw no one there. The cellar door was open, however, which was proof beyond doubt that it had been opened from the inside. On looking still further Mr. Morton satisfied himself that some one had entered the premises, as he found the panel of the door broken at the rear end of the store. The burglar gained an entrance through the coal chute into the cellar, broke the panel of the floor and then unfastened the hook and stepped inside. Search was made outside the building, and footsteps were discovered under the bridge, which led to the finding of a coat. The coat was supposed to belong to Robt. Robinson, a young man of about 18 years of age, who was found sitting in an intoxicated state in Mr. Jas. Gibson's hotel. He was at once arrested. Yesterday at 11 o'clock he received his trial and was sentenced to the Cobourg gaol for three months at hard labour. Robinson pleaded guilty, saying he was drunk when he committed the deed.

RUFFIANLY SCHOOL BOYS IN HASTINGS.

A Schoolmistress Shamefully Treated and Subjected to Insult.

The Hastings Star says:—On Wednesday last a fracas took place in Hastings Public School that should have been dealt with by the magistrate. The trustees, however, after due consideration, thought best to notify the parents and give notice what would follow if repeated. The head teacher being sick, notice was given that the children of his department which occupy the first flat, were to go home.

All went but two or three, who were joined by two from the separate school. These continued to occupy the schoolroom and created so much noise, that the teacher of junior department upstairs, sent one of the pupils down to get their names, which he did. The boys followed upstairs and demanded from the teacher their names, which she refused to give.

They secured her hands so she could not defend herself and then searched for the book in which the names were written. We have no hesitation in saying that the trustees are remiss in their duty if they don't see and be fully satisfied that the parents of these young blackguards punish them severely or do it themselves.

RIGHT OF WAY FOR THE C. N. & P.

Encouraging News as to the Prospect of a Beginning.

On Tuesday morning of last week, Reeve W. W. Armstrong, of Campbellford, received a letter from Mr. Geo. Gullet, M.P. Secretary of the C. N. & P. Railway, asking for a meeting of the council to pass a bylaw, granting the right of way along and across certain streets within the corporation of Campbellford.

Acting upon the advice contained in the letter, Mr. Armstrong summoned the members of the council together, and a bylaw was passed in accordance therewith.

In his letter of the 4th inst., the secretary said, "We really expect to have everything completed for active operations within ten days at the farthest." He replied to Mr. Armstrong's letter thanking him for his very prompt and satisfactory attention to the matter.

Having reached this stage in the operations of the road it can now reasonably be expected that a practical move will be made immediately.

Nature Will Assert Herself.

One woman said of another recently: "She boasts that she is never idle, that every moment not spent in sleep is a busy one. When she does sit down for a short time she always has some fancy work ready and picks it up. She declares that she can rest as well if her hands are occupied as if they lie quiet in her lap. In fact, she says that she rests better for the trifling work, and I imagine that she does, but it is because she is too overwrought and too nervous to sit perfectly still. I shall be much surprised if, some day, there is not a total collapse there." If nature has, as is alleged, a long memory and never forgets an injury, it does seem probable that this woman who, like her prototype in Mother Goose, "never is quiet," will some day discover that the few moments of refreshment and rest that she would not seize, as she went on with her daily work, have been forced upon her in the accumulation of their long arrears.

NEW YEAR NEW GOODS NEW LEAF 1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will let off cheap.

Almost a Hopeless Case.

A Terrible Cough. No Rest Night nor Day. Given up by Doctors.

A LIFE SAVED

BY TAKING

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Several years ago, I caught a severe cold, attended with a terrible cough that allowed me no rest, either day or night. The doctors, after working over me to the best of their ability, pronounced my case hopeless, and said they could do no more for me. A friend, learning of my trouble, sent me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which I began to take, and very soon I was greatly relieved. By the time I had used the whole bottle, I was completely cured. I have never had much of a cough since that time, and I firmly believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—W. H. Negotiations for a Pacific Cable Are Still in Progress.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Sydney Buxton, the under-Secretary for the Colonies, replying to Sir George Baden-Powell, said that the negotiations for the pacific cable were still in progress, and it would not be in the public interest to at present make a detailed statement.

Mr. Clancy's motion introduced on Wednesday to reconsider the sentence which had been imposed upon Irish political prisoners was rejected by the House by a vote of 299 to 111.

Sir E. J. Harland, member for North Belfast, asked if the Government would cause urgent representations to be made at Washington against any of the provisions of the Morgan Nicaragua bill which were detrimental to British shipping interests. He also requested the Government to make representations favorable to the creation of a joint Nicaragua canal commission.

Sir Edward Grey, Under Foreign Secretary, said it was not usual to make representations in reference to bills which were pending in foreign legislatures. The Government, he said, had the whole subject under consideration and there was no reason to suppose that the United States Government would not fulfil its treaty obligations.

THE BIG TEMPERANCE PETITION.

Its is Thirty Miles Long and Will be Presented to Heads of Governments.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The polyglot temperance petition thirty miles long is in the guardianship of the Adams Express Company here. It arrived from Chicago on Wednesday night. The following invitation has been sent out: "The President and members of the cabinet, Senators and Representatives are especially invited to be present Friday evening, February 15, to listen to addresses by Miss Frances E. Willard and Lady Henry Somerset in the interest of the polyglot petition signed by four million of the people, addressed to the heads of governments of the world, praying for the withdrawal of their protection from the spirit and liquor traffic wherever legalized."

Anxiety for a British Steamer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Considerable anxiety prevails in shipping circles concerning the British steamer Salisbury which left Gibraltar on January 17 bound for this port. The steamer Pontiac which left Gibraltar two hours before the Salisbury arrived here on February 5 and her commander, Capt. L. Owen, reported that the day after leaving Gibraltar the Salisbury passed him bound here. He was much surprised on his arrival to learn that she had not been heard of and begins now to fear that she has met with a serious accident. The average time for the Salisbury to make the run from Gibraltar is about 17 days and taking into consideration the winter weather and she has now been 29 days out.

Major Hambrough's Insolvency.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Dudley Albert Hambrough, formerly a major in the Isle of Wight volunteers, appeared before the court of bankruptcy to answer to the charge of insolvency. Major Hambrough figured prominently before the public at the time of the alleged murder of his son at Ardlamont a year ago. In the court he attributed his failure to the large sums expended in the prosecution of Monson, the man charged with the murder of his son, but was acquitted. The debtor returned his liabilities at $60,000, of which sum about half is secured.

A Child Badly Burned.

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—Mrs. Davidson, 300 Wilton avenue, left her house to see a neighbor across the street and left her three-year-old son Freddie alone. When she returned in a few minutes the boy was screaming loudly and his little night dress was all ablaze. The flames were extinguished but not before the little fellow was badly burned about the body and face. He is now at the hospital for sick children swathed in cotton-batting and oil. The doctors entertain no hope of recovery.

CRY OF THE UNSUCCESSFUL.

Have you thought, in your moments of triumph,
O, you that are high in the tree,
Of the days and nights that are bitter—
So bitter to others and me?
When the efforts to do what is clever
Result in a failure so sad,
And the clouds of despondency gather
And dim all the hopes that we had?

Have you thought, when the world was applauding
Your greatness, whatever it be,
Of the tears that in silence were falling—
Yes, falling from others and me?
When the hardest and latest endeavors
Appeared to be only in vain,
And we've curtained our eyes in the night time
Indifferent to waking again?

For it wants but little reflection,
And you'll be the first to agree
That the favors in which you are basking
Are darkness to others and me.
And it's hard when you lie in the sunshine
Of fortune so smiling indeed,
If you have not a thought for the many Who'll never—can never succeed.

MENTAL FREAKS.

Examples of Silent Arguments Going On in the Minds of Men.

The mental conversations and even arguments that people hold with themselves in the silent recesses of their minds when the more active powers are revolving on some substantive proposition often evolve curious freaks of involuntary thought. Luckily, however, these freaks always occur when the individual is alone, and when thought resumes its action he chuckles to himself:

"Well, if I'm a fool no one knows it but myself."

The peculiar freaks of a man's mind were well illustrated by the jokes related by three gentlemen who were talking in the Union depot the other day.

The first one, who lives in an aristocratic suburb, told this on himself: "The other evening," said the suburbanite, "when it was snowing, I took a car to go home. I could see as the car whizzed along what a chilly walk I would have home, but I had my umbrella, and that was some comfort. Even before the car got in a block of my station, to be dead sure I should not forget it, I reached up in the rack and got my umbrella. The car stopped a few minutes later, and even before I got off the platform I raised the umbrella, and then set out. I suppose I had gotten 50 yards from the car; I was thinking of a business matter. Suddenly this kind of a thought, or rather mental conversation, set up in my mind. 'Here it is snowing like blazes. I left my umbrella in the car rack. No, I didn't; I took it out of the rack.' I turned round in my mind; the car was still standing. 'Can I get back to it and get my umbrella? I'll try it.' I wheeled around intent on running back to the car. That instant thought was resumed and there I was walking hurriedly along with the umbrella tightly clinched in my hand and stoutly held bent against the snow."

His listeners laughed heartily at the joke, but it suggested an equally amusing incident, which a few mornings ago one of them had experienced. Said the second speaker: "You know away out on the boulevard where I live I have to walk nearly three blocks to get my downtown car. Breakfast had been late and I threw on my overcoat and jerked on my cap as I slammed the door after me, and struck out on a double quick for the car. I knew I had just so many minutes to catch it. I had gone nearly a block when a conversational train of thought began to run through my mind to the effect: 'You have left your watch on the dresser, and it may be stolen. You took it from under your pillow and put it on the dresser. Maybe you have time to run back and get it, and then catch your car. That's what I'll do.' That instant, mental activity aroused, and unbuttoning my coat, I said half aloud: 'I'll just see if I have got time to go back and get that watch,' and I pulled it out of my vest pocket and actually looked at the minute hand. Then I kicked myself and bolted along to the corner, where I had to wait two minutes for the car. I was so disgusted that I don't think I looked at the plagued watch all the balance of that day."

"That was near about as bad as one of my freaks," said the third man. "early one blizzardy morning about a month ago, when I got off the train at Buffalo. I was wearing one of these little skull caps on the train, and as we were to stop there 30 minutes for breakfast, and then change cars, I thought I would take a walk around the depot blocks. I took my hat down from the rack, as the train stopped, put the cap in my overcoat pocket and got out. I had gotten about a block from the train, when one of those freaks you fellows are afflicted with involuntarily began to ruminate through my mind. It simply reminded me: 'People will think you a fool walking around here with that skull cap on this cold morning. Make a dash for the car and get your derby before it pulls out.'

"Well, I made a dash and as I wheeled around a gust of wind sent my hat sailing over the platform, and I thought it would beat me to the lake before I finally put my foot on it. Of course, the little, old cap was in my pocket, just as I had put it when I got off the car."

The trio of mental freaks were so evenly matched that the tellers of them had to throw the dice to see which one should pay for the sandwiches, and the umbrella man lost.

COAL SHIPMENTS FROM THE U.S.

The Basis on Which Rates are to Be Arranged in New Brunswick.

BUFFALO, Feb. 15.—The State Board of Railroad Commissioners held a meeting in this city to consider the application made by the stockholders of the International and Oak Orchard Harbor and the Batavia and Northern railroad companies for a certificate that a railroad between Batavia and Oak Orchard is a public necessity. The promoters of the road expect to do a large business in transporting coal to Canadian consumers. In 1893 and 1894 1,500,000 tons of anthracite coal were shipped into Canada. Most of this was taken to Oswego by the D. L. and W. to Fair Haven by the Lehigh Valley and there transhipped by boat to different Canadian ports on Lake Ontario.

The shipments of bituminous coal to Canada during the same time amounted to 1,600,000. Oak Orchard Harbor would offer a shorter route to all the Canadian lake ports than any other route. The harbor is surrounded by high banks which offer natural advantages for handling coal and other freights. It is said that ferries can be built to navigate Lake Ontario at any time in the year with a carrying capacity sufficient to load cars of freight without breaking bulk from and to the docks at Port Hope, Cobourg or any of the other lake ports. The distance from Oak Orchard to Port Hope is but 36 miles; to Toronto 63.

His Footing Sure.

He was not an adept in dancing, and he knew it, and whenever he made a misstep he would ask his partner anxiously:

"Did I step on your foot?"

The young women grew tired of his repeated apologies at last, and said:

"You must think I have as many feet as a centipede. Can't you tell when you step on a lady's foot?"

"Not in your case," he said gallantly, and there was such a world of meaning in his voice that she forgave his awkwardness on the spot.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affection, which affects the skin and scalp alike, but principally the former, and is characterized by intense itching and smarting, which is worse after getting warm. It usually appears in the form of pimples, but sometimes in large blotches, and frequently becomes very troublesome. Often the private parts are affected, and the torture is terrible. Thousands are annually afflicted with this loathsome disease, and many suppose it to be incurable, but this is a mistake, as a few applications of Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve the most intense itching, and a few days' treatment will effect a permanent cure. Females are peculiarly afflicted with this disease, causing untold misery and suffering. There are many symptoms of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body, such as unusual moisture, like perspiration, only more annoying, intense itching, as if pricked with pins, etc. Dr. Chase's Ointment will instantly relieve and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop the itching, heal the sores and bleeding, day by day, and in most cases effect a permanent cure. Don't suffer another day. Don't let your druggist impose on you by telling you he has something just as good. He has not. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the only sure cure. Sold by all druggists, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Price 60 Cents.

In St. Andrew's.

The Ball family of Jubilee singers gave a most pleasing entertainment last evening in the Sunday school apartments of St. Andrew's church. The audience was a large one and manifested great pleasure in the stirring old negro melodies which were rendered. The old, old story of Uncle Tom's Cabin was told again and as it was illustrated by means of magic lantern views, the recital of that far famed narrative proved interesting in the extreme.

"Up to Date Woman."

Miss Wright, travelling secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, will deliver a lecture on the work of the association next Tuesday evening, in St. Paul's lecture room, not in the Y.M.C.A. as has been announced. The public are cordially invited. It is hoped a large number will be present to hear this interesting lecture. Special music is being prepared. Collections will be taken up in aid of the work.

It Means a Great Deal to the Housekeeper

To have her curtains fresh and artistically draped, to have some ferns and blooming plants at the window, a few choice books and pictures in the room ; it means an attractive home—unless all her skill is defeated by poorly papered walls. Beautiful wall papers are by no means costly. We can assist you by the selection of suitable wall paper to harmonize with the other furnishings. Special prices for early spring buyers. A. H. The Police Court.

A number of young men were in the police court this morning as witnesses in a case where a citizen is charged with selling liquor without a license in one of the ante-rooms at the Masquerade Ball last Tuesday evening in the opera house. The court room was crowded by an audience anxious to witness the discomfiture of the witnesses when they were placed in the box. The trial was not held, however, as the alleged purveyor of the liquor did not put in an appearance at court. A warrant has been issued for his arrest.

In the Toils at Last.

High Constable Cochrane this morning received a telegram from from Constable Thos. Beatty, of Tweed, notifying him that James Macauley, who is "wanted" on a charge of stealing a horse and cutter from Mr. G. W. Reid, of Warsaw, was safe in custody there. Mr. Cochrane left by the 11.25 a.m. C. P. R. train for the prisoner, who will probably be accorded a hearing in the morning. The prompt action of the Peterborough High County Constable in laying his plans for the capture of the alleged horse thief is highly commendable.

The San Jose Scale.

A new pest threatens our fruit trees. It is known as "the San Jose scale." New York State entomologist has been devoting some attention to it, and has concluded that it is the most dangerous enemy of fruit trees that is known to science. It multiplies with great rapidity, the scale being but the cover of an insect, and speedily renders trees incapable of bearing fruit and soon kills them. It is said to have come from Australia, its first mischief being noticed in San Jose, California. It has done much damage in New Jersey, and has now appeared at Kinderhook, New York. As yet its habits have not been scientifically studied, and fruit men are not prepared to grapple with it.

A Lecture on Art.

Lovers of art will be interested in knowing that there is a probability of Mr. Bernard McEvoy, art critic and lecturer, of the editorial staff of the Mail, being secured to deliver a lecture in Peterborough at any early date under the auspices of the Mechanics' Institute. The subject of Mr. McEvoy's proposed lecture is "Our Attitude towards Art." Mr. McEvoy is a most industrious student and exponent of art ethics, and the press pronounces his treatment of the artistic subjects with which he deals, as "instructive, amusing and always clever." The directors of the Mechanics' Institute will meet in a day or two, and doubtless some definite action will be decided upon.

The New Invention.

Commodore Crandell was in town yesterday visiting Calcutt's brewery and looking over the new improvement on his tubular boiler. He intends adding this improvement to his various steamboat boilers, by which he expects to save two cords of wood a day. Commodore Crandell has had a large experience in boilers and approves of this invention and pronounces it a great fuel saver, as well as lessening the danger of explosion, and saving of the wear and tear on a boiler by the increased circulation of the water. Commodore Crandell speaks most highly of Mr. Calcutt's invention and says it can't help but become a success.

The Charlotte Street Church Library Fund Concert.

The Sara Lord Bailey concert in the opera house last night was not as great a success, financially, as it was expected to be, on account of the many other attractions which, naturally, detracted from the attendance. Those, however, who were present were delighted with the programme, which was furnished by Miss Bailey and Mr. Fred Perrin. That the former deserves her title of "Queen of Elocution" was amply proven by the manner in which she rendered her several numbers. The applause which was accorded her was spontaneous and fully earned. Miss Bailey's rendition of "The Chariot Race" was given in a manner worthy of the highest econium. Mr. Perrin has made many friends in Peterborough, as he has appeared here several times already this season. Last evening he was, if possible, even funnier than on the occasion of his former visits, and has apparently won for himself a high place in the esteem of the Peterborough public.

HOCKEY.

"The Kingston News of yesterday says : The dispute between the Kingston Athletics and the Peterborough hockey teams, which was referred to in the News of Friday last, has been settled. It will be remembered that the Peterboroughs notified Secretary Savage of the Kingston team that they could not arrive in the city until 8:45 on the evening on which the match was to be played. They instructed Mr. Savage to advertise the meeting for 9 o'clock and to have omnibusses in waiting at the station to convey them to the rink. The Kingston hockeyists, well knowing that it would be impossible to induce a satisfactory large crowd to attend if the match were begun so late as 9 o'clock, and knowing also that the Peterboroughs could arrive here by 2.45 p.m. if they so desired, emphatically refused to accede to the conditions laid down by the players from the town that would not be a city if it could. They refused to play unless the match were started not less than 8 o'clock, and stuck firmly to what they considered was right and as fair to the Peterboroughs as to themselves. The matter in dispute was referred to the Executive Committee for decision and yesterday afternoon Secretary Savage received a communication stating that the position taken by the Kingston Athletics was correct and that the Peterboroughs must agree to begin play at 8 o'clock. For once Kingston has been dealt with fairly and the justice of the contentions of the Athletics has been proved. Pity it is that equal fairness could not be given to the Limestone city upon other occasions, and that her athletics should not be given a "fair field and no favour" in the sporting arena."

The Kingston men have acted in an unsportsmanlike manner from the start in connection with this championship game. Mr. J. P. Hurley, the manager of the local team, received a telegram recently from Kingston stating that the hockey team of that city would claim the championship by default if the Peterboroughs were not at the rink by 7.30 o'clock. Such a high handed proceeding is of course entirely beyond the power of Kingston to carry out as the match is not scheduled to take place until eight o'clock but the action goes to show that scant courtesy will be accorded the Peterborough men in Kingston. It was but a small matter to postpone the game for half or three-quarters of an hour, but on a chance of securing the coveted championship by default the Kingston's clamour for the letter of the law to be observed.

The Peterborough hockeyists and their friends will leave as arranged, per G.T.R. at 1.40 p.m. to-morrow. At Belleville the private car, which has been provided for the boys, will be attached to a special engine and whisked through to Kingston, arriving there at 6.30 p.m., as the following telegram sets forth :

J. P. HURLEY, Esq.,
G. T. R. Ticket Agent, Peterborough.

If required, will furnish special engine and men to take Hockey Club from Belleville to Kingston on their arrival at Belleville from Peterborough at 4.30 p.m. This should get them into Kingston before 6.30 p.m.

D. C. FRASER,
District Passenger Agent.

Mr. Gilmour of the Osgoode team, will referee the match, and Peterborough will, without doubt, receive full justice at his hands.

THE BUSY MAN.

If you would get a favor done
By some obliging friend,
And want a promise, safe and sure,
On which you can depend,
Don't go to him who always has Much leisure time to plan,
But, if you want your favor done,
Just ask the busy man.

The man with leisure never has
A moment he can spare,
He's always "putting off," until
His friends are in despair ;
But he whose every waking hour
Is crowded full of work
Forgets the art of wasting time;
He cannot stop to shirk.

So when you want a favor done,
And want it right away,
Go to the man who constantly
Works thirty hours a day,
He'll find a moment, sure, somewhere,
That has no other use,
And fix you, while the idle man
Is framing an excuse.

National Anthems.

The words and music of "God Save the Queen," or, as it was at first, "God Save the King," were by Henry Carey. This anthem was first sung in public in honor of the victory of Portobello, on November 20, 1740.

"Heil dir im Siegerkranz" was adapted from the preceding and was proposed as a German hymn, in 1801, by Balthasar Gerhard Schumacher.

"Die Wacht am Rhein," written in 1854 by Karl Wilhelm, has since 1870 become the most popular German song.

The Austrian "Gott erhalte" was written in 1796. Haydn had visited England and was very much impressed by the solemn strains of "God Save the King," and resolved to write a hymn which would compare favorably with it. "Gott erhalte', was first performed on Emperor Francis I's birthday, February 12, 1797, and shortly after it was officially declared the national hymn.

The "Marcia Reale" (Royal March) of the Italians, by G. Gabetti, is not an anthem in the sense as applied here; but a military march, which takes its place.

"Bosie, Czara Kranl," the Russian national melody, was composed by Colonel Alexis de Lueff in 1833. This work pleased Czar Nicholas I so much that he ordered it to be made a national chant.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND MEETS.

Mrs. G.A.Smith, of Peterborough, Reads an Interesting Address ~ Rev. Mr. Symonds on Missionary Work.

The semi-annual meeting of the Church of England Women's Auxiliary to Missions was held in Lindsay, Wednesday, and was a fine gathering in every respect. A large number of outside delegates were present and entertained by resident members. Peterborough was represented by Mrs. Bennet, Mrs. Pope, Miss Fitzgerald, Mrs. G. A. Smith, Mrs. Buller, Mrs. McGregor, Mrs. Neill, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Salisbury, Miss Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Symonds, Mrs. S. White and Miss Vink.

The unavoidable absence of the president Mrs. Williamson, owing to illness of her father, was deeply regretted by the meeting, and a telegram of sympathy for her was sent to her in the afternoon of the meeting. Holy Communion was celebrated in St. Paul's church at 10.30, when a beautiful and helpful address to the teachers, was given by the Rev. W. E. Cooper, of Campbellford. At two o'clock the delegates assembled in the school house, when the chair was taken by Mrs. Walters, president of the Lindsay branch. After prayers and a hymn, Mrs. Walters read an address of welcome, to which Mrs. Banks, Dorcas secretary replied on behalf of the Dorcasan officers, as did Mrs. Bolster, of Orillia, on behalf of the delegates. In the absence of the president and vice-presidents, a resolution was passed asking Mrs. Cummings, Dircasan secretary, to preside during the afternoon. The reports of the Dircasan secretary, showed that ten new senior branches had been organized and that eight life members had been added to the list; recorded the departure of Miss Paterson, Miss Margaret Dartnell and Miss Alice Turner for work in mission field, and reported the affiliation of the Ministering Children's League with the junior branches. The Dorcas secretary reported that 116 bales of good clothing and supplies had been sent out since May to needy missions in the Dominion, of which the junior branches had furnished 12 entirely, besides assisting materially in others. The total receipts in money since May had been $3,942.66, which included $330 given in the extra cent-a-day fund. The literature committee mentioned the fact that the two prize missionary stories had been printed and were for sale. Verbal reports were given by delegates from the branches represented, which showed much earnest work in progress. "Missionary Facts" were next called for, and the numerous responses made

BY A STANDING VOTE

SINCE THE ANNUAL MEETING

WERE MOST INTERESTING.

Mrs. Tolley of London, gave a touching and beautiful address upon "The Influence of Work," "The History of the Parochial Missionary Collections," by Mrs. Williamson, read by Mrs. Helliwell, "What Might be Done by the Parochial Missionary Collections," by Mrs. G. A. Smith, of Peterborough. "Can Regular Missionary collections be made in parishes where there is a heavy church debt," by Miss Stewart, of Orillia. "How the work may be done," by Mrs. Willoughby Cummings. Several resolutions of thanks were carried, after which the "Nunc Dimittis" was sung and the meeting closed with prayer.

The delegates, visiting clergymen, church wardens and others were entertained at tea in the school house afterwards, and an hour of social intercourse followed before the evening meeting. At 8 o'clock the chair was taken by the rector, Rev. C. H. Marsh, who, after a hymn and prayer, gave a short address of greeting. The Rev. Mr. Creighton, of Bobcaygeon, read an outline of the reports made in the afternoon, after which interesting missionary addresses were given by the Rev. H. Symonds, of Ashburnham, on his visits to Indian reserves in Calgary diocese, and the Rev. C. H. Wright on his 23 years experience in Saskatchewan. The collections were divided between diocesa missions and the pledge for the Blackfoot home.

PETERBOROUGH BOYS IN KEENE

A Sleighload Drove Over to Play Hockey and Curl.

A big sleighload of Peterboroughians drove over to Keene last night and put in an evening of quiet jollity. A hockey match was played between the "Greenies" of town and the Keene boys, with the result that the visitors were beaten by a score of 3-2.

The two teams lined up as follows:

Greenies.		Keene.
W Hall	goal	Scouts
R Bradburn	point	McIntyre
W Dumble	cover	Quinn
E Goldsmith	forwards	Dickson
C Dumble	forwards	Laing
G Frost	forwards	Fife
W Ackerman	forwards	Miller

Referee—G. L. Hay.

When the game was concluded a curling match was started between rinks composed as follows:—

Peterboroughs.		Keene.
E Goldsmith,		Howard,
W Hall,		Kennedy,
R Bradburn,		McIntire,
G L Hay, skip	11	S Laing, skip 9

The Keene Men made their score on the first six ends which were played and a great deal of laughter was indulged in at the expense of the visitors. However, "he who laughs last, laughs best," annd when Skip Hay scored in every succeeding end and finally won, the Peterborough Colts were exuberant in their expression of delight. Return matches will be played here on Friday afternoon next.

A TOWN MAP.

For many years there has been much inconvenience and annoyance to land owners, assessors and conveyancers caused by the fact that there was no official map of the town. The Government in the first instance laid out the town plot, and sold according to it; but that was the day of small things. Afterwards an energetic young Scotch engineer made a map of the town, and this map is known as "Fleming's map." Mr. Fleming is the well-known civil engineer—Sandford Fleming—known all over the civilized world. Then Robert Romaine made a map, which had been in use these twenty years, but none of these maps save the original Government map, were official, approved of and sufficient for legal purposes. The registrar frequently complains of the need of such a map. There have been so many new streets and sub-divisions that it is next to impossible to keep descriptions and registrations properly. To meet this long felt want, Mr. Cameron, D. P. L. S., has been for some years, compiling, surveying, &c., for a new map, which is now about ready for publication. Of course, the number of copies called for is limited, as it would only be required for local purposes, but this does not lessen the very great expense of lithographing, and no one can afford to publish such a map for the bare proceeds of sales. The town is greatly interested in this matter, so is Ashburnham; and the townships adjoining are also interested. All these municipalities should unite to make such a grant as would insure the publication of the map. It is hoped that the years of labour spent by Mr. Cameron will not be allowed to be wasted for want of a little help from those who will be so materially benefitted by the publication of the proposed map.

DIED IN TORONTO.

Death of Warden Pearce's Second Eldest Son.

Special Telephone to the Examiner.

The public of the county will learn with deep regret of the death of Mr. T. H. Pearce, the second eldest son of Mr. J. B. Pearce, of Norwood, and Warden of the county. Mr. Pearce, who was a most promising young man, 27 years of age, and very highly respected, was studying medicine at the Trinity School of Medicine, where he has been a student for three years. About two weeks ago he was prostrated with a virulent type of typhoid fever. In spite of the most persistent efforts of the best medical skill in Toronto, the young man succumbed to the disease and died at six o'clock Thursday evening, Feb. 14th. The remains were brought to Norwood [illegible] day by C. P. R. and the funeral will take place from the family residence, Norwood, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The EXAMINER joins the numerous friends of the family in heartfelt condolence and sympathy with them in their terribly sad bereavement.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

The following appears in the Globe of Feb. 15th: Mr. Harry Pierce, Norwood, a third year student of Trinity Medical College, died yesterday at his boarding house, 124 Parliament street, of typhoid fever, after a week's illness. Last night a mass meeting of the faculty and students of the college was held in the college building at which it was decided to draft a resolution of sympathy with his relatives and to contribute a wreath. The remains will be taken home this morning, leaving the Union station by the 8.45 train, and they will be escorted to the station by the students in a body. The procession will leave Mr. Pearce's late boarding house at 7.44 o'clock. All taking part will wear cap and gown. Six students, three from his own year and one from each of the other years, will go to Norwood with the remains and will act as pallbearers.

Razors of Ancient Days.

If man at the very beginning was human, when did he afterward yearn to get rid of at least a portion of his hair? That brings us down at once to shaving. At first the hairs on the jaws and chin must have been plucked out singly. Could a process of this kind, carried out during immeasurable periods, have produced a comparatively beardless race, as are our Indians? If man shaved first with a shell or a bit of flint, his sufferings must have been intense. Prehistoric men in Great Britain, Ireland, France and Italy used bronze razors, for we find them to-day. Generally these razors had a tang, with a whole in the tang, so that they could be suspended. The razors are bluffed on the edge, and resemble in shape those of the Chinese.—New York Times.

APPARENTLY THE MUNICIPAL OFFICIALS MUST GO.

The Committee on Appointments Again Recommends that the Offices be Declared Vacant.

The Committee on Appointments met last evening in the town clerk's office, and as a Committee of the Whole took up the following clauses, which had been referred back at the last meeting of the council:

That the services of the Relief Officer be dispensed with.

That the office of Town Solicitor be declared vacant, to take effect on March 1st.

That the office of Street and Bridge Inspector be declared vacant, to take effect on March 1st.

That the offices of Chief of Police and Constables be declared vacant, to take effect on March 1st.

Before the business of discussing the clauses was commenced, a councillor rose to take objection to the members mentioning the work which was accomplished in committee before it was finally reported to the council. A motion was passed to the effect that the result of committee debates be kept secret hereafter.

Two-thirds of those present were in favour of again sending the report of the committee back to the council, and after some discussion this course was adopted.

It is altogether probable that the councillors will insist upon the Mayor calling an immediate session of the council when the question of the decapitation of the officials mentioned will be settled once and for all time.

It is rumoured that so earnest were some of the councillors' in their effort to weed the ranks of the municipal officials that it was arranged for a minority report to be sent in to the council in case the recommendations in question were quashed in committee.

Previous to the election of officers a business meeting of unusual interest was held, when plans for the incoming year were discussed.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you if it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's eldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

PROMISES.

Promises are softly spoken,
Where self-interest calls,
Full as quickly are they broken,
When misfortune falls:
Take the fulsome promise gayely
As a vane that plays—
Yet the promiser will surely
Keep it—if it pays.

MASSAGE FOR BLACK EYES.

Better Than Paint or Beefsteak for Obliterating Evidence of Fistic Encounters.

Those who make a business of obliterating evidences of fistic encounters in the shape of black eyes by painting the damaged optics no longer enjoy a monopoly of such business. This I was told by a pugilistic acquaintance whose experience entitles him to be regarded as an authority on the subject.

"Massage treatment of the region affected," he said, "will beat paint and raw beefsteak all hollow. But it should be applied immediately after the injury is received in order to prove thoroughly efficacious. It does not require an expert to do it. All that is necessary is to move the fingers rapidly and firmly over the bruised surface, and to keep it up until the last vestige of discoloration has disappeared. The explanation is easy. Where the blow has been received the blood becomes congested. It is the clots of blood showing through the transparent skin that produces the black effect. The pressure of the fingers gradually loosens the clotted blood, which passes off into the general current of circulation, and fresh and properly colored blood takes its place.

However, as a rule, the professional "pug" does not bother himself about accelerating the disappearance of a black eye. It is a sign which proclaims the fact that its proprietor has recently filled an engagement, and as such he is an object of envy to his less fortunate brethren. It is the man about town, whose overindulgence occasionally causes him to forget that discretion is the better part of valor, who is apt to profit most by the knowledge that massage, promptly applied, will remove the signs of mourning from an eye that has been in violent contact with some other fellow's fist, and thus obviate the necessity of inventing a story to account for it, which, however ingenious, will be sneered at by sceptical and incredulous acquaintances, some of whom may have "been there themselves."

Langtry's Great Stage Kiss.

Mrs. Langtry is once more in this country, and the theater-going public will have an opportunity to ascertain if she has patented any new improvements on "the Langtry kiss," which double discounted anything of the kind ever before attempted on the American stage.

As Lady Clancarty her husband escapes from his pursuers through an open window into her room. She stands with her back to the audience clear down the stage near the footlights. Her husband looks at her for a moment and then rushes wildly into her arms, somewhat after the manner of "the tough girl" in Harrigan's "O'Reilly and the Four Hundred." They both swing around and expose their profiles to the audience.

Then they hold each other at arm's length. Then her bosom heaves and he pants. Her head falls upon her breast, inclining backward. Then an apparently genuine vermilion flush suffuses her face. Then she looks down at her and she looks up at him. Next comes a perceptible pressure around the waist that would do credit to a patent hay press. Then he abruptly places his lips to hers, and she grabs him round the head. There is a soft gurgling sound like water escaping from a kitchen sink, the mouth being worn large and open.

Then they are, as it were, glued together. Then all is still. Women in the audience become nervous. Bald-headed men are paralyzed. Men about town have their watches out, timing them. One second, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven—and then there is an explosion, as if the bung had been blown out of a beer barrel. It is all over. —Texas Siftings.

Grewsome Relics.

The photographed hand of a friend set under glass as a paper weight makes rather an interesting souvenir. But the Prince of Wales has appropriated to this purpose the grisly token of a mummied hand of one of the daughters of the Pharaohs. Let us hope a fashion so royally instituted may not find followers in this age of the worship of grewsome realism, or we shall see the lover sighing like a furnace over some genuine relic of this kind, bequeathed to him by his departed fair; and the widower cherishing among the papers upon his desk a touch that in life was less welcome there. None of these suggestions compare, however, with the actual experience we had in visiting in London a few months ago the house of a gentleman who had spent many years of his life in exploring many lands, and had lined his hall with curios of travel. Upon a shield of maroon velvet was a group of odd specimens, among them a carved wooden knife and fork and a human thigh bone. "That," said our friend, with perfect seriousness, "is all that is left of a capital fellow I knew—a missionary in one of the South Sea Islands, who would trust to the conversion of the natives, and remained among them. After I came away they ate him with that very knife and fork. The things were sent to me by a rescuing party, who unfortunately arrived too late."—New York Herald.

Sample of Modern Gallantry.

This incident illustrates the sort of gallantry that is most prevalent in this degenerate age: As a Knox County man and his wife were passing the schoolhouse, a flying snowball hit the wife of his bosom in the neck. He was enraged, and justly, and turning to the schoolboys shaking his fist in anger, he cried: "It's lucky for you, you rascals, that you didn't hit me."—Bangor News.

HEROISM OF A LUMBERMAN.

Carrying a Wounded Comrade Forty Miles Through Cold and Snow.

A young man, Henry Brault, a resident of Peterboro, Ont., recently performed an act of heroism, actuated by friendship, which is worthy of record among the heroic deeds of heroic men of any age, says The Des Moines Leader. The Manchester Union says that Brault and another young man, John Jamieson, were at work in the wild Madawaska region for the St. Anthony Lumber Company. Jamieson met with a severe accident which rendered him delirious, and Brault started with him for civilization, where surgical treatment could be had. They had traveled on foot but a few hundred yards when Jamieson's strength gave out and he became helpless. Brault, determined to save his companion if in his power, shouldered the invalid and started on his long, cold tramp of some 40 miles to the nearest railroad. Without a moment's sleep, and bearing besides his human burden, a package of provisions, Brault continued his journey for four days and nights, through cold and snow, until finally, almost as helpless from exhaustion and fatigue as his friend was from illness, he had the supreme satisfaction of reaching the end of his journey and placing Jamieson where he was able to be properly treated. Such a feat of endurance seems almost incredible, and only a seasoned woodman, inured to hardship, could have accomplished it; and among those capable of it it is rare to find so striking an example of disinterested friendship, even when a human life is at stake. Whatever his station in life may be, young Brault deserves to rank among nature's noblemen.

Diplomat of the Household.

"Did you hear about Mrs. De Billings?" asked the wife significantly as the husband settled himself comfortably in his armchair.

"No. What about her?" he asked suspiciously.

"Well, there's a little gossip going around the neighborhood that may mean something. You know how fond of gayety she is?"

"Oh, yes."

"And how Mr. De Billings hates society?"

"Yes."

"Well, I heard him say last night that he was tired of that sort of thing."

"I don't blame him."

"And that he proposed to stop it."

"He ought to."

"In fact, his exact words were that he proposed to lead her a merry dance."

"It's time he did."

"Do you really mean that?" she asked anxiously.

"Of course I do, I—" Then he stopped and looked at his wife sharply. "Look here, Jane," he said. "What are you driving at?"

"Well, he ended by explaining that he meant he would take her to the charity ball, and if you really think that it's time—"

"I'll take you," he interrupted quickly. "You've earned it, but I want it distinctly understood that I will never listen to neighborhood gossip again."

Then he settled back in his chair and growled all the rest of the evening.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND MEETS.

Mrs. G.A.Smith, of Peterborough, Reads an Interesting Address — Rev. Mr. Symonds on Missionary Work.

The semi-annual meeting of the Church of England Women's Auxiliary to Missions was held in Lindsay, Wednesday, and was a fine gathering in every respect. A large number of outside delegates were present and entertained by resident members. Peterborough was represented by Mrs. Bennet, Mrs. Pope, Miss Fitzgerald, Mrs. G. A. Smith, Mrs. Buller, Mrs. McGregor, Mrs. Neill, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Salisbury, Miss Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Symonds, Mrs. S. White and Miss Vink.

The unavoidable absence of the president Mrs. Williamson, owing to illness of her father, was deeply regretted by the meeting, and a telegram of sympathy for her was sent to her in the afternoon of the meeting. Holy Communion was celebrated in St. Paul's church at 10.30, when a beautiful and helpful address to the teachers was given by the Rev. W. E. Cooper, of Campbellford. At two o'clock the delegates assembled in the school house, when the chair was taken by Mrs. Walters, president of the Lindsay branch. After prayers and a hymn, Mrs. Walters read an address of welcome, to which Mrs. Banks, Dorcas secretary replied on behalf of the Dorcasan officers, as did Mrs. Bolster, of Orillia, on behalf of the delegates. In the absence of the president and vice-presidents, a resolution was passed asking Mrs. Cummings, Dircasan secretary, to preside during the afternoon. The reports of the Dircasan secretary, showed that ten new senior branches had been organized and that eight life members had been added to the list; recorded the departure of Miss Paterson, Miss Margaret Dartnell and Miss Alice Turner for work in mission field, and reported the affiliation of the Ministering Children's League with the Junior branches. The Dorcas secretary reported that 115 bales of good clothing and supplies had been sent out since May to needy missions in the Dominion, of which the junior branches had furnished 12 entirely, besides assisting materially in others. The total receipts in money since May had been $3,942.66, which included $380 given in the extra cent-a-day fund. The literature committee mentioned the fact that the two prize missionary stories had been printed and were for sale. Verbal reports were given by delegates from the branches represented, which showed much earnest work in progress. "Missionary Facts" were next called for, and the numerous responses made

BY A STANDING VOTE

SINCE THE ANNUAL MEETING

WERE MOST INTERESTING.

Mrs. Telley of London, gave a touching and beautiful address upon "The Influence of Work," "The History of the Parochial Missionary Collections," by Mrs. Williamson, read by Mrs. Helliwell, "What Might be Done by the Parochial Missionary Collections," by Mrs. G. A. Smith, of Peterborough. "Can Regular Missionary collections be made in parishes where there is a heavy church debt," by Miss Stewart, of Orillia. "How the work may be done," by Mrs. Willoughby Cummings. Several resolutions of thanks were carried, after which the "Nunc Dimittis" was sung and the meeting closed with prayer.

The delegates, visiting clergymen, church wardens and others were entertained at tea in the school house afterwards, and an hour of social intercourse followed before the evening meeting. At 8 o'clock the chair was taken by the rector, Rev. C. H. Marsh, who, after a hymn and prayer, gave a short address of greeting. The Rev. Mr. Creighton, of Bobcaygeon, read an outline of the reports made in the afternoon, after which interesting missionary addresses were given by the Rev. H. Symonds, of Ashburnham, on his visits to Indian reserves in Calgary diocese, and the Rev. C. H. Wright on his 23 years experience in Saskatchewan. The collections were divided between diocesa missions and the pledge for the Blackfoot home.

PETERBOROUGH BOYS IN KEENE

A Sleighload Drove Over to Play Hockey and Curl.

A big sleighload of Peterboroughians drove over to Keene last night and put in an evening of quiet jollity. A hockey match was played between the "Greenies" of town and the Keene boys, with the result that the visitors were beaten by a score of 2-2.

The two teams lined up as follows:

A TOWN MAP.

For many years there has been much inconvenience and annoyance to land owners, assessors and conveyancers caused by the fact that there was no official map of the town. The Government in the first instance laid out the town plot, and sold according to it; but that was the day of small things. Afterwards an energetic young Scotch engineer made a map of the town, and this map is known as "Fleming's map." Mr. Fleming is the well-known civil engineer—Sandford Fleming—known all over the civilized world. Then Robert Romaine made a map, which has been in use these twenty years, but none of these maps, save the original Government map, were official, approved of and sufficient for legal purposes. The registrar frequently complains of the need of such a map. There have been so many new streets and sub-divisions that it is next to impossible to keep descriptions and registrations properly. To meet this long felt want, Mr. Cameron, D. P. L. S., has been for some years, compiling, surveying, &c., for a new map, which is now about ready for publication. Of course, the number of copies called for is limited, as it would only be required for local purposes, but this does not lessen the very great expense of lithographing, and no one can afford to publish such a map for the bare proceeds of sales. The town is greatly interested in this matter, so is Ashburnham; and the townships adjoining are also interested. All these municipalities should unite to make such a grant as would insure the publication of the map. It is hoped that the years of labour spent by Mr. Cameron will not be allowed to be wasted for want of a little help from those who will be so materially benefitted by the publication of the proposed map.

DIED IN TORONTO.

Death of Warden Pearce's Second Eldest Son.

Special Telephone to the Examiner.

The public of the county will learn with deep regret of the death of Mr. T. H. Pearce, the second eldest son of Mr. J. B. Pearce, of Norwood, and Warden of the county. Mr. Pearce, who was a most promising young man, 27 years of age, and very highly respected, was studying medicine at the Trinity School of Medicine, where he has been a student for three years. About two weeks ago he was prostrated with a virulent type of typhoid fever. In spite of the most persistent efforts of the best medical skill in Toronto, the young man succumbed to the disease and died at six o'clock Thursday evening, Feb. 14th. The remains are being brought to Norwood today by C. P. R. and the funeral will take place from the family residence, Norwood, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The EXAMINER joins the numerous friends of the family in heartfelt condolence and sympathy with them in their terribly sad bereavement.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

The following appears in the Globe of Feb. 15th: Mr. Harry Pierce, Norwood, a third year student of Trinity Medical College, died yesterday at his boarding house, 124 Parliament street, of typhoid fever, after a week's illness. Last night a mass meeting of the faculty and students of the college was held in the college building at which it was decided to draft a resolution of sympathy with his relatives and to contribute a wreath. The remains will be taken home this morning, leaving the Union station by the 8.25 train, and they will be escorted to the station by the students in a body. The procession will leave Mr. Pearce's late boarding house at 7.44 o'clock. All taking part will wear cap and gown. Six students, three from his own year and one from each of the other years, will go to Norwood with the remains and will act as pallbearers.

The proprietors will pay $500 to any charitable institution if it can be shown they have published any cure that is not genuine and without the consent of the person mentioned; and they will give an additional $500 reward for any case of kidney disease, Bright's disease or diabetes that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure or relieve. The proprietors report that a single failure to cure has never come under their notice.

Razors of Ancient Days.

If man at the very beginning was human, when did he afterward learn to get rid of at least a portion of his hair? That brings us down at once to shaving. At first the hairs on the jaws and chin must have been plucked out singly. Could a process of this kind, carried out during immeasurable periods, have produced a comparatively beardless race, as are our Indians? If man shaved first with a shell or a bit of flint, his sufferings must have been intense. Prehistoric men in Great Britain, Ireland, France and Italy used bronze razors, for we find them to-day. Generally these razors had a tang, with a whole in the tang, so that they could be suspended. The razors are rounded on the edge, and resemble in shape those of the Chinese.—New York Times.

APPARENTLY THE MUNICIPAL OFFICIALS MUST GO.

The Committee on Appointments Again Recommends that the Offices be Declared Vacant.

The Committee on Appointments met last evening in the town clerk's office, and as a Committee of the Whole took up the following clauses, which had been referred back at the last meeting of the council:

That the services of the Relief Officer be dispensed with.

That the office of Town Solicitor be declared vacant, to take effect on March 1st.

That the office of Street and Bridge Inspector be declared vacant, to take effect on March 1st.

That the offices of Chief of Police and Constables be declared vacant, to take effect on March 1st.

Before the business of discussing the clauses was commenced, a councillor rose to take objection to the members mentioning the work which was accomplished in committee before it was finally reported to the council. A motion was passed to the effect that the result of committee debates be kept secret hereafter.

Two-thirds of those present were in favour of again sending the report of the committee back to the council, and after some discussion this course was adopted.

It is altogether probable that the councillors will insist upon the Mayor calling an immediate session of the council when the question of the decapitation of the officials mentioned will be settled once and for all time.

It is rumoured that so earnest were some of the councillors in their effort to weed the ranks of the municipal officials that it was arranged for a minority report to be sent in to the council in case the recommendations in question were quashed in committee.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you it it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's oldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

MASSAGE FOR BLACK EYES.

Better Than Paint or Beefsteak for Obliterating Evidence of Fistic Encounters.

Those who make a business of obliterating evidence of fistic encounters in the shape of black eyes by painting the damaged optics no longer enjoy a monopoly of such business. This I was told by a pugilistic acquaintance whose experience entitles him to be regarded as an authority on the subject.

"Massage treatment of the region affected," he said, "will beat paint and raw beefsteak all hollow. But it should be applied immediately after the injury is received in order to prove thoroughly efficacious. It does not require an expert to do it. All that is necessary is to move the fingers rapidly and firmly over the bruised surface, and to keep it up until the last vestige of discoloration has disappeared. The explanation is easy. Where the blow has been received the blood becomes congested. It is the clots of blood showing through the transparent skin that produces the black effect. The pressure of the fingers gradually loosens the clotted blood, which passes off into the general current of circulation, and fresh and properly colored blood takes its place.

However, as a rule, the professional "pug" does not bother himself about accelerating the disappearance of a black eye. It is a sign which proclaims the fact that its proprietor has recently filled an engagement, and as such he is an object of envy to his less fortunate brethren. It is the man about town, whose overindulgence occasionally causes him to forget that discretion is the better part of valor, who is apt to profit most by the knowledge that massage, promptly applied, will remove the signs of mourning from an eye that has been in violent contact with some other fellow's fist, and thus obviate the necessity of inventing a story to account for it, which, however ingenious, will be sneered at by sceptical and incredulous acquaintances, some of whom may have "been there themselves."

Langtry's Great Stage Kiss.

Mrs. Langtry is once more in this country, and the theater-going public will have an opportunity to ascertain if she has patented any new improvements on "the Langtry kiss," which double discounted anything of the kind ever before attempted on the American stage.

As Lady Clancarty her husband escapes from his pursuers through an open window into her room. She stands with her back to the audience clear down the stage near the footlights. Her husband looks at her for a moment and then rushes wildly into her arms, somewhat after the manner of "the tough girl" in Harrigan's "O'Reilly and the Four Hundred." They both swing around and expose their profiles to the audience.

Then they hold each other at arm's length. Then her bosom heaves and he pants. Her head falls upon her breast, inclining backward. Then an apparently genuine vermilion flush suffuses her face. Then she looks down at her and she looks up at him. Next comes a perceptible pressure around the waist that would do credit to a patent hay press. Then he abruptly places his lips to hers, and she grabs him round the head. There is a soft gurgling sound like water escaping from a kitchen sink, the mouth being worn large and open.

Then they are, as it were, glued together. Then all is still. Women in the audience become nervous. Bald-headed men are paralyzed. Men about town have their watches out, timing them. One second, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven—and then there is an explosion, as if the bung had been blown out of a beer barrel. It is all over. —Texas Siftings.

Grewsome Relics.

The photographed hand of a friend set under glass as a paper weight makes rather an interesting souvenir. But the Prince of Wales has appropriated to this purpose the grisly token of a mummied hand of one of the daughters of the Pharaohs. Let us hope a fashion so royally instituted may not find followers in this age of the worship of grewsome realism, or we shall see the lover sighing like a furnace over some genuine relic of this kind, bequeathed to him by his departed fair; and the widower cherishing among the papers upon his desk a touch that in life was less welcome there. None of these suggestions compare, however, with the actual experience we had in visiting in London a few months ago the house of a gentleman who had spent many years of his life in exploring many lands, and had lined his hall with curios of travel. Upon a shield of maroon velvet was a group of odd specimens, among them a carved wooden knife and fork and a human thigh bone. "That," said our friend, with perfect seriousness, "is all that is left of a capital fellow I knew—a missionary in one of the South Sea Islands, who would trust to the conversion of the natives, and remained among them. After I came away they ate him with that very knife and fork. The things were sent to me by a rescuing party, who unfortunately arrived too late."—New York Herald.

Sample of Modern Gallantry.

This incident illustrates the sort of gallantry that is most prevalent in this degenerate age: As a Knox County man and his wife were passing the schoolhouse a flying snowball hit the wife of his bosom in the neck. He was enraged, and justly, and turning to the schoolboys shaking his fist in anger, he cried: "It's lucky for you, you rascals, that you didn't hit me!"—Bangor News.

HEROISM OF A LUMBERMAN.

Carrying a Wounded Comrade Forty Miles Through Cold and Snow.

A young man, Henry Brault, a resident of Peterboro, Ont., recently performed an act of heroism, actuated by friendship, which is worthy of record among the heroic deeds of heroic men of any age, says The Des Moines Leader. The Manchester Union says that Brault and another young man, John Jamieson, were at work in the wild Madawaska region for the St. Anthony Lumber Company. Jamieson met with a severe accident which rendered him delirious, and Brault started with him for civilization, where surgical treatment could be had. They had traveled on foot but a few hundred yards when Jamieson's strength gave out and he became helpless. Brault, determined to save his companion if in his power, shouldered the invalid and started on his long, cold tramp of some 40 miles to the nearest railroad. Without a moment's sleep, and bearing besides his human burden, a package of provisions, Brault continued his journey for four days and nights, through cold and snow, until finally, almost as helpless from exhaustion and fatigue as his friend was from illness, he had the supreme satisfaction of reaching the end of his journey and placing Jamieson where he was able to be properly treated. Such a feat of endurance seems almost incredible, and only a seasoned woodman, inured to hardship, could have accomplished it; and among those capable of it it is rare to find so striking an example of disinterested friendship, even when a human life is at stake. Whatever his station in life may be, young Brault deserves to rank among nature's noblemen.

Diplomat of the Household.

"Did you hear about Mrs. De Billings?" asked the wife significantly as the husband settled himself comfortably in his armchair.

"No. What about her?" he asked suspiciously.

"Well, there's a little gossip going around the neighborhood that may mean something. You know how fond of gayety she is?"

"Oh, yes."

"And how Mr. De Billings hates society?"

"Yes."

"Well, I heard him say last night that he was tired of that sort of thing."

"I don't blame him."

"And that he proposed to stop it."

"He ought to."

"In fact, his exact words were that he proposed to lead her a merry dance."

"It's time he did."

"Do you really mean that?" she asked anxiously.

"Of course I do, I—" Then he stopped and looked at his wife sharply. "Look here, Jane," he said. "What are you driving at?"

"Well, he ended by explaining that he meant he would take her to the charity ball, and if you really think that it's time—"

"I'll take you," he interrupted quickly. "You've earned it, but I want it distinctly understood that I will never listen to neighborhood gossip again."

Then he settled back in his chair and growled all the rest of the evening.

THE MAYOR OF DETROIT.

THE PERSONALITY KNOWN TO FAME AS HAZEN S. PINGREE.

A Hard Fighter for Clean Municipal Government and the Downfall of Monopolies—Incidents in His Career That Show the Man at Bo-ja.

At a recent Saturday night mass meeting held in Detroit, Hazen S. Pingree, the Mayor, was derided, shouted at and insulted by men whose names are in the forefront of Detroit's social, political, financial and business life.

The very men who made this unusual demonstration used all their persuasive powers five years ago to induce the man they derided to accept the office.

Then Hazen S. Pingree, a soldier who had served through the war, was a prosperous, jovial and esteemed citizen. He had started in a small way in Detroit making shoes. He made good ones, and his business grew and flourished, and he was, before he made his first race for the office of Mayor, accounted in every way a leading citizen of Detroit. He owned a fine residence on the principal avenue. His walls were hung with rare works of art and costly ornaments. His well stocked library possessed many valuable literary works, and he had an interesting family. There was not at this time half a dozen persons in the city who were not ready and willing to say a kindly word for Hazen S. Pingree, the shoemaker.

The city was under the domination of a ring who sold nominations to the highest bidder, and after a discouraging meeting in which every man nominated declined to become the savior of the city, the name of Hazen S. Pingree was mentioned. When he was told what they wanted of him he told them flatly that he didn't want any office and wouldn't have it. They argued and argued with him, telling him it was his duty as a citizen to accept the nomination, and they all pledged themselves to work for him.

"You're a good fighter," they told him, and he has proved that they spoke the literal truth, for he is a much harder fighter than those same men desire.

At any rate, to return to the time of his nomination the convention was held, and Hazen S. Pingree headed the ticket for Mayor. Pingree went in to win, and, although unaccustomed either to public speaking or political methods, he made a tremendous fight and was backed by the very cream of respectability and the ring haters of the city. His victory was a tremendous one, and the city congratulated itself on being freed from misrule and corruption.

MAYOR HAZEN S. PINGREE.

While that election did not turn the head of the newly-elected Mayor, it did to a large extent arouse his long dormant combativeness, and he launched out bravely for reform.

His idea of reform early antagonized some of the very men who had induced him to accept the nomination which had made him Mayor. When he entered office he found jobs of every nature in progress. The sewers were in a wretched condition, the streets badly paved and the paving in control of a ring. A street car company, autocratic in its long continued use and abuse of power, refused to listen to the demands of the citizens. For a long time this street railway company had been the monarch of all, because the Common Council of the city was in its control and alderman were, to say the least, influenced by passes and, it was charged, by money favors, too.

Early in the new Mayor's official life he threw down the gauge of battle to the street railway company. The council was against him, for the reform wave which swept him into office had not carried on its crest the reform aldermanic candidates.

Pingree was "a good fighter," and when he shied his castor into the ring he defied them all. The street railway company feared his power and by skillful maneuvering introduced an apparently harmless ordinance into the Common Council. While apparently harmless, this ordinance, if passed, would have given the street railway company a thirty years' lease of power. The members of the Common Council were servants of the street railway company, and they passed that ordinance at the bidding of their masters.

Mayor Pingree found that the company had just the requisite two-thirds vote to pass that blanket ordinance over his veto. He saw the "snake" in the bill, vetoed it, called attention to what the ordinance would do, and then issued his call to the citizens to assemble and demand that their representatives, the aldermen, should defeat the ordinance.

The meeting that resulted from this call was one that will go down in Detroit's history. It was the greatest meeting Detroit had ever seen. The immense Auditorium, which can seat 4,500 persons and accommodate 1,000 more in standing space, was filled to the doors. It was a meeting of everybody. Gen. Alger, the staunch republican, was on the platform at the elbow of Don M. Dickinson, the equally staunch democrat. Partisanship and politics were lost sight of in the desire of the public weal, and when the ample form of Mayor Pingree entered the building a roar went up that was heard on Woodward avenue, two blocks away. That roar continued in one mighty shout of popular acclaim as he took his place on the platform. It was the great night of Mayor Pingree's life.

The aldermen, recognizing the voice of the meeting, sustained the Mayor's veto, and since then he has successfully attacked the paving ring, and has got gas down to $1 per 1,000 feet. These fights made many enemies for him, and in spite of the good done by his "potato patch" for the poor, the mass meeting referred to was the very antithesis of that above described as the greatest in Detroit's history.

There are very many persons in Canada who watch with interest the career of the Mayor of Detroit; and it has many pointers for those who take an interest in municipal matters.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke as kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said,' be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home.
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

A BOON TO ALL SICK ONES

Cures When Other Medicines and Doctors Have Failed

RESTORES THE SICK TO HEALTH.

"I Can Attribute My Restoration to Health Solely to South American Nervine." Says C. J. Curtis, of Windsor.

C. J. CURTIS, WINDSOR, ONT.

When one has climbed a high mountain it is not difficult to mount the ordinary hill. A medicine that will cure when the case is a desperate one, may be safely taken as a good all round medicine in ordinary cases, and it is not alone the very sick who need medicine.

The statement is borne out by a multitude of facts, thousands of testimonials from reputable citizens, that South American Nervine cures, after what are considered the best medicines in the country have failed, and where the skill of the ablest physicians has come to naught.

The acknowledged scientific principle of disease is weakness and disorganization at the nerve centers. These nerve centers are the main spring of the whole system. When the stomach is out of order the certain remedy is to set the nerve centers in right condition again, so with every other trouble. Thus it is that it may be liver complaint, nervousness, indigestion, heartburn, sour stomach, loss of appetite, impoverished blood, consumption of the lungs, catarrh of the stomach, sick or nervous headache, sleeplessness, pains in the kidneys, or other ailments from which a person is suffering South American Nervine will cure, and cure quickly, and best of all cure effectively and lastingly in every such case.

Much as we were disposed to laugh at La Grippe as a trifling complaint when it first made itself known in this country, later developments have proved that it is a serious malady. The after effects are such that very thorough measures need to be taken to ensure perfect restoration to health. South American Nervine has proven wonderfully officacious in giving back health to the victims of La Grippe. Mr. C. J. Curtis, a wealthy and well known farmer near Windsor, Ont., suffered from a severe attack of this malady, leaving him exceedingly weak and with no appetite. No medicine seemed to do him any good until he was influenced to try South American Nervine and his testimony is this: "After taking one bottle I found very great benefit from it, my appetite improved wonderfully, and I felt my strength returning very fast." Mr. Curtis then purchased five bottles, but after taking only three out of the five, to use his own words: "I am feeling as nearly well to-day as I ever did, and I can attribute my restoration to health and strength solely to South American Nervine."

THE NEW ARMENIAN PATRIARCH.

Ismirlian a Brave and Talented Man Popular With the People.

Mgr. M. Ismirlian was elected to the chair of Armenian patriarchate of Constantinople just a few weeks ago, after the resignation of Mgr. Ashikian, who was compelled to leave his high office, as he had neither the necessary courage to satisfy the needs of the nation in a few critical occasions nor to fulfil faithfully the duties devolving upon him as patriarch. The sultan, on the contrary, in spite of paying attention to the periodical demonstration of dissatisfaction of the Armenians from the maladministration of the national affairs, kept the patriarch in his office, not accepting his repeated resignations, for he expected to utilize him as an organ.

After the resignation of Mgr. Ashikian Armenians asked from the Turkish authorities the usual permission to convene the national assembly for the election of a new patriarch, but this permission was not granted by the government. This criminal negligence of the Turkish authorities threw the Armenian national matters into a chaotic state for nearly six months. But, thanks to his imperial majesty the sultan, the Armenians were allowed at last their patriarch, which resulted in a very satisfactory election. It was this newly elected patriarch, Mgr. Mathew Izmirlian, who went to the palace of the Sultan Jan. 19 last to present his respects to the ruler of his country in accordance with traditional custom, but instead of expressing his utmost satisfaction with the present administration of Armenian affairs the monsignore gave an unexpected surprise to the sultan by uttering the following daring words, which are of a unique character in their nature, as the patriarchs are supposed to ignore the real condition of Armenians and thank the autocrat: "By the goodness of God and the choice of the Armenian nation, I have become patriarch of the Armenians, and your majesty has confirmed my election. I beg to express thanks for the confirmation and the audience granted me. According to my free conscience I will fulfill the duties devolving upon me toward my church and nation. I pray God preserve you unshaken upon the glorious throne of your ancestors."

HIS HOLINESS MGR. MATHEW IZMIRLIAN.

Mgr. Izmirlian was the second candidate or nominee for the Armenian catholicate in 1892. He used to be the pastor of St. John's (Garabed) Church in Scutari (Constantinople) and many years ago he acted as private counsellor to the patriarch of Constantinople, and lately was the archbishop of Armenians in the Egyptian khediviate. He is quite well known for his knowledge of the Armenian ecclesiastical rights and laws, and has rendered very appreciable services to the Armenian Catholicos of Etchmiadzin and Celecia. With his exemplary past and sincere and modest nature, Mgr. Izmirlian is a man of great authority among the Armenian clergy. By his influence, enthusiasm and prompt presence he was the central figure or spirit at the convention of clergy in 1893.

His Insanitary Condition.

"You bet I know enough to come in when it rains," remarked Mr. Weary Watkins, in the course of a heated discussion.

"It is a mighty good thing you do," retorted Mr. Hungry Higgins. "Ef you didn't your rame would be mud. Leastways mostly mud."

Democratic Even in Death.

There was a funeral in St. Albans, Vt., recently of a democrat, aged 86, who was buried in a coffin made by a democrat of pine grown on a democrat's land and sawed at a democrat's mill, and the undertaker and bearers were democrats.

The Rarest State in Yankeedom.

It is not surprising that people seeking divorce courts never go to South Carolina. Under no circumstances nor for any cause whatever are divorces granted in that state.

The Judgment in the School Case—Watters Case Again Postponed.

OTTAWA, Feb. 15.—Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper has received from the Colonial office the full text of the judgment of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the Manitoba School case. The first step which the Government will take in the matter will be to pass an order-in-Council asking the Manitoba Government to give the matter of the grievances referred to their attention, and to pass such legislation as will remove the said grievances.

HON. T. M. Daly has returned to the city from Caughnawaga, where he was visiting the Indians on the reserve there.

John Askwith, one of the oldest residents of the city of Ottawa, where he has resided for 50 years, died yesterday. He was 89 years of age. He fought under Sir Alan MacNab during the rebellion of 1837.

The Low Church party among the Anglican bodies here have made the first definite move in the history of this diocese. Offence has been taken at the refusal of Archbishop Lewis to ordain a graduate of Wycliffe college, and this is the basis of a movement calculated to secure the election of a Low Church bishop for the new diocese at Ottawa.

The case of Thomas J. Watters, Acting Commissioner of Customs, was again called in the Police Court. Mr. Ferguson for the defence asked for a postponement until Tuesday next. Mr. O'Connor for the Crown consented and the case was therefore adjourned until the date asked for. Bail was renewed.

WEIGHILL IS CONFIDENT.

He is Sure of Acquittal of Responsibility for the Wreck.

TORONTO, Feb. 15.—Albert Weighill, who is held responsible for the accident near Agincourt, arrived in the city yesterday. The agent and his friends turned up at Crown Attorney Dewart's office in charge of Constable Hobbs. They announced their intention of making an application for bail and the Crown Attorney directed the constable to take his prisoner over to the County Judge. Weighill is a little under-sized man, with none of the appearances of a man who would perjure himself to escape conviction. He has secured T. C. Robinette as counsel.

"I am prepared to put up $20,000 bail," said Mr. Weighill when seen by a reporter. "I have a clear conscience about this thing, and I think I will not be held on the charge."

The Weston Inquiry.

Mr. Pope of Belleville, who will represent Mr. John Bell, Q. C., solicitor for the Grand Trunk, at the enquiry into the Weston accident, arrived in the city last night. He left for Weston this morning to attend the enquiry.

The Church Fires in London.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 15.—The managers and trustees of city churches have generally become thoroughly alarmed over the recent church fires. Furnaces and other heating apparatus are being subjected to careful inspection, and janitors have been instructed to take the greatest precaution. In addition a number of churches have been more heavily insured, and steps are being taken in other cases. The board of managers of Knox church met and ordered that $5,000 more insurance be placed on the church's property. The Askin street Methodist trustees have also decided to add $2,000 to the amount of their insurance.

Lieut.-Colonel Bog Honored.

PICTON, Ont., Feb. 15.—On Wednesday evening, the 13th inst., the officers of the 16th Batt. assembled at the Hotel Tecumseth to meet Lieut.-Col. Cotton, D. A. G. Several matters of importance were transacted in connection with the regiment, notice of which will appear later in general orders, in regard to recommendations for promotion, transfers, etc. Afterwards they were invited by Lieut.-Col. McDonnell to an oyster supper, during which a committee of the officers presented Lieut.-Col. Bog, the retiring commanding officer, with a very handsome gold-headed cane, suitably engraved, and a nicely worded address.

North Brant Dairy Association.

BRANTFORD, Feb. 15.—At the fifth annual meeting of the North Brant Dairy Association, held at Tranquility school the following officers were elected: President, T. W. Charlton; Vice President, W. S. Campbell; Treasurer, T. A. Good; Secretary, J. W. German.

McGreevy to Contest Quebec West.

BADLY MIXED UP.

Municipal Matters in Niagara Falls Are Rather Muddled.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Feb. 15.—The municipal affairs of this town seems to be merging into a very muddled condition. When Alderman Fenwick, the P.P.A. candidate elected, had to resign on account of irregular qualification, the work of the council board done at the first meeting for 1895, on which Fenwick had taken part in the appointment of committees, etc., had to be done all over when Alderman Peckham took his seat instead of Fenwick, he being the next highest at the polls. Now it turns out that after his defeat at the polls Peckham was appointed by the public school board as their representative on the high school board and before accepting the appointment by his presence at the high school board meeting, Fenwick's retirement took place Peckham promptly handed in his resignation to the high school board and took the declaration of office for alderman.

The faction opposing Fenwick and Peckham have served Peckham with a writ to show his right to sit on the Council board, claiming that the public school board had neither accepted or rejected his resignation, that board not having had a meeting before he took his seat on the council board. Peckham has retained Charles Rykert, of St. Catharines, to look after his case, while the gentlemen amongst them, some of the most prominent business men of the town, have equally as good legal talent retained to fight the matter through the courts to the bitter end, and no doubt the case will reach a prominent place in the annals of the Canadian courts.

An Incorrigible Thief.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 15.—Frederick Scott, a man in his prime and a painter, with a family, was arrested on a charge of having broken into the Rectory street school on Monday night and stealing fifteen boxes of pencils. Scott has a very bad record and is said to be an incorrigible thief. On January 30, 1894, he was sent down for six months to the Central prison for getting advertisements for an alleged concert programme. Previous to that he served a term for robbing the fare boxes of the street cars here and again he received eighteen months for breaking into a house on Dufferin avenue.

Young Child Frightfully Burned.

TILBURY CENTRE, Ont., Feb. 15.—A shocking accident occurred here yesterday. A young child of Mr. Charles Grant, of this village, fell on a hot stove and when found by its mother was partly cooked. Its face and side were frightfully burned. Slight hopes are entertained for its recovery.

FATAL DYNAMITE EXPLOSION.

A Laborer on the T. H. & B. Railway Instantly Killed.

HAMILTON, Feb. 15.—Wm. Davies, a laborer, employed on the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway, near Binkley's Hollow, about four miles from Hamilton, was killed instantly by an explosion of dynamite.

Davies was thawing about twelve pounds of dynamite when it exploded. He was carried nearly one hundred yards, and when picked up it was found that his head and one arm was blown off.

The arm was found at a considerable distance from the body. The force of the explosion scattered a large pile of ties and one of them almost struck a farmer named John Surerus, who was driving along the road near the scene of the explosion.

The noise of the explosion was heard in Hamilton. Deceased had only been employed on the works a short time, and leaves a widow and three children in poor circumstances.

Injured by a Dynamite Explosion.

DUNDAS, Ont. Feb. 15.—An accident occurred in section 20 of the T. H. & B. Railway, by which three men were injured. On this section there is a night gang at work, and Mr. Mack, who has charge of the blasting, usually after the day men leave, sets off about 15 holes to enable the night gang to work. On this occasion he had about 30 pounds of powder besides the usual quantity of dynamite in the blast. The battery he was using had sufficient power to set off only seven of the charges, but the concussion discharged the other eight. Mr. Mack, Mr. Forston, of Jerseyville, and another man were injured. Mr. Mack is the most seriously injuried of the three, having his leg badly hurt.

Seriously Injured While Skating.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Feb. 15.—While skating on the rink in the Queen Victoria Park at Niagara Falls, Ont., yesterday Miss Maud Morse, a young lady living in Drummondville was in some manner tripped up. In the fall her head struck violently on the ice, fracturing the skull. She is now lying in a precarious condition at her home.

A U. S. Minister Dead.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 15.—Isaac Pusey Gray, United States Minister to Mexico, died last evening. Shortly before the end apoplexy supervened and the patient was bled, but to no purpose.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Feb. 15, 1895.

Things were quiet on the local grain market. Wheat prices are unchanged, with a limited demand. Barley market is slow. No. 1 is quoted at 45c, and No. 2 43 to 44c. and feed at 37 to 38c. Oats are quoted, west, white 29c. and mixed 28c.

At East Buffalo in the sheep and lambs market there was no further decline in prices, but the market closed dull with full 40 cars unsold. Slack trade is due to scarcity of cars. Railroads are unable to get stock out and it must be fed here, so eastern buyers prefer to await for changed shipping conditions before taking hold.

The uncertainty in regard to financial legislation still holds business in abeyance in all departments on Wall street. The stock market opened firm, chiefly in consequence of the receipt of higher quotations from London and prices advanced 1-8 to 5-8 per cent., the latter in Louisville and Nashville which sold up to 53. Sugar yielded from 90 3-8 to 89 1-2 and closed at 89 3-4, a net loss of 3-8 per cent. The other grangers held up fairly well. Speculation left off dull and weak in tone. Total sales were: Listed, 89,000; unlisted, 28,000.

The Wall of Pekin.

The outer wall is about twenty-seven miles in circumference. It was built centuries ago of mud and bricks. The inner and outer face are of the latter; each brick is as big as a family bible, and the interstices are filled up with mud and stones. The whole has long settled into a solid cement. Save for some damage done in one or two quarters by recent floods, this great wall is still intact. The gates number thirteen. They are insignificant, though finely arched; are not much wider than the streets, and are only twenty feet high. At night they are closed with great doors sheathed with iron.

The whole city forms two rough parallelograms, one being the Tartar city and the other the Chinese. There is another wall separating the two sections. The first is the Manchu quarter par excellence; the second is given to commerce. Inside the walls of the Tartar city—they are sixty feet thick at the base—are the government buildings, the foreign legations, and the residences of the wealthy Tartars, which run round another high grey-bricked wall, six miles (roughly) in circumference. This wall, incloses the temples, pleasure grounds and outer palaces of the sacred city, consecrated to the use of the "Son of Heaven." Inside this block, again, is the Purple forbidden city, the actual residence of the emperor and his court.

The New School of Writing.

Some of our new writers—Mr. Anthony Hope, in particular—not content with the short story, strive to compress the essence of a novel within the limits of an occasional conversation. Similarly, certain of our playwrights—notably Mr. Oscar Wilde—ignoring the broader methods of the older school, rely for their more piquant effects upon the perspicacity of the epigram. Neither device is altogether admirable; but "the public," which is nowadays popularly supposed to be "something in a hurry," living or existing on potted meats, beef wine, tea tabloids and other triumphs of the gastronomical economist, doubtless feels itself intellectually flattered.—Lady's Pictorial.

Far Reaching in its Benefit.

The last day of January ends our year's business—a successful one in every respect, in spite of the hard times. We are getting closer to the people every year, and we are gratified that the people appreciate our efforts so unmistakably. Growth is proof, continuous growth is proof positive. Our business proceeds on SOLID IDEAS PERSISTENTLY FOLLOWED, and not upon spasmodic excitements.

We have sold more goods, counted more dollars, and entertained bigger crowds than ever before. Our best expectations have been more than realized and we enter upon a new year with our stores standing solidly on our past records, more than ever determined to beat that record, if possible.

Starting Saturday Morning

We commence our annual STOCK-TAKING CLEARANCE SALE. The recollection of last year's and previous season's mammoth sales will be ample to incite enough people to crowd our stores from end to end. Unbounded attractions will prevail in every department, and another triumph will be added to our long list of irresistible bargain sales.

TRIAL OF THE EX-QUEEN

Lilliuokalani Denies All Knowledge of the Insurrection.

V. W. ASHFORD FOUND GUILTY

Carl Wideman, Convicted of Treason, is to be Banished—The Mariposa Brings Another Exile—None of the Condemned Have Yet Been Executed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 16.—The steamer Mariposa, from Honolulu, arrived yesterday with news that there have been no executions as yet. William France, charged with conspiracy, was the only man deported on the Mariposa.

On the Australia, leaving February 23, a number of others will be deported, including Peterson and Creighton, ex-Cabinet officers, and Wurdemburg, ex-Postmaster-General.

Volney W. Ashford and John F. Bowler have been found guilty of misprison of treason. The government just prior to the sailing of the Mariposa decided to banish Carl Wideman, convicted of treason.

The trial of the ex-Queen began on the fifth instant. Over 200 persons were present, a majority being ladies. Nothing distinguished the entrance of the Queen or the proceedings from those of any other accused person. Her counsel, Neumann, made a series of objections to the jurisdiction of the commission and to trial by its members, but these were overruled. The charges and specifications were read, the accused being permitted to remain seated. Neumann then asked for a postponement for another day before pleading to the charges, as he had not had time to formulate objections to them. The case was continued to the next forenoon. The American and British representatives were present as usual, also a large number of officials and naval officers.

On February 6 it was learned that from 8 to 9 o'clock on the previous morning the ex-Queen had been visited by Capt. Robert Parker of the police, and urged to make a full confession of her knowledge and of what part she took in the late rebellion. He thought such an open avowal might secure the release of many of her partizans now in prison. He labored without success. The ex-Queen maintained that she was innocent of the whole affair, and laid the blame for the uprising upon Samuel Nowlein.

Parker appears to have acted on his own responsibility in the interest of many prisoners. Neumann began by objecting on the ground that no order convening a military commission had been served on the prisoner. Major Potter testified that a copy of such an order was with the papers served. Neumann then repeated the same objections to the jurisdiction of the commission, which he had been in all his former cases, namely, that such a tribunal could try only military offences and that treason and misprision of treason were offences against the statute law and could only be tried by a jury in a civil court.

The Queen through her counsel declined to plead to the thirteen specifications and charges. The court directed a plea of not guilty to be entered.

After the evidence was in Mr. Neumann spoke for an hour, maintaining that the evidence failed entirely to prove the accused had any knowledge whatever of the uprising. Judge Advocate Kinney responded for forty-five minutes, treating with derision the possibility of her ignorance with the chief conspirator Nowlein living under her roof and official documents passing back and forth between her and Gulick relating to the establishment of the new government at the very time when Waunapolo was prepared to land the arms and the insurrection was ripe. The trial closed at 2.30 p.m.

An Act empowering the marshal to execute the sentence of the military commission is being rapidly pushed through the councils.

A Dishonest Station Agent Suicides.

He acknowledged a deficit in his accounts of $100 which he had taken to further an invention he was perfecting.

WELLS' TRAGIC DEATH

Further Developments That May Tell Against the Accused.

BLOOD-STAINED SOAP BOXES

A Witness Turns Up Who Will Tell What He Saw in the Storage Rooms in the Second Storey — Detectives Searching for a Missing Weight.

TORONTO, Feb. 16.—New and sensational disclosures are said to have developed in connection with the death of William Wells and important discoveries have been made by County Crown Attorney Curry and Detective Cuddy.

For ten years Messrs. Imrie & Graham occupied the premises, No. 26 Colborne street, and in 1888, the building was destroyed by fire, so that a new hoist, with rope and weight attached, were constructed. These were nearly new when the Hyams brothers took possession. When Imrie & Graham gave up possession in November, 1892, the weight was boxed in from garret to cellar, the weight having a play of about three inches, so that it would not tilt over sufficiently to let it off the hook that held it. When the accident occurred, it has been found, the boxing had been removed from the cellar, leaving the weight free.

At the investigation yesterday it was revealed that the weight found beside the body of Wells had disappeared, and a new and lighter one now hangs in its place. Cuddy is now looking for the old weight.

But the most startling piece of evidence yet discovered throws a new light on the tragedy, and leads to the theory that Wells did not meet his death in the cellar, but that he was killed, either accidentally or otherwise, in the second storey of the building, which was used as a storage room. Among other things stored there were a number of soap boxes, and a witness has been discovered who will swear that on the day of the accident he had occasion to visit the storage room and found a number of the soap boxes splattered over with blood to such an extent as to satisfy him that there was something wrong. Some of the sides of the boxes were half covered with blood, the floor was stained in several places, and the covers of some showed that a strong stream of blood had spurted over them.

In view of this evidence a theory is now formed that Wells may have been killed upstairs, his body lowered in the hoist and after the body had been placed in position the weight was unhooked and dropped on him. The theory is a horrible one, but it is entertained and the witness whose identity will not be disclosed at present will testify as above at the trial.

Mr. Uriah Jones, uncle of William Wells, the dead youth, who lives in Pickering, will be an important Crown witness in the case.

There is to be no inquest on the case. Crown Attorney Curry remarked that there was no necessity for one as long as a post-mortem examination is held. Coroner Johnston will assist at the post-mortem examination to-day.

THE R. & O.'S BIG STEAMERS.

They May be Put on the Toronto Route—Catholic Petition.

OTTAWA, Feb. 16.—James Swift and M. Connolly, of Kingston, are in town on private business. Both were questioned as to the report that the large new steamers at present running below Montreal on the Richelieu line were to be put on the Toronto route, running as far as Prescott, with smaller steamers from there to run the rapids. Mr. Swift said that the matter was being considered, and would be decided at the annual meeting of the company to be held in Montreal next Tuesday. Both gentlemen seemed to think that the largest stockholders would oppose the change, and Mr. Connolly added, significantly, that extensive improvements were being made to the boats which have always run on the Toronto route.

The petition of the Catholic laity, praying the government to grant remedial legislation in the matter of the Manitoba schools will be presented to the Government at the Cabinet meeting to-day. It is a monster, but would have been longer but for the terrific storm of last week. His Grace Archbishop Duhamel will represent the hierarchy and Rev. Father Allard the Catholics of Manitoba.

Patrons of West Bruce.

TIVERTON, Ont., Feb. 16.—The adjourned convention of the Patrons of Industry of West Bruce to nominate a candidate for the Commons met here yesterday. Six candidates in all were nominated, but the choice of the convention lay as before, between Mr. Tolmie, of Kincardine, and Mr. Valens, of Lucknow. On the third ballot Mr. Tolmie received 51 votes and Mr. Valens 50. The former was declared the nominee of the convention by a standing vote.

Sentenced to Thirty Months.

HAMILTON, Feb. 16.—Margaret McMahon, who was found guilty on Thursday, on a charge of passing counterfeit money, knowing it to be counterfeit, was yesterday sentenced to Kingston penitentiary for thirty months. Prisoner is a white woman but is married to Prof. Williams, a colored barber, and the latter wanted to serve the sentence in her place. Although the record of the prisoner is bad she was a Sunday school teacher in the Baptist colored Church.

IN THE IMPERIAL HOUSE

Jos. Chamberlain Moves His Amendment to the Address.

LABOUCHERE SAYS DISSOLVE

An Appeal to the Country, He Thinks, Would Result in the Return of the Liberals by an Increased Majority—France's Power in the Congo.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—In the House of Commons yesterday Sir Edward Grey, under-Foreign Secretary, said that any agreement with Belgium which gave to France or any other power the right to pre-empt territory in the Congo State without the consent of the great powers was not valid. No such consent, Sir Edward added, had been given in connection with the agreement between Belgium and France just published, and the right of pre-emption over the Congo State claimed by France had not been recognized.

Mr. Chamberlain moved an amendment to the address, that it is contrary to the public interest that the time of Parliament be occupied in the discussion of measures which, according to the statements of the ministers themselves, there is no prospect of passing, which proposals, involving great constitutional changes, have been announced, upon which the judgment of Parliament should be taken without delay.

Mr. Chamberlain, arguing in favor of his motion, denounced the methods of the Government, who he said were wasting the time of the House in discussing measures which were not expected to pass. The ministry, according to their own admissions, thought it improbable that any leading bill other than the Welsh church disestablishment bill and the Irish land bill would become law during the present session. The Government, he continued, had thrown the onus of the situation upon the House of Lords. That being the case let them not delay in submitting to the House of Commons a resolution dealing with the House of Lords and asking the country immediately afterwards for a decision upon the question. Why, he asked, did the Ministry cling to their precarious and inglorious existence? Let them no longer shrink from their inevitable plunge which would be the more disagreeable the longer it was delayed.

Henry Labouchere said it could not be truthfully denied that their had been a change of front in the Liberal official world in regard to home rule. On other points, too, Lord Rosebery did not seem firm. With reference to the resolution in the House of Lords matter his utterances were uncertain and there had been such inconsistencies in the statements of the Ministers that he (Labouchere) would like to know whether the House of Lords question had ever been discussed by the Cabinet. Could any one wonder, he asked, that a milk and water agitation carried on as this had been should have fallen flat? He thought a speedy dissolution would be an excellent thing, because the Liberals would then be returned to power with a larger majority than they could now command. If they stayed here doing nothing it would be worse for them. An appeal to the country ought to be the first thing. One good bill passed, Mr. Labouchere declared, would be of more use to the party than the showing of a dozen measures which they could not get passed.

After Home Secretary Asquith, Sir Richard Webster, ex-Attorney-General, and several other members spoke on Mr. Chamberlain's motion the House adjourned. The division on the motion will probably take place on Monday.

BRITAIN'S SEVERE WEATHER.

Thousands of Workmen Idle—Great Suffering Among the Poor.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The coldness of the weather continues to cause widespread suffering and many deaths. The thermometer was four degrees below the freezing point yesterday and the air is raw and penetrating. In eighty inquests held in London the verdicts have been that death was accelerated by the cold. It is impossible to keep dwellings of the poorest classes warm, and although no case of death by freezing has been reported, dozens of cases of pneumonia in the under-heated or fireless rooms are brought to notice daily.

The ice packed in the Thames still impedes navigation. Work in the building trade has been suspended and the contractors have dismissed their men for the present. The trades unions report that 36,000 of their members in London are unable to get employment and must remain idle until the weather shall moderate.

In Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham and several other manufacturing and trading centres the unemployed are making street demonstrations. In all these cities the soup kitchens are crowded from morning to night, yet are unable to satisfy the extraordinary demands upon them. Glasgow alone is feeding more than 40,000 persons.

The Inquest at Weston.

WESTON, Feb. 16.—A jury was empanelled in the town hall yesterday to enquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of the late Frank Joseph, the lawyer who lost his life in the wreck on the Grand Trunk in Wardlaw's Cut last Friday, during the storm. The hall was crowded with citizens, all anxious to hear the evidence of the many witnesses who have been summoned to give testimony at the inquest.

FATAL FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT.

Result of Finance Minister Foster's Ideas of Running the Country.

"I tell you, sir, that the time for doing business on the back street is past. In 1878 we had been on that long enough, and if we were going to take our place amongst countries we must get on the front street and put in PLATE-GLASS WINDOWS, do business on modern methods, or else go out altogether."—Hon. George E. Foster at Galt.

HOW THE IDEA HAS BEEN PUT INTO PRACTICE.

OTTAWA, Feb. 11, 1895.—The condition of the Dominion finances is alarming, as shown in the monthly statement in yesterday's Official Gazette. The revenue up to January 31, was $19,254,822, as compared with $21,414,552 for the same period last year, a decrease of $2,159,730 for 1895. The expenditure for the same period is $735,319 in excess of what it was last year, leaving a shortage at both ends, and a total deficit for the seven months of nearly $3,000,000. This will mean a deficit for the current fiscal year of $5,000,000. The expenditure for January exceeds the expenditure for January, 1894, by over half a million dollars. The startling announcement is made that the public debt increased during the month by $3,473,000, so that the net debt is now in round figures $250,000,000.

Rolling up the Public Debt.

The following table, taken from the latest volume of the public accounts, shows the increase year by year of the net debt of the Dominion, this being the difference on the 30th of June each year between liabilities and assets:

A BLIGHTING FROST.

The first census of New Brunswick was taken in 1824, and the province was then found to have 74,176 inhabitants. In 1834, after the lapse of ten years, another census was taken, and the population at that time stood, at 119,457, an increase of 45,000. In 1840 the census showed the population to be 156,162. In 1851 another census was taken, at which the population was 193,800; in 1861 the population had grown to 252,000; in 1871 it reached 285,000; in 1881 it was 321,000, and then came the end of our province's growth. Two years before the government had introduced that system of high taxation to which they gave the name of the National Policy, and it had the same effect on the growth of New Brunswick's population that a summer frost has on an orchard in full bloom. During the ten years that followed 1881 the population remained stationary, and New Brunswick lost the whole of its natural increase, which in that time must have amounted to about sixty-four thousand persons, to say nothing of a few thousand immigrants who settled in the province during those ten years.—St. John Telegraph.

"WHILE it was probably unwise to have taken the money, there was nothing illegal in it," says the Hon. Mr. Dickey, referring to Sir A. Caron's reception of $25,000 from the contractor for the Lake St. John Road. That is, probably, why Mr. Dickey voted in Parliament to whitewash the "unwise" minister. Yet, says the Ottawa Free Press, to most people the transaction appears one of the worst features in that great organized system of corruption which has developed into a huge political engine during the past sixteen years. We say system, for unless this moral shame had become a part of the accepted routine of the machinery of government it would have been impossible for a minister, in his place in Parliament, and alluding to a stupendous piece of shameless and bare-faced corruption and diversion of the public funds, to have said, "I say that under the same circumstances, what I did on that occasion I would do again to-morrow." And yet this disgraceful confession was made openly and unblushingly by the Postmaster-General.

THE Review in its issue of last night says:

"The National Policy protects the workingman from the cheap labour of foreign countries and preserves for the farmer his best market—the home market.

Let the editor of the Review take a trip to Howrie & Sons lumber camps in the north country and take a census of the employees, and see if one out of fifty is a Canadian, and report the evidence thus afforded of how the National Policy "protects the workingmen from foreign competition." And while he is on the way, he might interview the farmers and get their opinions of the home market for their grain and farm produce. Do N.P. editors and N.P. politicians take workingmen and farmers for absolute idiots?

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam cures coughs colds, asthma, bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles.

THE Woodstock Sentinel-Review says: "The ministers are going about the country trying to find out what public opinion is." It is to be presumed they have now found out. They are in consequence afraid to meet Parliament, go to the country or declare themselves in any way whatever. They seem paralyzed with fear. Unfortunately the country has to suffer owing to the demoralization of the Cabinet.

SURELY the present government will not leave to their successors the task of presenting that $123,000 report of the Liquor Commission to Parliament. Have they no pride in their costly work?

Very Youthful Burglars.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Feb. 16.—Merchants have been annoyed lately by petty thieving which they and the police believed was carried on by juveniles. The police have arrested three boys, Hugh McLean, L. Carter and John Petrie. The first named was only 11 years old and the other two 15 years old. The grocery of George Buckley had been broken into and some tobacco and nuts taken. An officer caught the boys named dividing their stealings in a shanty in the village. Their case has been adjourned.

An Ottawa Protest Stopped.

OTTAWA, Feb. 16.—Ex-Ald. Cluff informed a reporter that he had withdrawn his protest against the election of Mayor Borthwick. Mr. Dalton McCarthy has been telegraphed to Toronto to stop proceedings. Mr. Cluff was not prepared at present to speak of the cause that had led him to take back his charges, but it is understood it was on account of disagreement with some of his friends who are backing him. The friends of Mayor Borthwick say that no evidence could be found to permit going on with the protest.

No Blame Attached to Anyone.

HAMILTON, Feb. 16.—Coroner Brandon of Ancaster, held an inquest at Binkley's corners on the death of Wm. Davies, who was killed by the explosion of a package of dynamite on the T., H. and B. railway on Thursday. The jury returned a verdict that deceased came to his death as a result of the explosion, but could not say how the explosion was caused and no blame was attached to anyone. The widow and three children of deceased are in destitute circumstances.

Serious Coasting Accident.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., Feb. 16.—While boys were coasting down a hill at Murray Harbor south, three teams approached. One of the boys jumped from his sleigh and it went under the horses' feet, which so frightened the horse that he sprang forward and ran over Francis Baker's sleigh and inflicted such serious wounds in the boy's scalp that he died the following afternoon.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

A DISEASE LONG HELD BY PHYSICIANS TO BE INCURABLE.

Its Horrors are Those of a Living Death—The Victim Helpless, His Torture Terrible—Loss of Control of Bowels and Bladder and is a source of Constant Worry to Family and Friends—A Remedy for the Disease Discovered.

Mr. James McLean a resident of Lefroy, Simcoe County, Ont., is known to every man, woman and child for miles around the vicinity of his home, and all know of the long years during which his condition has been that of a living death. Mr. McLean tells of his injury, his years of torture, and his subsequent release from the agonies of locomotor ataxia, in the following vivid language:—

"In the year 1880 I was thrown from a scaffold, falling on my back on a stone pile. I was badly hurt, and narrowly escaped death. Plasters and liniments were applied, and I seemed to get somewhat better. But the apparent improvement was short lived. My feet began to get unusually cold, and nothing that could be done would warm them. The trouble then spread to my legs, and from the waist down I was attacked with shooting pains flying along the nerves in thousands, and causing the most terrible tortures for days and nights at a time. I could get no relief save from the injections of morphine. Six physicians treated me at different times, but appeared only to faintly understand my trouble, and could do nothing for my relief. Some of the doctors declared my trouble was rheumatism, but two of them said it was a disease of the spinal cord, that the trouble would get worse, and that sooner or later my arms should become affected. This prediction proved true. My left hand dropped at the wrist joint and hung dead and cold, and I had no more control of it than if the hand were not on me. Fly blisters and electricity were resorted to without avail. My stomach was next attacked with a burning, aching, nauseating pain, causing the most distressing vomiting, and I often thought I would not see morning. I have vomited almost continually for thirty-six hours, and nothing but morphine or chloroform could deaden the anguish I suffered. But worse trouble was in store for me. I lost control of my bowels and water, and my condition became most horrible, necessitating constantly the greatest care and watchfulness. I was now suffering from the top of my head to the point of my toes. I saw double, and had to keep my eyes fixed steadily on the ground to make a step at all, and the moment I raised my eyes I would stagger and fall if I were not grasping something. I could not take a single step in the dark. For nine long years I suffered all the horrors of a living death. In 1889 I was admitted to the Toronto General Hospital, where I was treated for four months. I was told that my trouble was locomotor ataxia, and incurable and I returned home no better. After returning home I had further medical treatment, but with no better results than before. Finally I was given the following certificate of incurability:

CHURCHILL, July 27th, 1893.

THIS IS TO CERTIFY that James McLean has a disease of the spinal cord (incurable) that renders him unfit to obtain a living.

A. T. LITTLE, M.D.

About this time I was strongly urged to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and oh how I wish I had known of this great remedy years ago! What anguish and torture I would have been spared! Soon after beginning the use of Pink Pills I found myself improving. The pains left me and I was able to discontinue the use of the morphine. I regained control of both bowels and bladder, and gradually a feeling of life returned to my legs and arms. I can now walk without the aid of either crutches or sticks and can take long strides. My stomach trouble has all left me, and I can eat as heartily as ever in my life. My friends, who never expected to see me about again, are astonished at the wonder Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have wrought in me. When I began the use of the Pills my weight was reduced to 136 pounds, and it has now increased to 165. I am a new man and it is not possible for me to say enough in praise of your marvellous medicine. My wife also joins me in thanks, and says it was a happy day for her when I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as since then she has been able to get rest at night which she had not done for so many long years before. I hope Heaven may direct this into the hands of some other poor sufferer, who may find as I did, release from a living death through your great life-saving remedy. Yours very gratefully,

JAMES MCLEAN.

DAVID BOOTH.

Mr. David Booth, manager of the extensive electrotyping department of the Montreal Daily Witness, is known to thousands in the great commercial metropolis.

The rude hand of affliction was laid heavily upon Mr. Booth two years ago. Life was made miserable for him, and he was prevented from enjoying the ordinary blessings which flow to those who can pleasurably take three good meals each day.

Before hearing of the wonderful healing virtues of Paine's Celery Compound, Mr. Booth had experimented with ordinary medicines without any success; even the services of a physician proved useless.

While in a serious condition Mr. Booth was recommended to use Paine's Celery Compound. The first bottle proved magical in its effects; and after a short time Mr. Booth was perfectly cured. He writes as follows, for the benefit of sufferers:—

"Two years ago I had a severe attack of dyspepsia, and thinking it would pass away, I paid no attention to it until it became so bad that I had to see a doctor, whose prescriptions only gave me temporary relief. I suffered terribly after the lightest meal; the smallest piece of bread gave me pain, and I could not get proper sleep, consequently, I would feel very weak and would perspire with the least exertion. I have spent considerable money buying medicines advertised to cure indigestion, but none seemed to meet my case. Every second day after eating meat at dinner, I had a rush of blood to the head. A friend recommended me your Paine's Celery Compound. I bought a bottle, also a second one, and I must say in my case it was magical. I found myself able to eat without any bad after effects. I have used seven bottles, and am pleased to say I can now enjoy a good, square meal. I can confidently recommend your medicine to any one suffering from indigestion. In fact I am now quite an enthusiast for Paine's Celery Compound."

American Trade Report.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Bradstreet's says: Milder and pleasant weather, following the severe storms and extremely low temperature, have, with few exceptions, failed to stimulate orders for seasonable goods or the distribution of improvement generally. At the west there are improved sales, by Chicago jobbers in dry goods, clothing, furnishings, shoes and rubbers and Kansas City announces a larger volume of spring business. Demand for staples has increased at Milwaukee as at St. Paul, pointing to small stocks held by country dealers. Elsewhere general trade remains at a low ebb. The total number of business failures in the United States this week aggregates 266 as compared with 295 last week.

Unusual Weather in Georgia.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 16.—The most furious snowstorm ever seen here began yesterday. The ground is covered to a depth of nine inches. Street car lines suspended traffic early in the afternoon. Specials from Thomasville, Brunswick, Savannah, Columbus and other points state that the snow is the deepest ever known. Albany had sleighing for the first time in its history.

Viewing the Big Petition.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Four thousand people attended the Grand Convocation of White Ribboners held in Convention Hall in this city last night. The hall was draped with the monster polyglot petition. Miss Frances E. Willard and Lady Henry Somerset, who were to have been the principal speakers, were unable to be present.

A Woman Burned to Death.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio., Feb. 16.—Mrs. Richard Simpson, of Toronto, died last night from burns received yesterday. Her dress caught fire from a grate and she ran into the yard where she rolled in the snow. Neighbors tried to extinguish the blazing clothes but failed.

Destitution Among Coal Miners.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 7.—The stories in regard to the destitute condition of Washington county coal miners has been officially confirmed. At Venetia the miners and their families to the number of over 100 persons are in a deplorable condition, and unless quickly supplied with food will suffer seriously from starvation.

Look Out

for breakers ahead when pimples, boils, carbuncles and like manifestations of impure blood appear. They wouldn't appear if your blood were pure and your system in the right condition. They show you need—a good blood-purifier; that's what you get when you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It carries health with it. All Blood, Skin, and Scalp Diseases, from a common blotch or eruption to the worst Scrofula, are cured by it. It invigorates the liver purifies and enriches the blood, and rouse every organ into healthful action. In the most stubborn forms of Skin Diseases, such as Salt Rheum, Eczema, Tetter, Erysipelas, Carbuncles, and kindred ailments, and with Scrofula in every shape, and all blood-taints, if it fails to cure, you have your money back. And that makes it the CHEAPEST blood-purifier sold.

ANGLICAN DIFFERENCES.

The Trouble Between the High and Low Churchmen in Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Feb. 16.—A meeting is to be held in St. George's church here shortly to discuss some difficulties which are brewing between the high and low parties in the Church of England.

The difference has arisen through the action of the Archbishop of Ontario in practically refusing to recognize Wycliffe College, the evangelical college of the church. The low church people feel that a principle is at stake. The immediate cause of the proposed movement on the part of the low church sympathizers was the refusal of the Archbishop to accept Mr. Gibson of Ottawa as a candidate for holy orders, apparently because he proposed receiving his theological education at Wycliffe College.

Rev. J. M. Snowden, pastor of St. George's church, had considerable correspondence with the Archbishop concerning Mr. Gibson. The Archbishop was willing to accept Mr. Gibson for holy orders if he took a course in either Trinity or Lennoxville colleges, but would not accept him if he took his theological course in Wycliffe college. The correspondence in the case was laid before a small committee of churchmen from the different city churches, and the result has been the movement for the organization of a churchmen's union in this diocese.

A circular sent out calling a meeting for this purpose says: "Is it fair or reasonable to refuse recognition to a college whose principles are identical with the authoritative standards of our church; whose position is similar to that of every other college in Canada; whose position has been officially recognized by the church at large, and whose graduates are not refused admission to any other diocese in the Dominion? The church is calling out for men to enter the ministry; why, then, refuse the ministrations of godly young men who offer themselves for the work on account of the college they attend? Moreover, the laity are calling for evangelical clergymen from all parts of Canada. Can the bishops refuse to answer this constant appeal? They can do so only by adopting a policy which if persisted in can have but one result. The people, already discontented and to some extent alienated, will leave the church to the bishops and the clergy.

To have perfect health you must have pure blood, and the best way to have pure blood is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

GING MURDER TRIAL.

Testimony Damaging to Hayward's Prospects of Proving an Alibi.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 16.—In the Ging murder trial the state was startled and the defence given a disagreeable surprise yesterday. It was known that M. D. Wilson, a liveryman, could give some important testimony concerning the case, and as the state did not call him the defence concluded to find out what he knew. All along he has steadfastly refused to tell his story and when he was called it was expected that he would be able to materially help the defence. On the contrary, he was a most dangerous witness. He said little, but the burden of that testimony was that he met the carriage in which Miss Ging was riding near the spot where Blixt claims to have met the woman and Hayward on Kenwood boulevard and that Hayward was with her.

C. J. Bartleson, whose daughter accompanied Hayward to the theatre on the night of the murder, told of Hayward's visit to his house, and his testimony accounted for all but eleven minutes of the time for which it is intended to prove an alibi for the defendant. Mrs. C. E. Naegle, who heard the shot, fixes the time at between 7.50 and 8.10 in the evening, and Mr. Bartleson says that Hayward was at his house at 7.55.

Harry Hayward will go on the stand in his own behalf next Wednesday or Thursday and his lawyers attach a great deal of importance to the story he will tell.

SURRENDER OF WEI-HAI-WEI.

Negotiations Still Going On—Admiral Ting's Death Confirmed.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The Times correspondent in Chee Foo says that negotiations for the surrender of Wei-Hai-Wei have been pending since the 12th. He confirms the report of Admiral Ting's suicide. The Chen-Yuen he says is the only effective Chinese warship left.

The Shanghai correspondent of the Central News says that the Japanese have made great efforts to save the life of the American Harvie who was arrested by the Chinese recently aboard the passenger steamer Sydney hailing from Sydney, and was held by them on Liu-Kung-Tao in Wei-Hai-Wei harbor. It is not known whether they have succeeded.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE
Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.
When Go! removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's diseases),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age,
They then went home, but stop, I miss,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

The Hockey Excursion.

That the citizens of Peterborough are interested in the success of their hockey team was amply demonstrated at noon today, when about 75 persons accompanied the team on their trip to Kingston where they will contest with the Athletic Hockey team of that city for the intermediate championship. The Alleged Horse Thief in Custody.

High County Constable Cochrane last evening returned from Tweed with Macauley, the alleged horse thief. The man was captured in Flinton, twenty miles from Tweed, and was driven into that town from where the telegram was despatched to Mr. Cochrane. The accused was given a hearing by County Police Magistrate Edmison immediately upon his arrival. He elected to be tried summarily by the magistrate and was remanded until eleven o'clock Thursday morning.

The lecture on the above subject to be given under the auspices of the Y.W.C.A., in St. Paul's lecture room, on Tuesday evening next, by Miss Bertha Wright, of Ottawa, President of the Dominion Y. W. C. A. will be of the greatest interest. The lecture will contrast the ideal woman of past centuries with the young woman of to-day, and the whole lecture will be superbly illustrated with lime light views. Everybody interested in the good work of the Y.W.C.A., should attend. As the lecture will only be of interest to adults, parents attending will act accordingly.

A Sad Bereavement.

Word has been received in town that Rev. S. J. Shorey has suffered a severe affliction in the death of his youngest child, Arthur, aged five years, who died yesterday. The remains will leave Lindsay on the morning train, and be taken, via Millbrook, to Picton, where the funeral will be held and interment take place. The numerous friends of Rev. Mr. Shorey and family in Peterborough will unite in heartfelt sympathy and condolence with them in their great affliction. The family has been severely tried this winter with grievous sickness, and the little fellow, Arthur, who was first taken ill with rheumatic fever, has lingered along, hope and fear, of recovery and death, alternating almost daily, till yesterday the end came.

RUNAWAY.

On Tuesday night last, says the Lakefield News, while Rev. Mr. McDonald and Mr. R. Burgis, accompanied by a lady, were returning home from the S. S. convention held in Bridgenorth, they met with an unfortunate experience. They had just got a short distance from Bridgenorth when the horse ran against a snow bank, upsetting the cutter and throwing the occupants out. The horse, being free, made off down the road toward Lakefield at a fast pace, but had not gone very far when it overtook a horse and cutter driven by Mr. T. H. Benson, and before he could turn out of the way the runaway has collided with his rig with the result the shafts were completely torn off. The horse was captured in a short time, and Mr. McDonald returned to Bridgenorth, secured another rig, and arrived in Lakefield without further mishap.

An Obliging Official.

The Hockey club left town this afternoon at 1.40 and will be in Kingston in time to do up the Limestones, thanks to the obliging courtesy of Mr. D. O. Pease, district passenger agent of the Grand Trunk Railway. Mr. Pease is not a boy himself, but his heart is young and in the right place and it is due to his courtesy that the local hockeyists are enabled to reach Kingston in time for the great game. The boys highly appreciate such practical sympathy and the fact that Mr. Pease has been able to accommodate the boys and at the same time protect the interests of the railway, is a lesson to other officials that courtesy and an obliging attitude towards the public are entirely consistent with a faithful discharge of duty. Mr. Pease will be "jolly good fellowed" in a thousand keys before the boys get back from Kingston, and the local G.T.R. ticket agent, Mr. Hurley, will not be forgotten.

A Pointer for Peterborough Citizens.

The surest indication of the big profit there is in supplying municipalities with light, water or other public services is the rush of capital there always is whenever an opportunity offers. Capitalists know the safety of the investment and the certainty of the returns. Such an investment is always preferred to the utilization of capital in industries where there are competitors and where the market has to be made and kept by ceaseless vigilance. The profit which capital thus seeks to make out of communities should always go to the people, in the form of services supplied at cost. Instead of paying high prices for gas, electric light and water, and enabling companies to earn 10, 15 or 20 per cent., the people should get the dividends themselves. If all public franchises were held by, and for the people, capitalists would be forced to cease living on the people and go into industries, developing the country.—Toronto Star.

GREAT RALLY OF METHODIST YOUNG PEOPLE.

One of the greatest gatherings yet held in Canadian Methodism will take place in Toronto, February 25th, 26th and 27th, in connection with the annual convention of the Methodist Young People's Association of Ontario.

A movement has been on foot for some time, looking to the organization of the young people of the entire church into an association, with a view of holding quadrennial conventions. By a committee called into existence to carry out this purpose, it was decided that such a gathering for the Dominion and Newfoundland should be held in connection with the Ontario Methodist Young People's Convention of 1895.

Young People's Societies of any kind in connection with a local Methodist church are entitled to send delegates from any province, who will be "welcome to the enjoyments and privileges of the Convention."

An interesting feature in connection with this gathering is that the delegates from the six Central Conferences will organize into Conference Associations and elect representatives to the Epworth League Board.

It is expected that every province in the Dominion will be represented by large delegations at the Convention.

Reduced railway rates are secured, and as over 300 delegates are sure to be present it will be single fare, i.e., pay full fare going and get a convention certificate from the station agent by which to return free. The names of regularly-appointed delegates should be sent to Mr. D. Scott, City Hall, Toronto, who is secretary of the Billeting Committee.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Eight of the workers met for prayer and conference last evening.

Last Tuesday evening a Literary Society was formed. The meeting was an enthusiastic one. The organization will be managed by H. P. Kennedy, president; B. Anderson, secretary, and Messrs. Forster, Nott and Miller, executive committee. Meetings will be held Tuesday nights at 8 o'clock. From the interest manifested, we can prophesy a healthy development of the members along this line.

Last evening was the first chapter in the checker tournament. Sixteen men played and W. G. Freeburn headed the list. Next Friday will be the "finis."

Mr. Frank Peck will be at the helm in the song service to-night.

Another step in advance is what we are aiming at for to-morrow's meeting. A "power circle" will make the meeting interesting and helpful. The service is held for men only.

Men who do not attend Sunday school are invited to an evangelistic Bible class in the rooms at 3 o'clock to-morrow.

As Well as Ever

After Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cured of a Serious Disease.

"I was suffering from what is known as Bright's disease for five years, and for days at a time I have been unable to straighten myself up. I was in bed for three weeks; during that time I had leeches applied and derived no benefit. Seeing Hood's Sarsaparilla advertised in the papers I decided to try a bottle. I found relief before I had finished taking half of a bottle. I got so much help from taking the first bottle that I decided to try another, and since taking the second bottle I feel as well as ever I did in my life." GEO. MERRETT, Toronto, Ont.

ALLEGED "RITUAL TROUBLES."

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 15.—"Ritual troubles" have been drifting into the First Congregational church of this city. Lately there have been metrical litanies and Anglican chants and amens at the end of the hymns, and the Lord's Prayer has been sung sometimes instead of being said. While many liked the innovations, others thought they savoured of imitation of other churches. At the last prayer meeting, led by Dr. Jackson, before his removal from the city, a member of the congregation expressed his dislike of the ornate additions to the service, but his remarks were allowed to pass without comment. Since then he has started a petition, embodying his views, and has obtained some signatures. The end is not yet.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Feb. 16, 1895.

The local grain market is still quiet. Wheat prices are unchanged, with a limited demand. Wheat is quoted at 57 to 58c. west and white at the same price. Barley market is slow. No. 1 is quoted at 45c. and No. 2 43 to 44c. and feed at 37 to 38c. Oats are quoted, west, white 29c. and mixed 28c.

In spite of heavy buying and firm cables wheat closed weak and 1-8 to 1-4c. lower. Corn was easier on account of large receipts and the close was 1-4 to 1-2c. lower. Oats were dull and closed 1-8c. lower.

Although the demand in Buffalo for barley is very light holders are in a very comfortable position; the amount for sale is limited and owners, instead of wishing to meet buyers' views, are inclined to tack on another cent, especially for desirable lots. From Canada reports are that barley is well cleaned up, but there are several lots here which do not move at the figures quoted. Quoted: No. 1 western, 63c.; No. 2 western, 61c.; No. 1 Canada, 65c.; No. 2, 63c.; No. 3 extra, 60 to 61c.

At East Buffalo there were 4 cars of cattle on sale. Good heavy shipping steers sold at $5 per cwt. and extra fat butcher cows at $4 to $4.05. Hogs, 37 cars on sale. Dull for all kinds. Sheep and lambs market still dull because stock cannot be taken out, but prices are fairly steady; extra 95 to 98 pound lambs at $5.85 to $5.90; fair to good Canadas at $5.25 to $5.75.

Some disappointment was felt in New York stock circles at the defeat of the Wilson gold bond resolution in the House, but the pressure to sell was not pronounced. The general market in the final dealings was slightly better and left off steady.

The London stock markets were idle. Americans were dull and weak on the crushing defeat of the gold bond bill in the House. Grand Trunk's were flat on the statement of earnings coming to-day.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL "FAKE."

The Review, with a faith that moves mountains, or at least does canals, in its mind, still clings to the delusion that the government is in earnest this time in its intention to build that Trent Valley Canal. It has new light on the causes of Mr. Haggart's neglect to refer at the opera house meeting to the Trent Valley Canal. It asserts that Mr. Stevenson did not jog Mr. Haggart's memory respecting the canal—Mr. Stevenson merely told him that the train was half an hour late and that there was no need to cut his speech short. This is rubbish. Mr. Haggart was sailing along on the stream of eloquence quite serenely, knowing full well that he had only five minutes to speak in and yet no reference to the canal. If the train had not been half an hour late and Mr. Stevenson had not interfered, where would the canal have been? Such an absurd explanation would be an insult to the intelligence of an idiot. It is another example of Mr. Stevenson's well-known and transcendent ability to wriggle out of a tight place. Why, the Review itself does not believe its own yarn—nobody believes it and it is not the truth. The fact is the moment Mr. Stevenson got the note, he spoke to Mr. Haggart, and Mr. Haggart said that Mr. Stevenson wished him to talk canal, and at once he broke off his discourse and talked canal. Our contemporary blames us for being skeptical in the face of "practical evidence of the good faith and sincerity of the government" in regard to the construction of the canal. Who could be blamed for lack of faith? The repeated broken promises and utter failure of equally strong practical evidence of sincerity" in the past should shatter the confidence of even the Father of the Faithful himself. We have had "practical evidence" of the same kind as or about the period of every election for a dozen years past, and what has been the result? Delay and dawdling. If the government were in earnest, and had the least intention of constructing the canal, they could have done what they are promising to do now a dozen years ago. The surveys were all made and completed a dozen years ago. The government has boasted of surpluses which it could have devoted to the work. Now it has a deficit equal to the estimated cost of the completion of the canal, and after the tremendous fooling with the work to which the country has been treated, we are asked to believe that the government means business now. If they had meant business, and if the canal had the uppermost place in their minds, we now are asked to believe, would the government last session have devoted four millions in subsidies to wild-cat railways and only a few thousands to canal construction? We have had the same promises equally strong any time the past fifteen years. Nothing has come of them and nothing will come of them nor present assurances. We shall have the present flurry of simulated activity till after the elections and then canal chaos will come again. The EXAMINER is not alone in regarding the present canal activity as a "fake." The people see it and will act accordingly. The faith in the Government's promise is confined to a few heelers and enthusiasts who expect some sort of pull—political or otherwise—out of the circumstances. The "train half an hour late," indeed. Why, the canal can discount that—it is half a century late.

If our contemporary will consult Mrs. Moodie's "Roughing it in the Bush"—half a century ago—he will find that settlers were induced to select Lakefield in the hope that the Trent Valley Canal would make the location desirable, yet they have come and gone, hair has grown gray and daisies deck the graves of those who put their faith in such promises. Now that the EXAMINER has shown the government in their true light and that the workingmen and people of Peterborough are satisfied that their promises are buncombe, nothing will satisfy the people but the actual beginning of work and the 1,000 workmen that Mr. Stevenson promised four years ago with their coats off at work, before the election. Then we may think that business is meant. We have it on very good authority that what we may expect is new tenders advertised for and accepted, a week or so before the elections, workingmen informed that they may expect work; and then, after the polling, see work shut down as promptly as the Bridge Works were closed after the last election. The public memory is not short.

ROBERT MONCRIEF KILLED IN APSLEY.

A FALLING TREE GLANCES AND STRIKES HIM.

A Horrible Gash is Inflicted, but the Unfortunate Man Lives Until Morning—The Funeral Takes Place on Monday.

Mr. Robert Moncrief, of North Monaghan, Apsley, with his mother and two brothers, has been residing on the Howden farm, just outside the town limits, met with an accident yesterday of so serious a nature as to cause his death at an early [illegible].

Mr. Moncrief, with his brother, has been FELLING TIMBER IN APSLEY for some time past. Yesterday while chopping a big pine it lurched over and falling against another tree stuck fast in mid air. It was necessary, in order to bring the forest monarch to earth, to fell the tree which supported it. This the brothers started to do and after chopping through it stepped back to observe the result.

The larger tree in falling glanced off another and before Mr. Moncrief could change his position and save himself the and struck him a blow square in the crown of the head, inflicting a frightful gash extending from the forehead straight back to almost the nape of the neck. Another cut extended from the first incision down over the right temple and his right eye was also badly bruised. The force of the blow caused blood to spurt from the unfortunate man's ears, eyes, nose and mouth, and he at once lapsed into unconsciousness.

Assistance was immediately procured from a neighbouring farm house and prepared a soft bed for the injured man in the bottom of a sleigh. Before starting out on his trip home Mr. Moncrief recovered consciousness and asked for a pillow to be placed under his head. The mournful little party started for Peterborough via Burleigh, but when about a mile or two from Lakefield the injured man betrayed such that a halt was called and Mrs. Phelan kindly took the party in and made Mr. Moncrief as comfortable as possible. Dr. Fraser, of Lakefield, was summoned and arrived at Mrs. Phelan's at about five o'clock this morning, but before he reached the hotel, poor Moncrief had passed away.

ROUGH BUT KINDLY HANDS

SYMPTOMS OF AGONY

Early this morning the body was brought on into town and prepared for burial. The funeral will take place on Monday next.

The deceased was 27 years of age and was a fine young fellow who had many friends out in the township as well as in Peterborough. His death will be universally regretted.

THE PREMIER'S ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

He Sincerely Appreciates their Congratulations and Expressions of Esteem.

Mr. C. W. Sawers has received the following communication from the Premier in acknowledgment of a resolution of congratulation passed by the County Orange Lodge at its annual meeting recently:

PRIVY COUNCIL OFFICE,

DEAR MR. SAWERS,—I have your letter of the 8th inst.—signed also by other members of your Lodge—conveying to me a resolution passed by the West Peterborough County L. O. L. in relation to myself. Please assure the brethren that I sincerely appreciate their congratulations and sentiments of esteem. You may also say to them that I shall earnestly try to observe the advice they have given, and, in accordance with the aims and principles of the Orange Association, do justice to all classes and creeds in the Dominion. In doing this I feel sure that I shall not forfeit the valued confidence of our brethren throughout the country

Well and Stylishly Clothed in the Hard Times.

Thousands of women in Canada with very limited means have found the secret of dressing well and stylishly in their homes and for the streets.

These fortunate women have found out that, by spending ten cents for a package of one of the fashionable colours of Diamond Dyes, they can re-color an old and faded dress, and make it look like a new production. A lady recently informed us that she had not purchased new material for a dress in three years. This same lady is always neatly and prettily dressed, because she uses the Diamond Dyes. She has several old dresses and dyes each one twice a year, and produces as good colours with the Diamond Dyes as can be found in new goods. It is wonderful, indeed, the saving in dollars that can be effected by a judicious use of Diamond Dyes.

INSPECTOR GARVIN.

Mr. D'Alton McCarthy Will not Discuss the Questions of the Day With Him.

Mr. J. W. Garvin, has communicated with Mr. D'Alton McCarthy, who is announced to speak in Peterborough on Thursday evening next, asking for an opportunity to debate on that evening, on fair terms, the public questions of the day. Mr. McCarthy has replied, stating that he did not have any right to make any arrangements with reference to the Peterborough meeting, which was under the charge of the committee which had invited him to speak. He did not think it practicable, however, to allow Mr. Garvin the opportunity sought, as there were three other speakers, besides himself, announced to address the meeting. Mr. McCarthy has assumed the proper attitude in this matter. If Mr. Garvin desires, as he has a right to do, to meet Mr. McCarthy, he should make such arrangements as will not interfere with a programme already drawn up.

THE BAND OF SMITH SERIOUSLY ILL.

He Asks to Live Till Springtime Comes

The thousands of friends and admirers of Mr. Wm. Telford will be pained to learn that he is seriously ill, not having been out of the house for three weeks. At the last St. Andrew's supper it was noticed that Mr. Telford was in poor bodily health, though his mind was vigourous. Since that his ailment has increased in spite of tender nursing and medical skill. He is gravely troubled with an affection of the liver, severe indigestion, and dropsy. The last consultation of physicians resulted in little hope being held out of Mr. Telford's ultimate recovery. Up to to-day his condition shows no improvement. Mr. Telford is resigned to his affliction, but asks one favour from God—that he will spare him till the first of May—to see, as he expresses in the following lines, written to-day in his feeble hand:

Snow all melted; green blades peeping,
Early flowers spring beauty show,
Though I am in death sound sleeping,
Give me bird songs and not snow.

A Hasty Misquotation Punished.

Not long ago Edmund Russell drowned upon a certain Western city, and the Blanks gave a large reception. Among the plans for the entertainment of the guests was a scene from "Macbeth," rendered by a young woman of local elocutionary fame. The head of the family was not informed of this special part of the programme. At the proper moment the young woman personating Lady Macbeth appeared at the end of the drawing-room, dressed in a trailing robe of white and bearing a light. She moved slowly forward, and expectant hush falling upon the assemblage. The host looked up, saw and wholly misunderstood. He hesitated only a moment, then hastening forward with hospitable zeal:

"Why, Miss Smith, good evening; I'm very glad to see you. May I relieve you of your candle?"—Philadelphia Times.

Assessment System. CERTIFICATE OF OFFICIAL EXAMINATION BY FOUR STATES' INSURANCE DEPARTMENTS. Mutual Principle.

MUTUAL RESERVE FUND LIFE ASSOCIATION

OF NEW YORK CITY.

E. B. HARPER, President.

COMMISSIONER'S CERTIFICATE.

NEW YORK CITY, January 24, 1895.

WE, the Insurance Commissioners and Superintendents of the States of Illinois, Ohio, Texas and South Dakota, do hereby certify that we have been for the last two months engaged in an exhaustive and thorough examination of the books and accounts of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association and of all receipts and disbursements during the period extending from the 1st day of January, 1894, to the 13th day of November, 1894. We further certify that we have carefully checked and proved all items; that the loans on bond and mortgage have been checked and verified; that stocks and bonds have been accounted for through receipts held for deposits; that cash on hand has been counted, and that cash deposited with sundry banks has been proved by the books of said banks or by proper certificates therefrom; that the real estate has been valued upon the basis of net rentals and from information derived from reliable sources, and that the operations of the Association have been subjected to a thorough examination, in which every facility has been afforded us by the officers and managers, every book, record and source of information having been laid open to us without reservation.

We further certify that we find the Association possessed of admitted invested and non-invested assets on the said Nov. 13, 1894, to the amount of $4,228,120,93, and of contingent mortuary assets to the amount of $1,340,490,31, making gross assets as of said date to the amount of $5,568,611,24; that against said assets we have charged actual liabilities to the amount of $675,767,84 (including bonds, but not bond statements) and contingent mortuary liabilities to the amount of $1,175,041,32, making the surplus of the Association on basis of gross invested and non-invested assets $3,552,353,09, and on basis of gross assets (contingent mortuary assets and liabilities being included) $3,717,802,08.

We further certify that we have verified by a competent expert the value of the Association's interest in the building known as the Mutual Reserve Building, and that we are satisfied that its value is largely in excess of the amount at which it stands upon the Association's books. We further certify that we have made a careful examination of the death claims paid by the Association during the period covered by this examination, and that we are of the opinion that the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association pays its death claims honorably and promptly, and that it does not in any case wilfully attempt to resist payment of any honest death claim that is made upon it; and that the work of the death claim department is handled with all possible despatch and in such a way that the most critical can have no just cause or reasonable ground of complaint. While under the operation of the fundamental principle of the Association which calls for the collection after death of the sum required to pay a claim there may be some seeming delay, payment is just as sure as with any other Company or Association, which fact is fully established by our examination. We further certify that we have made a personal examination of the methods of the Medical Department, and feel warranted in saying that the utmost care is exercised in the selection of risks, and that in this respect the Association will compare favorably with any other life insurance company or association.

The financial statement furnishes abundant proof of the healthy and prosperous condition of the Association, and the gradually increasing assets show prudence and economy. The management, the public and the members are to be congratulated upon the solidity and security of the Association.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, we have hereunto subscribed our respective names, in the city of New York, the day and year above written.

ARTISTIC BATHROOMS.

THE BATTLES OF CARACALLA OUTDONE IN SPLENDOR AND RICHNESS.

Magnificent Appointments—Rich Marble and Mirrors—Delicate Accessories in Silver and Costly Porcelain Deemed Necessary.

Special New York Letter.

The time worn joke about Saturday night being bath night will have soon to disappear altogether even from the minstrel-vaudeville repertoire. Bathing and bathrooms are no longer a luxury, but a necessity for every one, and it is as much part of the daily routine of life to take a bath as it is to eat breakfast.

The fittings for bathrooms are quite in keeping with the other luxuries of our modern civilization, and extremely handsome and artistic, as well as useful, are they.

The sponge, while naturalists call upon us to admire its wonderful fashioning, is, to say the least, a very mundane object, but in these fin de siecle days its mundanity is relieved to a great extent. No longer is it suspended from the nearest faucet or some convenient nail by a string, or placed in what looks like an inverted filigree toast rack. It is placed in a broad, shallow silver dish, with a wooden bottom.

In every well regulated bathroom there is always a silver powder box, but of giant size, in which is fitted the immense powder puff, with silver top, which monsieur, no less than madame, considers necessary to use after the bath.

Many women prefer china to silver for their bathroom appointments, and dainty and beautiful in the extreme are many of the designs. The three cornered jar that fits on to the tub at the end is a great convenience and is really a thing of beauty, made as it is often of some valuable piece of china. Still with porcelain tub and silver pipes and faucets, the silver dishes harmonize most satisfactorily.

The beautiful bathrooms in many of the new private houses have been repeatedly described, and each new house has of course some new and some luxurious design to show, but there are two or three it would be difficult if not impossible to excel.

The bathroom in the W. K. Vanderbilt house opening off Mrs. Vanderbilt's room is all glass. Square bevelled mirrors, fitted into one another, form floor, walls and ceiling. The glaring effect is entirely transformed by the painting of a dogwood tree, which starts in one corner and spreads its branches, covered with blossoms, over the entire room. The tub is of white marble, a most perfect block. The ewers, basins and all appointments are of silver and cut glass. Nothing more luxurious or expensive could well be devised.

Cut glass ewers and basins are exceedingly handsome, but there are many beautiful designs in china, and in country houses these are much more desirable. The glass requires great care in the handling and the cleaning. Still, that is scarcely a point to be raised, as people who use such things have a corps of servants. Very handsome majolica basins and ewers in designs far removed from the ordinary are also possessed by some women having artistic tastes.

In these days of luxury it is very comforting to people of small means, who take the trouble to find out the way, to know that within their reach lie many of the luxuries supposed to be only for the very rich. A bathroom of bevelled mirrors, with marble tubs, or even tiles and porcelain tub, is something very few can attain to, but a most comfortable and satisfactory bathroom is quite within the possibilities of every one. Almost all houses now have the open plumbing, which includes a tub set on legs instead of being inclosed in a wooden coffin. This tub may be of any material, and by the use of white paint be transformed into a thing of beauty. The old iron pipes can also be transformed by this same paint. True, the paint does not wear as well as heart could wish, but it can always be removed at a very trifling expense. Blue and white linoleum, blue and white tile paper, a Japanese rug in blue and white, and a set of blue and white toilet china produce most satisfactory results.

The galvanized iron, enamelled with white paint, wash hand stand is a new fashion and a very good one. They are in accord with the open plumbing made without closet or drawer. They always look delightfully clean and fresh and are easily kept in order. If it were not for the veining it would be difficult at a distance to discover they were not made of marble. On them are used china or cut glass toilet sets, but the china is more suitable. The stands are extremely nice in the country, and a bedroom furnished with bedstead of enamelled iron and stand of this description, with handsome dressing table, is always delightful.

Nail brushes and tooth brushes have not kept pace with other things in the race for luxury. They are made with silver handles, but in the most luxuriously fitted up bathrooms are generally to be seen of very much the same pattern as the plainest.

A GREAT ENCHANTER.

THE WONDERS COMPOUND INTEREST WOULD DO WITH ONE PENNY.

Beginning A. D. 1, the Accumulation Would Yield Sixteen Golden Globes of the Size of the Earth to Every Person Now Living in the World.

If Adam had only lived until A.D. 1 and had then put out a cent at five per cent. compound interest, how frightfully rich in gold we might all be. In the Strand Magazine for January appears a remarkable article written by Mr. J. Holt Schooling, Fellow of the Royal Statistical Society of England, showing the wonderful accumulative powers of money at compound interest. The writer's attention was first drawn to the subject by the provisions of a will, and he began some computations, which led to the one which is made the basis of this article. It should be remembered that the English system of enumeration differs from ours, and that sextillions in England would be undecillions in this country. After reviewing his preliminary calculations, Mr. Schooling proceeds as follows:

The facts which cropped up began to astonish me, then caused golden dreams, and finally showed me how to become the universal benefactor of the world at a future date. At a date to be fixed by me, there shall be no more poverty, no more wretched struggles for money, no more warping and twisting of the good that is in us by desire for gold—I have found a mighty enchanter and magician, who shall work my will; his name is Compound Interest, and, unlike the alchemists of old, my magic servant requires for his crucible, not gold, not silver, not gems, but merely one penny. This amount, therefore, I propose to place in the hands of responsible trustees "in trust for investment, and to accumulate the income, by reinvestment at five per cent. compound interest for 1,000 years after the present date (1895), in trust for the population of the world, absolutely, for those that shall then be living." At the end of the time specified (A.D. 2895) there will be (approximately) 280,000,000,000 persons in the world, and as my penny will have then increased to £6,443,000,000,000,000,000, there will be for each person the comfortable present of 29,000,000 sterling (£29,286 304), and this result of making every one a millionaire will be achieved by me at a cost of one penny only.

And now let us see what this enchanter could have done for us of the nineteenth century had he been set to work 1,895 years ago with one dull penny to simmer and quicken in his magic pot for the ultimate benefit of the present population of the earth.

Wagner and Supan, the German statisticians, estimated in 1891 the population of the earth at 1,480,000,000 persons. As more than one-half of this estimated number was based upon the results of actual censuses, and as the remainder was very carefully arrived at, we shall not be far away from truth if we say that there are now (1895) 1,500,000,000 persons in the world.

If, in A.D. 1, a man had wished to be hailed in later centuries Universal Benefactor of the World, he could have achieved his wish by investing the equivalent of a modern penny at five per cent compound interest per annum, the interest to accumulate year by year for the benefit of future generations.

The wealth accumulated during the 1,895 years would have now been so immense that we shall find some little difficulty in realising the vast golden growth of this penny unless we press into our service various aids to imaginative conception, some of which I have endeavored to illustrate.

Imagine the earth conformed into a huge flat slab of gold, more that 509,000 miles square and one mile thick, and floating in space. Let every person—man, woman and child—now living in the world (1,500,000,000 persons) continually discharge a Maxim gun loaded with sovereigns instead of bullets for 1,000 years. Each gun fires into space 1,200 sovereigns per minute, which drop over the edges of the earth. At the end of 1,000 year's continuous discharge of sovereigns from 1,500,000,000 of Maxim guns upon an earth of gold, at the rate of 1,200 sovereigns per minute each gun, only an infinitesimal fraction of the money would have been shot into space out of the accumulated interest of One Penny invested at five per cent. compound interest in Anno Domini 1, and left to accumulate until Anno Domini 1895. This incredible result is no freak of fancy, but a solid fact. The cost of making an earth of solid gold, added to the cost of firing away all these sovereigns for 1,000 years, would exhaust only one twenty-five-thousand-millionth part of the money accumulated in 1895.

We have seen how futile would be this attempt made by each person in the world to get rid of his or her share in the vast accumulations of one penny. Let us have a game at throwing away bank notes instead of sovereigns, and see if we can then get along more effectively with the disposal of our individual wealth.

We will try a deluge of £1,000,000 bank notes for 1,000 years. Suppose the earth transformed into two vast rectangular blocks or gold, each (nearly) 11,000,000 miles long by three miles wide by eight miles thick. These two blocks of gold float side by side in space, with a great gulf eight miles deep separating them. Along both the inside edges of the entire edges of the entire length of this precipice stand the world's populat on (1,500,000,000 persons), and each second every person throws into this bottomless gulf a bundle consisting of 1,000 bank notes, each note being worth £1,000,000 sterling. At the end of this continuous deluge for 1,000 years, and including the cost of a golden earth, only one twelve-hundred-millionth part of the money would have been thrown away out of the accumulated interest of one penny invested at five per cent. compound interest in Anno Domini 1, and left to accumulate until Anno Domini 1895.

There is here a distinct improvement as regards the spending of money by each individual. Still, and despite the fact that every single person has been assumed to throw away 1,000,000 of pounds sterling once every second for the period of 1,000 years continuously, each of us would only have succeeded in getting rid of the very small fraction of our fortune which is represented by placing the figure 1 above a line and the figures 1,194,200,000 beneath the line.

Having so much money at our disposal, we shall scarcely be able to spend it on this earth even by such reckless extravagances as have been illustrated, so we will do a piece of astronomical engineering, and make a road to the sun. A road of gold from the earth to the sun may certainly claim to be the most expensive engineering project ever designed. The dimensions of this road of solid gold are 92,500,000 miles long, more than 8,333,333 miles thick. An express train traveling along this road at the rate of sixty miles an hour would not reach the sun until nearly 176 years after the date of departure from the earth. Some idea of the width and of the thickness of this golden road may be gathered from the statement that it would be more than 1,000 times as wide and as thick as the diameter of the earth (say 8,000 miles).

By making such a road as this, and of the dimensions given, we could exhaust the accumulated interest of one penny.

In 1882 a project was suggested to tap the force of Niagara by constructing turbines, or water wheels, and to transmit this force of falling water throughout the United States. The water power of Niagara was then estimated at 10,000,000 cubic feet of water fall per second, and the value of this utilized force was estimated at £300,000 a day. In 1889 the City of Buffalo contracted with the Niagara Power Company for 10,000 horse power at £30,000 per annum, to light the city and drive factories by a cable twenty miles in length from Niagara Falls to Buffalo City (here the writer is a little off in his facts)—we will make a golden Niagara, and see if we can thereby get rid of some of this superabundant wealth of ours.

Imagine a great mountain of gold, as large as the earth, with a Niagara of molten gold rushing over the precipice into space for 1,000,000,000 years continuously. During every second of this inconceivably long period, as many cubic feet of molten gold fall over the precipice as there are cubic feet of water stated to be falling over the real Niagara. At the end of 1,000,000,000 years' rushing of this golden Niagara, only a small fraction of the money would have been expended out of the accumulated interest of one penny invested at 5 per cent. compound interest in Anno Domini 1, and left to accumulate until Anno Domini 1895. In order to exhaust all this accumulated money it would be necessary to set at work 100,000,000 of golden Niagaras, on 100,000,000 of golden mountains, instead of only one mountain and one Niagara, and to extend the working period to more than 80,000,000,000 years of continuously rushing torrents of molten gold.

And now we come to the Dream of the Golden Earths. The procession of globes in space represents 25,000,000,000 of spheres made of solid gold, each one being equal to the earth in size. This number is sufficient to supply every living person in the world (1,5,000,000,000 persons) with more than 16 golden globes apiece, each one being as large as the earth. The value of all this gold—at one sovereign for 123.27447 grains troy—is equal to the value of the accumulated interest of one penny invested at five per cent. compound interest in Anno Domini 1, and left to accumulate until Anno Domini, 1895.

Here, then, is the culminating trick of the magician whose achievements have now been shown to us—he gives us sixteen earths apiece, and each one is made of solid gold! But, stay—if we all had so much gold, nobody would want any, and therefore all this vast wealth of ours would be as withered leaves for any value in it. A loaf of bread could not be bought even at the expenditure of a mass of gold equal in bulk to the size of England. A gold a continent would not buy a coat, and a horse would be worth more than one of our sixteen golden earths. We should all have so much gold, and yet be so poor withal, that we should indifferently and coldly regard our wealth—which would not be wealth, but poverty.

And so collapses the philanthropic scheme propounded early in this paper—for what would be the good of giving to every person living in A.D. 2895 the sum of £29,000,000 when, by so doing, gold would lose its value as a purchasing medium? Therefore, to carry out the scheme of endowing posterity with vast wealth would earn the universal execrations of mankind, and not their gratitude as at the first glance seemed probable.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you if it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's eldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Several years ago, I caught a severe cold, attended with a terrible cough that allowed me no rest, either day or night. The doctors, after working over me to the best of their ability, pronounced my case hopeless, and said they could do no more for me. A friend, learning of my trouble, sent me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which I began to take, and very soon I was greatly relieved. By the time I had used the whole bottle, I was completely cured. I have never had much of a cough since that time, and I firmly believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—W. H. MAKING SERMONS LAST.

There Are Tricks in All Trades, Even That of Preaching.

Once in a while a minister tricks his congregation into listening to the same sermon twice or more, and there lived in Chicago until a couple of years ago, says the Tribune of that city, a preacher who had reduced "sermon-lasting" to a regular system. First, he delivered a sermon entire; next, he transposed the minor portions, added a new text, and inserted several fresh anecdotes; and finally he returned to the original text, but evolved a fresh ending and introduced a poetical quotation or passage from some well-known religious author. By means of these tricks and careful tabulation he was only compelled to write a complete sermon once in three weeks, and even this labor was softened by the "item-box" which graced his study table. In this box he put any clippings which struck him as useful, whether verse, story or humorous skit, and he boasted, when found out, that it was his practice before writing a sermon to take from the stock the fragments which lay nearest the top and compose the sermon accordingly. As he was careful to preserve a semblance of deep study, and invariably allowed three months to elapse between two deliveries of the same sermon, he kept up the practice for many years, and might have done so indefinitely but for an accident which caused his principal vestryman to wait for him in the room where he had carelessly left his account book open on the table, together with the address he was about to remodel.

A near neighbor of his, a man noted for the fluency and brilliancy of his sermons and the perfect harmony which always existed between the subject for the day and the music rendered by the choir, played a trick upon his people week after week for a number of years and was never discovered. He, too, was lazy and disinclined to mental labor, and when, in the middle of the week, the choir director would ask for the subject of the following Sunday he would invariably answer that he had not decided. At the recent rehearsal the same thing would occur, and at last the poor, distressed leader fell into the habit of himself choosing the subject and arranging his part of the service in accordance. Just before the opening hymn he would send the pastor a slip of paper containing the text he was expected to preach from, and so satisfactory did this method prove that it was continued as long as the choirmaster remained with the church. Whether he patented this little scheme is not known, but when reference is made to it he shakes his head wisely and indulges in a cunning wink.

The Father of Icy Mountains.

The ascent has been made by Dr. Swen-Hedin of the Mus-tag-ata, the highest mountain in the chain of the Karakorim, in Central Asia. Dr. Swen-Hedin attempted the first ascent last April, but met with severe snowstorms at the height of more than 17,000 feet, and being afflicted with acute inflammation of the eyes was obliged to return to Kaschgar. On June 21 he started again, and after a march of eighteen days he reached the Mus-tag-ata, called the "Father of Icy Mountains," and with the help of the natives succeeded in making an ascent four times, but never reached the actual summit (more than 23,000 feet), but ascended almost to that point, and made a rich booty of scientific observations, making maps, taking photographs, sketches of glaciers, etc. Dr. Swen-Hedin employed four months on his tour and met, says the Vossische Zeitung, with innumerable dangers and interesting incidents. He will write a complete monograph on the Mus-tag-ata. During his journey Dr. Swen-Hedin passed a monument to Schlagintwert which was much damaged by a flood.

A Chance to Whack Up.

A curious advertisement appeared in some of the morning papers the other day to the effect that a one-legged man would hear something to his advantage by applying at a certain address. Though not one-legged myself, I called there and found the advertiser to be a Grand Army man who had lost a leg at Antietam. Questioned as to why he had inserted the advertisement which attracted my attention, he gave this explanation:

"My idea," he said, "is to find a man who has lost his leg. You notice that my right is gone. Now I pay $8 a pair for my shoes, and I wear about five pair a year. That makes $40. And besides that I wear a good many socks which also count up considerably.

"You can readily see that if I can find a man who has lost the other leg and wears the same size shoe that I do, we can whack up, and by buying our shoes together we would make considerable."—Haberdasher.

Caught in the Storm.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., Feb. 16.—Mrs. Sarah Robertson, aged 74, a widow of North Carleton, left here about a week ago for a neighbor's house. As she did not return her friends supposed she had remained owing to the storm. Search was made and the body was found near the house she had started for, where it had lain five days.

DASHED INTO THE RIVER.

A Fatal Wreck on the New York Central—The Driver Killed.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Feb. 16.—One of the worst wrecks that has occurred on the New York Central and Hudson river railroad in some time occurred about two miles north of Rhinebeck yesterday morning. Engine 371, drawing train 23, known as the American express train, which is due in this city at 8.37 a.m., smashed into a freight car and dashed into the river, carrying with it Engineer James Donohue, of New York, and Fireman Frank Green, of Catskill.

The Troy freight train, in charge of Charles Gardner, left this city at the usual time early Friday morning with two engines. The extra engine was put on on account of the partial disability of the other engine. The train consisted of 20 cars and left Rhinebeck a few minutes before 8 o'clock. When it reached about two miles north of Rhinebeck station, near Garrison's tunnel, it came to a sudden standstill. Upon making an investigation it was found that a freight car had left the track and bounded over the southbound track.

The horrible thought flashed through the minds of the train crew that the fast mail and express train must be along soon and in fact was already about 14 minutes late. No sooner had the train been thought of than it was seen thundering over the rails and a collision was inevitable. There was a terrible crash. The engine attached to the fast train left the track with two express cars, ran along the bank of the river on the ties and then toppled over upon the ice.

The crew on the freight train began the work of searching for the people in the wreckage. Fireman Charles Green was found on his bench in an unconscious condition. His head was badly cut and his clothes covered with blood.

When Conductor Gardner found Fireman Green and carried him into the car he found Donohue there badly injured. He and Green were brought to this city as quickly as possible and removed to the Vassar Hospital where Donohue died about 10.30 last night.

The actual cause of the accident is not known. Engineer James Donohue was considered the most fortunate and nerviest engineer on the road. He manned the engine which crashed into the passenger train at Hastings on a Christmas eve three years ago when so many were killed. It was his engine that ran half way through a passenger coach a Tarrytown and he was also engineer of the engine which ran into the river at Scarborough a year ago. In none of these accidents was he injured

Trade in the Dominion.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—More moderate weather in the Province of Ontario has stimulated a better feeling among merchants there, and anticipations are brighter as to the outlook for spring trade. The like is true at Montreal, with the exception that less stress is placed on the probability as to the future of business. In Nova Scotia general trade has been unsettled by the character of the weather. Bank clearings at Winnipeg, Hamilton, Montreal and Halifax aggregate $15,568,000 this week compared with $19,669,000 a week ago, and with $15,167,000 a year ago. The total number of business failures reported from Canada in the past week is 39 compared with 51 last week, 47 in the week a year ago and 44 two years ago.

To Build a Magnificent Church.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 16.—The Queen's avenue people will rebuild at once. A joint conference of the trustee and quarterly boards was held to take measures looking towards rebuilding. It was decided to build on the old site a church and lecture hall or school room which will be an ornament to the locality and a credit to the city. Leading members of the joint boards subscribed at once from $16,000 to $20,000 towards that object, and this action was supplemented by the appointment of a committee who will make all necessary arrangements for building, and also raising funds to meet the exigencies.

Germany's Anti-Socialist Bill.

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—The special parliamentary commission of 28 has adopted paragraph 112 of the anti-socialist bill. The paragraph provides for the punishment of persons spreading seditious doctrines in the army. It was amended in the commission on the motion of the Clericals so as to apply only to promoters of socialism and anarchism.

Australasian Federation.

BRISBANE, Queensland, Feb. 16.—The Premier of Queensland said in an interview yesterday that the Sydney convention bill would be the basis of the federation arrangement. Everything depended upon the attitude of New South Wales. It would be ridiculous for Queensland to join any federation not including New South Wales.

To Die in the Electric Chair.

ROCHESTER, Feb. 16.—William Lake, who has been on trial at Albion for the brutal murder of Emma Hunt, a young girl with whom he was in love, but who rejected him, was found guilty of murder in the first degree by the jury last night and was sentenced to pay the death penalty in the electric chair at Auburn prison during the week commencing Monday, April 1.

Patron Nominated in East Bruce.

WALKERTON, Ont., Feb. 16.—A meeting of the Patrons of East Bruce was held here yesterday for the purpose of selecting a candidate to contest the riding at the next election for the House of Commons. Their choice fell upon Mr. James Tolton, of Brant, a prominent farmer, and formerly warden of the county. Mr. Tolton is at present president of the Conservative Association of East Bruce and has hitherto been an active supporter of Mr. Cargill, the member for the riding. Mr. Tolton has taken a week to consider the nomination of the Patrons.

A Priest Sentenced to Four Months.

QUEBEC, Feb. 16.—A Catholic priest named Paquet was condemned to four months' imprisonment for vagrancy and obtaining money under false pretences. Recorder Dery administered a very severe reprimand to the unfortunate clergyman. One of the priest's victims is Councillor Gignacy, of St. Roch Ward.

Well-Known Horseman Dead.

Unsuspected Dangers.

That is What we all Suffer The Most From.

AND KNOW THE LEAST ABOUT

The Experience of Many Reputable People.

There are men, and women too, who are suffering with dull and indefinite pains in various parts of the body, who feel unaccountably weary, who are often feverish, have loss of appetite, strange bearing down sensations, general feelings of melancholy and who do not know the reason.

It is surprising how much these troubles are increasing, and it is marvelous that so few people know what they mean. There is but one cause for all these things and that is—disordered Kidneys. All these troubles are the first symptoms of Bright's disease of the kidneys, which, unless promptly checked, is certain to result in serious sickness or death. There is nothing so little understood, yet so dangerous, as this great modern disease. It attacks people in all walks of life, steals upon them unawares, and fixes itself upon the life before its presence is realized.

It is fortunate that medical and chemical science has discovered a remedy for this great modern monster. Any man or woman suffering from the first symptoms of Bright's disease can positively be relieved of these symptoms and restored to perfect health by acting promptly and taking the right remedy in time. There is but one certain cure for all these troubles and that is Warner's SAFE Cure. This is not an idle statement, but one which has been tested and proven in the experience of thousands of sufferers in both continents. Testimonials innumerable to this effect could be given.

MRS. WM. COSGROVE, Hamilton, Ont. "About two years ago I was a victim to a very malignant form of kidney disease. I was completely prostrated and gradually growing worse. The physician in attendance held out no hope whatever, and I felt myself that my days were few. Happily a friend recommended Warner's Safe Cure to my husband, who insisted on my giving it a trial, as I had lost faith in all medicine. After using about half the bottle, I felt such a decided change that I kept on using it until I finished eight bottles, which effected an entire cure. Therefore, it gives me great pleasure to recommend Warner's Safe Cure to sufferers of kidney disease.

E. C. CLENDENAN, Proprietor of the Lindsay, Ont., Livery Stables. "I can tell the same wonderful story, "Cured by Warner's Safe Cure when everything else failed." I am most glad to recommend it, for it saved my life."

JOHN A. MORTON, Hardware dealer, Chatham, Ont. "I had doctored and tried almost every remedy without success, this was my condition when I began taking Warner's Safe Cure for my Kidneys. There seemed no help for me, but Warner's Safe Cure saved me." pc.

DIRT!

Your watch needs cleaning and oiling, once every eighteen months if you would preserve its time-keeping qualities. Consider: in that time the balance wheel turns on its delicate axes 13,986,000, 000 times. It does not "rest" at night like ordinary machines, but keeps at its work unceasingly You oil an engine, or a sewing machine, or any other mechanical contrivance, daily or weekly; but that delicate instrument of precision—your watch—is allowed to go uncared for until it is clogged with dirt, and stops. The best of oil becomes thick and dirty in time; in this condition it wears the pivots and destroys that exactness of their fit in the jewel-holes which is necessary to a correct performance

Let me look at your watch—I will give you a conscientious opinion as to whether it needs attention.

TOTTENHAM'S TRAGEDY

Farmer Newbury, Aged 75, Shot His Wife, Niece and Suicided.

THE FORMER DIES INSTANTLY

His Niece, it is Thought, Though Badly Wounded, Will Recover—Ill-Health and Melancholia the Reason Assigned for the Man's Terrible Deed.

TOTTENHAM, Ont. Feb. 18.—Robert Newbury, a retired farmer, on Saturday shot his wife and her niece and then blew out his own brains. The wife is dead, but the niece will recover.

Newbury was a man of 75. The murdered woman was his second wife, and his junior by thirty years. For some time past he has been in ill-health, and at times melancholic. On Saturday he seemed absorbed and depressed, and followed his wife around as she went about her household duties. Mrs. Newbury was arranging clothes in a bedroom bureau when Newbury entered the room and took deliberate aim and shot her. The ball entered the back of the head, ploughed through the brain, passed out of the forehead and embedded itself in the wall. The woman must have dropped to the floor dead instantly.

His niece, alarmed at the shot, went to see what was the matter. Newbury met her, and seeing the revolver in his hand, the girl ran into the garden. Newbury followed; the girl turned and piteously pleaded with the now thoroughly crazed man not to kill her. Tears and plaintive entreaties had no effect, and the wife-murderer put a ball into his niece's body. The shot took effect in the lip, embedding itself against the jaw bone.

Newbury then re-entered the house, closed the door, then placing the revolver to his temple, blew out his brains. He was found a minute later by neighbors, who had heard the shooting; he was then alive, but expired within half an hour.

The tragedy was evidently premeditated, for on Friday evening Newbury had given his watch to a friend, with instructions to keep it until he would call for it. The murder would have been committed at an earlier hour had not a neighbor called on Mrs. Newbury after breakfast, and remained until a few minutes prior to the shooting.

The niece was attended by Drs. Wright and Campbell, and unless blood poisoning sets in no fears of her life are entertained.

THE HYAMS CASE.

Post-Mortem Examination Difficult Owing to the Condition of the Remains.

TORONTO, Feb. 18.—The post-mortem examination on the body of William C. Wells, who is supposed to have been murdered by the Hyams brothers, was held on Saturday, but owing to the length of time which has elapsed since the young man's death the remains are in such a condition that an examination is difficult. Nothing developed from the preliminary operation to show what injuries the young man received. A thorough investigation will therefore take some time. In the meantime the authorities are working steadily on the case and gathering together all the clues possible that may throw some light on what is now generally conceded to be at least a decidedly suspicious case.

Constable Bissonette, of Montreal, is in the city with a warrant for the arrest of Harry P. Hyams on a charge of forgery. This will be served on him in the event of the brothers being acquitted of the charge of murder. A suit against Dallas T. Hyams for $ '00, balance due on a pair of diamond earrings, has been instituted by J. E. Ellis & Co.

Skaters Have a Narrow Escape.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Sixteen men and boys, who were skating on Lake Michigan far towards the Four Mile crib, narrowly escaped being drowned by the parting of the ice. They were three miles from shore when a strong wind detached a large section of ice and the imperilled skaters drifted lakeward. A fisherman who happened to be near succeeded in getting all the skaters across the widening breach of water.

Another Big Strike.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18. Another strike is expected to take place to-day when some 1,200 electrical workers will stop work. The men are members of the Knights of Labor. They demand that eight hours shall constitute a day's work instead of nine as heretofore. Both sides are determined and the result may be one of the biggest strikes that has ever taken place in the building trades of this city.

SMASH-UP IN OKLAHOMA

A Train Loaded With Excursionists Collides With a Freight.

THE LATTER'S DRIVER KILLED

Two Others Receive Injuries Which Will Prove Fatal—Many Passengers Injured and Seventy Head of Cattle on the Stock Train Killed.

GUTHRIE, Ok., Feb. 18.—Through a misunderstanding of orders the Southbound Galveston express on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad heavily loaded with day excursionists and a north-bound live-stock extra collided at 11.45 o'clock last night while rounding a curve five miles south of Guthrie. One man was instantly killed, two fatally injured and 18 received serious wounds. The dead man is Chas. Uppleby, of Topeka, freight engineer.

Engineer Uppleby of the stock train had orders to stop at Seward, three miles south of the wreck, to allow the passenger to pass, and it probably will never be known why the orders were not obeyed. The trains met in a deep cut in a bend of the Cottonwood river.

Passenger Engineer Frey saw a shower of sparks thrown into the air across the bluff near the end of the curve. He realized in an instant the sparks were from another engine and reversing his machine he leaped into the darkness against the side of the cut, calling to his fireman to jump also, but before the latter could comply the extra came around the curve at the rate of forty miles an hour and the two engines came together in a terrible crash and were buried into each other one third of their length. A dozen freight cars piled into a heap and the baggage, express and mail cars of the passenger train were completely telescoped. The passenger coaches remained on the track but many of the Texas steers on the stock train breaking loose from the wreckage plunged into the darkness, making it dangerous for any one to venture out to assist the injuried.

Buried beneath the engines and crushed to death was Freight Engineer Chas. Uppleby. Lying beside his engine terribly burned and scalded was Passenger Fireman Patrick Coldron, who was picked up for dead, but after hours revived and now lies suffering terribly but with no chance to live.

Many passengers were badly bruised and cut by broken glass but none injured fatally. The injured were brought to this city. Seventy head of cattle were killed. The loss to the railroad company will exceed $50,000.

COLLIDED WITH A TROLLEY.

A Crossing Accident Resulting in the Death of a Woman.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 18.—Last evening the Cumberland express on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, bound for Pittsburg, collided with a second avenue electric car at a crossing near Rankin station. There were eight passengers on the car. All escaped but Annie Kosak, a Slav woman, aged 18, who was instantly killed. She had just arrived from Hungary and in a few minutes would have been with her waiting parents at Braddock. The crossing was not guarded.

Wreck on the Santa Fe Road.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 18.—A passenger train on the Santa Fe road was wrecked near Pittsburg, Kas., and eight passengers injured. They are: Sheriff Hiram Adsit, of Pittsburg, both legs broken and badly bruised; George Davis, leg crushed; Jos. Ennis, leg broken and injured internally; Miss Bertha Garver, side lacerated; Fred. C. Ramsey, conductor, injured internally; Mrs. Dr. Johnson and son, badly bruised; Miss Laura James, leg and both arms broken. The wreck occurred at the crossing of the Missouri Pacific and was caused by a mistake in signals.

WOMEN AT WASHINGTON.

A Great Gathering of Female Workers of the United States.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—To-day witnesses the beginning in this city of the greatest gathering of representative women ever held and Washington hotels and boarding houses are filled with those who will be in attendance. The second triennial session of the National Council of Women of the United States is the name of the convocation and it includes all the national organizations of a peculiarly feminine character. Every sphere of female effort will be represented.

The organizations which have sent delegates have a membership estimated at between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 women.

The president of the National Council is Mrs. May Wright Sewall, of Indianapolis, who has declined re-election, and wants Mrs. Rachael F. Avery, the corresponding secretary, to be elected as her successor. The other officers are Francis E. Bagley, Vice-President; Lillian M. N. Stevens, Treasurer; and Isabella Charles Davis, Recording Secretary.

Many women of national and international reputation are in attendance, among them the Countess of Aberdeen and Lady Henry Somerset.

Supposed to Have Foundered.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The steamer City of St. Augustine which sailed from Jacksonville, February 2, for this port is now eleven days overdue. The ship Constance which arrived from Dunkirk reports that on February 11 when 220 miles south east of Sandy Hook she passed through large quantities of new pitch pine lumber, railroad ties and square timber covering the surface of the sea for miles. The fact that the City of St. Augustine's cargo was identical with the material reported afloat in such large quantities goes far to strengthen the theory that the missing steamer has foundered.

Doctors recommend Norway Pine Syrup because it is the best cure for coughs and colds. Price 25c. at druggists.

PEACE IN IRISH RANKS

The Warring Factions United Once More in the Common Cause.

ROSEBERY CONSIDERED SAFE

Unionists Create a Dangerous Impression by Their Temporary Alliance With the Redmondites—Salisbury's Speech to the Loyal Irish Society.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The debate on the amendment which Mr. Chamberlain introduced in the House of Commons, scoring the Government for frittering away the time of Parliament in the consideration of measures which the ministry has no expectation of passing, while other vitally important matters requiring the immediate attention of the House as affecting the whole country, are thrust into the background, has lost its practical interest in view of the ascertained fact that the virtually fixed majority of the Government in the House is now about 18. The ministerialists feel assured that if an unceasing watch is kept upon the rank and file to guard against surprise divisions a business session can be proceeded with until the anti-Lords resolution shall wind up the present Parliament. The position of the Government, too, may be further strengthened by the Parnellite vote, if the Irish Land bill shall be in any degree satisfactory. Apart from the grudging support which has been given by the Parnellites to the Opposition, the appeals of Archbishops Croke and Walsh for unity on the part of the Irish against the common political foe, has influenced the Parnellite faction to a feudal spirit, which certainly must induce them to forget their local grievances and rally in support of the main wing of the party.

Chamberlain's Speech a Disappointment.

It is generally believed that the Government will escape defeat on the chief Opposition amendment to the address in reply to the Queen's speech when the vote is taken to-day or to-morrow. The report is being circulated that the ministers will resign if the majority falls below ten, but this is probably a device of the whips to secure a full attendance. Defeat, when it comes, is more likely to be upon some minor measure. The majority is so narrow that the exigencies of illness caused by the severe weather would be alone sufficient to cause it to disappear despite the best pairing arrangements. Mr. Chamberlain's speech in support of the Opposition amendment was a distinct disappointment to his friends. It lacked both the keenness and the bitterness which were expected. Asquith, on the other hand, quite surpassed himself. He was more sarcastic, more impudent and more savage than the great Liberal Unionist who is supposed to be the greatest master of these qualities in debate.

The Parnellites.

The Unionists committed a bad blunder in joining hands with the Redmondites, as the impression has been created in the country that a secret treaty exists between Redmond and the Unionist leaders. There is none, however. If Redmond brings the Unionists back to power, they will return absolutely unpledged to any reform for Ireland. Mr. Balfour has even refused to entertain a proposal that he promise not to revive coercion in Ireland if he gets back to power. The efforts of the Redmondites to defeat the Government are purely factious. They will lose three seats at the next election and will have only six members in the next parliament.

The Anti-Parnellites.

The anti-Parnellites are modifying their methods, as instanced in a meeting of its members, at which a vote of condolence with the family of the late Eugene Kelly was passed. This action showed conclusively that there was a growing feeling of harmony among the members of the factions of the Irish party, and the subsequent cordial conversation of the leading, as well as the minor members of the respective groups, attended the establishment of a better feeling, if not absolute entente.

Salisbury's Speech to the Irish Loyalists.

Lord Salisbury spoke at length on current politics on Saturday evening at the inaugural dinner of the Irish Loyalist club at the Hotel Metropole. What had happened in Irish National politics before, he said, was now happening again. When the first enthusiasm of any movement passed away when the agitators were removed or the friends grew less the Irish party was split by hopeless divisions which resulted in weakness and discouragement. On the other hand the Unionists were stronger than ever. He regretted that there was in England no special machinery such as had given stability to the American constitution for the obtaining opinion of the nation on proposals to alter the constitution. England's only means of obtaining the country's opinion lay in dissolution of Parliament on a particular issue. This course the ministers declined to adopt. They had introduced many measures having nothing on earth to do with home rule. Despite all pretensions it was a fact that home rule was kept in the Ministerial programme merely for the purpose of confusing the electors. For the present the Union was protected by the veto power of the Lords, for the Upper House was not crazy enough to pay any attention to an appeal to the people which was conceived in such a fashion. If the question should be put squarely and openly to Great Britain and the electors should vote deliberately in favor of home rule, it was reasonably certain that the Lords would not resist the execution of the verdict. It would not be their function under such conditions to do so.

The Railroad in Uganda.

The scheme for constructing a railroad from the east coast of Africa to Uganda, England's new possession in the centre of the Dark Continent, was the subject of debate in the House of Lords on Thursday and doubtless will be heard of in the Commons very soon.

CONSERVATIVE ARGUMENTS.

"Vote for Guillet and get a railway"—Conservative placard in Cobourg during the West Northumberland bye-election in 1892.

"The county of Pontiac cannot reasonably expect favours from a government if it arrays itself in opposition.'—John Bryson, Conservative candidate in Pontiac bye-election in 1892.

"We do not propose to deceive the people, nor to hold out to them false hopes. Our success just now depends upon sending to Ottawa a representative friendly to the Government, so that the charter for the new road may be extended and the additional subsidy granted, which will in all human probability secure its construction."—Cobourg Sentinel-Star, Conservative, in support of Guillett in the West Northumberland bye-election in 1892.

"It is useless to mince matters, but it is only from the Conservative party that the people of Moncton can look with any degree of expectancy that money will be taken out of the revenue of the country to be spent to the advantage of the country.'—Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper at Moncton, 1894.

"I think it is quite time for the people of this country to demand a radical change in their representatives. Then we would have good reason to believe we would get the consideration from the Government to which we are justly entitled and which our needs require."—J. C. Forbes, Conservative candidate, to the electors of Guysborough, 1894.

"We cannot do everything at once, but as regards the principles upon which these appropriations were made, I would answer that the Government follows the same rule that determines the action of individuals. If any of you had a legacy left to divide among the people you would most naturally begin with your friends." Hon. J. A. Ouimet to the electors of Guysborough, 1894.

"Let the people of Goderich ask themselves whether Mr. Patterson or Mr. Cameron is most likely to secure the extensive and permanent improvements desired at this port."—Goderich Star, Cons., in West Huron bye-election, 1892.

"The town of Welland does want favours; it wants a post office building; and it wants a new canal bridge on a line with Main street, which it may have good hopes of securing if the county sends to Ottawa a Government representative. Niagara Falls wants improved post office regulations; and nearly every municipality in the County is wishing for improvements within the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government. In the face of these facts it is hardly likely that the people will be so foolish and short sighted as to elect an Opposition representative.—Welland Telegraph, Con., in Welland bye-election of 1892.

"No elector who supported Mr. Fairbairn before has any reasonable grounds to withdraw that support from him now because a subsidy was not granted last session. Mr. Fairbairn has the assurance of the Premier that the road will be one of the very first to receive a subsidy."—Hon. John Costigan in the South Victoria bye-election, 1892.

"The Pontypool and Bobcaygeon Railway has not been forgotten; in fact the parties were distinctly told last session that it should be one of the first railways to receive favourable consideration."—Sir Mackenzie Bowell to the electors of North Victoria at the 1892 bye-election.

"Kingston, March 3rd, 1891.

Trent Valley Canal Commissioners having reported favourably on the completion of the scheme, Parliament will be asked in the estimates for a grant for the purpose."

JOHN A. MACDONALD."

Sir John Macdonald's telegram to Mr. Stevenson two days before the general election of 1891.

Dr. Montague, at the recent Opera House meeting, was inclined to make merry over the alleged struggle between Sir Richard Cartwright and Mr. Janes for the nomination for South Oxford. But Dr. Montague or the Review for him might tell the public how Hon. Geo. E. Foster has been forced to resign his old constituency and seek refuge in a safer one. Chickens have a way of coming home to roost.

HON. DAVID MILLS was unanimously nominated by the Liberals of Bothwell on Friday. In accepting the nomination he referred to his 23 consecutive years in Parliament, broken only once by a partisan returning officer, who gave the seat to the minority candidate.

WHEN Hon. J. C. Patterson spoke of keeping the Liberals out with ballots and bullets, it may be that he was thinking of bullet heads.—Hamilton Herald.

HARVEY LUMBERMEN IN THE STORM.

A Perilous Trip Between Bobcaygeon and Lindsay—Narrowly Prostitution.

On Friday of last week Sadler's lumber camp in Harvey township broke up, the season's cut being completed, and despite the blizzard then raging, and the extremely cold weather, a number of the men set out for Lindsay with seven or eight teams, so as to be home for Sunday. Some of the drivers decided to try the lake route from Bobcaygeon, while the others held to the main road leading through Dunsford.

After breaking a way through the drifts for several miles, the drivers of four of the teams decided to return to Bobcaygeon, but the others persevered in their intention to push on. Their experience proved a terrible one—drifts four and five feet in height were constantly being encountered, and the labour of burrowing a passage through these utterly exhausted both men and horses. All suffered greatly from the cold, and J. McMann, of Lindsay, was so badly frozen that he had to be left at a farm house. The other members of the party, including Messrs. C. Gregory, W. Elliott and E. Burke, also of Lindsay, pushed slowly on, and after enduring great hardships reached that town Saturday, having spent the night at Dunsford.

All of them were suffering from frost bites—some having hands, face and feet badly frozen. J. Kent and several others who had decided to drive up the lake, also had a rough time of it. Coming on dark they managed to make their way to a farm house in a half famished condition, but upon requesting shelter for the night they were told that they might remain upon payment of $1 each. Indignant at the attempt to extort money from them when a Christian would hardly drive a dog from his door, they turned back from the lake and again headed for Lindsay, but lost their way owing to the pelting storm, and were compelled to drive about aimlessly till daylight, the men taking turns in running beside the sleigh and slapping and buffeting each other to keep from sinking into the sleep that knows no waking. When morning dawned they were in the neighbourhood of Pleasant Point, and they reached Lindsay about 10 o'clock, encrusted with snow and ice, and with feet, noses and fingers badly frozen.

A TRIBUTE.

Dedicated to Mrs. Elizabeth Steele, 476 Park street, town, in memory of the late Miss Catharine Steele:

'Mid winter snows a patient suffering one,
Who lov'd her God, and sought to know His truth,
Turns from life's throng to join the silent one.
That soul, loyal to Him in all the path,
Shrinks not to face the foe—victorious,
The Captain pass'd before, lighting the way—
Its roughness smoothing."

Tired eyelids close;
Nor hear a greeting to this fairy scene,
Painted by peerless skill, when rosy morn
Her gate unfolds—tinging the pure azure
With pink. Rare canopy above the snow!

Yet other "Morn" will rise, when glad Springtide,
Of all the years unlocks the lowly graves;
Yea hushes evermore all sighing;
Wipes off the tears and stills the crying.†

Frail words refuse their duty,
For eye, nor ear nor thought
Has seen, or has it, or brought
To finite mind the beauty
Of the unfolding Plan,
Which "Time's" great cycles span.‡

Then life is worth the living,
Though dimm'd, betimes, with pain,
Omnipotence is reigning,
And brings to earth again
(Although at matchless cost),
The jewels that were lost.‖

Probation time is closing;
The trial time is Now!
The "night" is surely coming
When hand, nor heart, nor brow
Can loyalty avow;
Sure time, alone, is Now.*

The loads that life will gather,
The shades that lower and frown,
To our benignant Father,
We bring and lay them down;
His pledge is sure and strong,
Through all the watches long.‡

When "morn" shall gild the mountain
And "spring" its petals ope,
Behold, through Christ, the Fountain,
Fruition of all hope!
So brilliant stars entwine
This fleeting trial time."†

MRS. JOHN DOWLY.

One Case Out of Many, Showing the Value of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

LEITH, Ont., Feb. 18—Mrs. John Dowly of this place, after suffering for several years from kidney diseases, has been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills. If any doubts existed in the minds of the public regarding the value of this remedy, they are now dispelled, particularly in this neighborhood. Mrs. Dowly's case is one of many that might be cited here showing the great value of Dodd's Kidney Pills as a cure for kidney diseases. They seem to be the principal topic of conversation on all sides.

Jules D'Estimanville Clement writes from Montreal: "I was suffering from skin disease, and after all drugs failed tried Burdock Blood Bitters, of which three bottles restored me to good health. I recommend it also for dyspepsia."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

GRAVE TIMES IN TURKEY.

The Armenian Question Causes Great Anxiety in the Sultan's Domains.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—The Sun's London correspondent says: All sources of information in Constantinople and other places in the Sultan's domain agree that the situation throughout the Turkish empire warrants the gravest anxiety. The principal cause without doubt is the Armenian question. Business in many places in the interior of Asia minor is almost entirely suspended. Merchants in the capital are afraid to send goods into the interior.

In spite of every effort to prevent news from reaching the capital it trickles in. Traders hear of long strings of prisoners marched into Syria and elsewhere in irons. Dozens of Armenian merchants are in prison. The prisons are full. Turks are allowed to threaten Armenians with impunity everywhere. Most significant and dangerous of all is the wild stuff Turkish papers are allowed to print with the object of exciting ignorant Mohammedan masses into hatred of Christians. It requires only a spark to set fire to the tinder of fanaticism throughout Turkey and it is evident that the Government already repents its tolerance in this respect.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 18.—The commission sent to investigate the Armenian outrages is still at Moosh. The Europeans wished to visit the villages in the neighborhood but the authorities declined to let them, saying that the foreign delegates were entitled to watch the proceedings but not to collect evidence.

CHINESE TROOPS REPULSED.

Attempt to Take Hai-Cheng—At Wei-Hai-Wei—Ting's Suicide Again Confirmed.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The Central News correspondent in Tokio telegraphs under Saturday's date: Gen. Nodzu reports that to-day the Chinese forces under Generals Chang and Yih were concentrated at Hai-Cheng from the Liao-Yang, Chwang and Yiakas roads. They attacked the city, but after suffering heavy losses were repulsed. The Japanese losses were small.

On February 14, in the afternoon, Marshal Oyama reported on the state of affairs at Wei-Hai-Wei. He said that a proposal had been tendered to the Japanese flagship Matsusima to surrender the warships and the remaining forts and their armament at Wei-Hai-Wei provided that the foreigners of the military and naval forces be released under a guarantee obtained from an admiral of a neutral power. The Japanese accepted all the conditions except the one concerning the guarantee, and the agreement was concluded. Marshal Oyama confirms the former report of the suicides of Admiral Ting, Commodore Liu and Gen. Chang.

SHOULD HAVE ANOTHER LESSON.

The Young Khedive Again Shows a Disposition to Aggravate Great Britain.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The Times correspondent in Cairo says: "The Khedive is determined to get rid of the present ministry and render impossible the existence of any ministry working loyally with England. The Khedive is deaf to all advice from men of position and experience, but he is ready to listen to every idle tale from flatterers. He gives alarming proofs of his unfitness to discharge the duties of a ruler of Egypt. He is largely influenced by the Journal Egyptien, which openly promises him the armed support of the whole French nation in case of need. The interests of England require that the Khedive's desperate course should be arrested with a firm hand. This can only be done by a stormer lesson than any yet received."

Sports Arrested by Wholesale.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Con Doyle, a local lightweight who fought Tommy Ryan twice, was to have met William Moore, of Detroit, on Saturday night for a purse of $250, but the police declared the affair off before a blow had been struck. Four hundred men had gathered in a room on the top floor of a building at Franklin and South Water streets. Just as the principals took their seats in the ring Sergeant Broderick, at the head of a squad of detectives, appeared. The officers barred the only means of egress and the sports were compelled to submit to arrest. It took two hours and all the waggons in the down town district to convey the sports to the police station. A number of prominent politicians were among the prisoners.

More Bodies from the Elbe.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—The dead body of a man wearing a life-belt from the steamship Elbe was washed ashore at Kingstown near Dover on Saturday. It was dressed in the uniform of a petty officer of the North German Lloyd line and the shirt bore the initials "F. J." The man apparently was about 40 years old. The body of Wilhelm Murst, a fireman on the steamship Elbe, was brought ashore at Deal yesterday. A life-belt was fastened to it. An Elbe mail bag was found near by. The seal, which was intact, bore the mark "Newspapers, Bremen for Chicago." Two oars and several life-belts from the Elbe came ashore about two miles from Deal.

Riot Among Drunken Miners.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 18.—The mining village of Midvale was the scene of a riot on Saturday night. It was payday at the mines, and Huns, Slavs and Poles drank freely. During the night the Slavs and Poles engaged in a pitched battle in the saloon of Michael Canfield. The Poles drove the Slavs from the place and then assaulted the proprietor. They wrecked everything in the place and carried the stock out into the street where they broke it open. The proprietor says it contained over $1,000. Eight men were seriously wounded in the fight. John Molenski it is believed will die.

The Denver Strangler Rearrested.

DENVER, Feb. 18.—Richard Deniry, the Frenchman charged with the murder of Lena Tapper, his mistress, who was strangled to death last October, was rearrested. Damady was indicted by the grand jury some time ago but was released on $15,000 bonds. It is said new evidence has been found against him. The strangling of Lena Tapper was the first of three murders committed by that means which caused great excitement in Denver.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT

COUNTRY ROADS.

An Old Roadmaster on the Conditions for Their Homebuilding.

The building and care of roads by the localities themselves, the right of abutting property owners to the centre line of the road, subject to an easement for public purposes, and the moral responsibility involved by such ownership, have important social aspects.

The making and care of a road under present local methods is founded upon road district patriotism. Its mechanism involves Godlike doing for others; while the slough holes, pit fall sluices and stone "jounces" from the stony heart of an unkempt road, epitomize practical infidelity. Broad ideas, willing hands, and love of one's neighbor as one's self are supplementary to good neighborhood road building; these given, needed appliances will be forthcoming, and the perfect road emerge from pre existent imperfections. In short, spirit controls matter, and "what spirit ye are of" will determine the character of the roads in any locality.

If the spirit is for the road, then one of the first necessities is a good four-wheel road machine. These machines are usually bought by the districts themselves, in which case it is customary for three or more districts to club together for joint use and ownership. The pay for these machines is usually made in instalments covering from three to five years—the districts paying one half of their assessments on account of their road machines, and working out the other half on the roads. In some instances the towns have bought the machines outright, which is not so desirable, however, as for the districts to own them.

It has been the custom for towns to build all bridges larger than a six foot span, and for the town to supply plank and aid in building sluices requiring less than a six-foot span. Towns are now beginning to buy cast iron water service pipe for all sluices and supply them to the road districts for use. Such pipe is generally from 8 8 to 8 4 inch thick, which, imbedded in the ground, stands the weight of heavy loads, even in muddy going, and will last for all time. Being round they are less liable to catch the road scrapers when working the road, and all annoyance and expense of rebuilding and replanking sluices is done away with and the road is at all times entirely smooth and comfortable. Such pipe in carload lots can be bought at from 1 1-8 to 1 1-4 cents per pound—making the cost of a 12 foot, 4-inch sluice $2.67.

Width of road must depend upon conditions. Just wide enough and none to spare, and well taken care of, is better, but the road should be worked sufficiently wide so that teams are not compelled to travel in the same ruts in muddy weather, and should be so crowned and flatted in the centre as to avoid water running in the tracks. Keep runways on sides of roads open and iron sluice pipes clear, to prevent the road bed from washing out and the road itself cleared from loose stone. Such a road once well formed needs but little care to keep it in condition—but that little is required.

Put the teams on road building and road working cheerfully, for what they do saves double their labor to the team itself in the course of the year, and the man gets his pay for the work done, three or four times over in the lessened wear and tear of himself and of vehicles, and the distilling dew of the commendation of his brother man who passeth that way, repays it over again in the currency of the gods.

To remove rocks and such like obstructions, dynamite will be found very useful and cheap. Its use is simple and with ordinary care not dangerous. It costs but ten cents per pound. On dugways and sidehills use the road worker on the upper side only; drain the road bed with iron sluice pipe, at proper intervals, and leave the lower side for a path.

One day's working with Jack Frost when he lets loose in the spring, and again when he commences "journey work" in the fall, is worth two days without him in summer time.—D. W. Lewis, of Sherruck, N. Y., in Good Roads.

Hypnotism for the Deaf.

Principal Currier, of the New York Institution, has startled the scientific world by his theory that hypnotism may, in certain cases, be successfully applied with a view of giving hearing to the deaf. The average individual knows little or nothing concerning the "eerie science," as some writers term it, but scientific and medical men have shown it to be of value in mental diseases, and, we believe, in surgery.

It would be folly to say that it is certainly going to prove efficacious in removing deafness; still the theory advanced and the arguments used are plausible enough to justify experiment. All the great inventions that are now being of so much service to mankind were ridiculed and denounced at the beginning, and Principal Currier will be exceptionally lucky if his theory is not maltreated and abused by unbelievers. Results will show whether his position is tenable or otherwise.—Deaf-Mute's Journal.

HANDY MOVABLE SHED.

A CONVENIENCE THAT WILL SOON PAY FOR ITSELF.

What Material It Takes to Build the Shed—How It Is Put Together—The Convenience of Having Hinges in the Right Place.

A handy movable shed for brood sows or calves, or any desired purpose, can be made as follows: For the roof take four 2x4 pine scantling twelve feet long; distribute these for rafters, and nail to each end a 2x4 pine scantling eight feet long; place upon these shingling lath or sheathing, and cover with shingles or other material in the ordinary way. For the ends: The lower end will require two scantlings eight feet long and two uprights of same scantlings two feet long. Hinge this on lower inside edge of lower end of roof so it will turn inwards. The upper end arrange the same way, only use three scantlings five feet long and uprights of the same only six feet long. The sides fit in with similar framing, and so hinge that each side will turn inwards over the ends, and board upright all around. The reason for this hinging is for convenience in knocking it down, moving it, and setting it up again. In tearing it down carefully tip it over on roof, wrong side up, on a sled, fold down ends and sides, then move where desired; put up again and fasten at corners with a spike or two, leaving the heads out so as to draw out easily, and it is complete. Often it need not be let down at all, only tipped on the end of a sled as needed. Such a convenience will many times pay for itself. It can be used sometimes for farm machinery or for storing potatoes or other roots until ready to pit or market. The accompanying illustration will give an idea of its construction.—D. AN OFT-TOLD TALE

DIAGRAM OF MOVABLE SHED.

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees.
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, would no despair,
Relations spoke as kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Hugo,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss.

They gave us every one a kiss,
And said, 'be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

A Winter Waif.

For some days, last week, a bird resembling a white duck was noticed swimming about in the open water of the river between the Hunter street bridge and Rogers' dam. When disturbed, the bird would not fly but dive and after a short time re-appear. On Friday, Mr. Harry Faint armed himself with a pea rifle and got a shot at the mysterious fowl. His first aim missed and the bird diving, soon re-appeared. The next shot was successful. When picked up, the bird had a small fish in its mouth. It was taken to Mr. Elcome, taxidermist, who pronounced it a San Domingo grebe, a very rare specimen especially in these regions. He will exercise his taxidermic skill upon it.

Another Pest Threatened.

The Oshawa Vindicator says :—"The cotton tail rabbits introduced into Ontario a few years ago to furnish fun for a few sports are multiplying with marvellous rapidity and spreading over a wide section of country. They were started in Scarboro Heights and now the advance guard is on the western limits of Oshawa. They are said to be the same rabbit that has worked such havoc in Australia, and already damage to fruit trees by these pests is reported. Unless some prompt measures are adopted to stamp them out they will overrun the country to the great detriment of the farming community." The English rabbits, which our contemporary probably refers to, were introduced into this section of the country, but did not increase.

THE PETERBOROUGH HOCKEYISTS IN THE FINALS.

The Local Men Win at Kingston by a Score of Eight Goals to Seven—Intense Excitement Manifested at the Close of the Game—Ties Made and Broken Every Minute.

The telegraph and telephone offices were filled to the doors on Saturday night with a crowd anxiously waiting on every tick of the instruments which were furnishing the announcements of the games scored in the great semi-final hockey match in the Intermediate series of the O. H. A., between the Peterboroughs and the Athletics of Kingston. When the news came in at the end of the first half that

PETERBOROUGH WAS LEADING

by a score of five goals to three, the enthusiasm of the crowd waxed high. Then came the announcement that in a minute and a half Kingston had tied the score. Breathlessly the crowd awaited the next message from Kingston. It came too soon—Kingston one ahead. Ties made only to be immediately broken were announced in quick succession. When word was received that the

HOME BOYS HAD WON

the match by the close score of eight goals to seven, there was almost a riot in town amongst the local enthusiasts who were unable to accompany the boys on the trip.

If the excitement ran high in town some faint idea can be conceived of the actions of the Peterboroughians who witnessed the match in Kingston—of the noble nineteen who journeyed away with the hockey team down to the Limestone City. The boys left Peterborough on Saturday afternoon in a special car attached to Conductor Staunton's train, which pulls out at 1.40 p.m.

HUNDREDS WERE AT THE STATION to give the boys a parting cheer to speed them on their way.

At Belleville the car was sent through with a special engine, but owing to some unavoidable delays, it was after seven o'clock before the Peterboroughians walked into the office of the British American Hotel and registered. Supper was hastily partaken of as the Kingstons were firm in their decision to claim the game by default if the Peterboroughians were not at the rink on schedule time.

The game

WAS NOT LARGELY ATTENDED

as the idea was prevalent that the Peterboroughs would be late and the Kingstons thus have an opportunity of putting their sportsmanlike threat into execution of claiming the game by default without having to play.

A cheer greeted the natty looking Peterboroughs as they skated out on the ice and the two teams lined up as follows :

Peterborough.		Kingston.
Dixon	goal	Savage
Montgomery	point	Rigney
Parsons	cover	Metcalfe
Wonham	forwards	Murphy
King		Sullivan
Phelan		Raynor
Davidson		Thompson

Referee, Mr Gilmour, of Osgoode.

Phelan and Reynor faced off and at the start, as he has a little way of doing.

PHELAN TOOK THE PUCK

That Peterborough was labouring under great disadvantages immediately became apparent. Besides being tired by the long ride by rail, the eating of a heavy supper just before going on the ice was not by any means conducive to fast play. The big rink, however, was the most serious handicap of all, and Peterborough had to play in the face of these several difficulties, which combined, mitigated their chances of playing a winning game to no inconsiderable extent. The brilliant combination feature, which is usually so conspicuous in the play of the Peterboroughs was abandoned. Still the fight was a stubborn one, and it was only after ten minutes hard play that that Raynor of the Kingstons scored the first goal for the Limestone City. The audience cheered, and the din was deafening. Just as the noise subsided the deep boom of the rang out in encouragement to the boys :

A HARD UP-HILL GAME

PETERBOROUGH WAR CRY

One, two, three,
Who are we ?
We are the Peterboroughs !
We ! we ! we !

The Peterborough boys stood in a little group along the side of the big rink, and though they were few in numbers, they gave ample evidence that their lung power was of a quality far above the average. Again and again did the slogan ring forth, and it served to

NERVE THE BOYS UP.

They regained their heads, and after five minutes of pretty combination rushes Phelan by a clever and well-timed shot evened the scores. During this game Parsons and Murphy were both ruled off for checking a trifle too hard.

In the third game Raynor again scored for Kingston in two and a half minutes. This young fellow is but fifteen years of age and in reality played the game for the whole team.

It took the Peterboroughs four minutes to even the score—doing the needful. In this game the referee very nearly ruled Murphy of the Kingstons out of the match entirely for the exceedingly rough-play in which he constantly indulged.

Lionel King showed up brilliantly in the fifth game, and did some pretty work. It was he who had the honour of lifting the puck through after three minutes sharp play, during which time Montgomery's work at point was a brilliant feature. In fact a harder, steadier or faster game in his life, consequently he played the star game for the local team. Parsons, just in front of him, was also most swift and accurate in his relieving. So nervy a game did these two men play that the forwards passed back to them a little too frequently when hard pressed.

MONTGOMERY NEVER PLAYED

In the sixth game, Wonham, who was covered by a good man, skated "rings around him," and after three minutes very pretty play, shot the puck between the flags and scored making the score 4-2 in favour of the boys from the town, which the Kingston papers state, "wouldn't be a city if it could."

ANOTHER FOR PETERBOROUGH,

The seventh game again went Peterborough's way, Walter Phelan making one of his noted rushes and shooting the puck between the flags in half a minute.

Kingston won the eighth game in two minutes and the score stood 5—3 in favour of Peterborough at the end of the first half. It looked as though the

PLATE GLASS CITY HOCKEYISTS

had nothing to fear and the boys were consequently very jubilant. During the brief rest the Kingstons came in for some severe but well deserved criticism for the hard checking in which they all indulged whenever an opportunity occurred, and also for the extreme adaptability to circumstances, which some of their players displayed in getting hurt at critical moments, and thereby giving their men, especially little Raynor, an opportunity of recovering their wind. The boys also resolved upon sticking to entirely, as the only effective way of increasing the score. All were sure that once they "struck their gait" the victory would assuredly go to Peterborough yet strange to say, when the two teams were called upon to resume play they had been upon the ice only three minutes and a half when Kingston had scored two games and the games stood 5-5.

THE COMBINATION GAME

Kingston scored again in three minutes and then led by one goal. Just at this juncture the game, which hitherto had not been as fast when two such crack teams were on the ice, suddenly changed in its aspects and the play scintillated with dashes and shots of the most brilliant and scientific character. Dixon showed up well in goal and can fittingly be termed a veritable stone wall. Time and again he was almost forced to his knees in defence of the Peterborough flags. Savage, who was between the posts for Kingston, is also deserving of special mention. The shots rained in on him fast and heavy.

AS ONE WOULD EXPECT

ROGER DAVIDSON

showed that the team had made no mistake in giving him a place on the team ; he was always well up in his wing and was as steady as a rock. It took ten minutes of this play before Phelan finally lifted the puck through and evened the score. Not a spectator in the rink could sit still and watch such a game. All were on their feet. Cheers and words of encouragement rained on the players from all sides as the puck was rushed up and down the rink. Over all the huzzas, however, could be heard the

PETERBOROUGH BACKERS' SLOGAN :

One, two, three,
Who are we ?
We are the Peterboroughs—
We ! we ! we !

A cheer, which could almost have been heard in Peterborough, announced that King had skilfully shot the puck between the flags after Phelan had brought it out out of a scrimmage and passed it over to him.

Peterborough was in the lead and the enthusiasm of the boys was such that they could hardly be prevented from rushing on the ice, nineteen strong, and embracing the players.

DEFENCE, OF COURSE,

was now the game to play, and Parsons and Montgomery closed in on the Peterborough flags in order to be on hand in case relief was necessary. Subsequent events, however, proved that they were too close, as after five and a half minutes play the puck rolled slowly between the Peterborough posts, each man thinking the other was sure of it and only making half an effort to stop it. It was now Kingston's turn to exult and the plaudits bestowed on the Kingston players were complimentary indeed.

There remained three minutes in which to decide who was to be the

WINNER OF THE SEMI-FINALS

in the series. Montgomery came out on the forward line, and King took his place on the defence, being a trifle fagged by the heavy checking of Metcalfe, the heavy point of the Kingston's. It is useless to attempt to portray or even give an idea of the excitement. The strain on the nerves was intense, even when shouting, but when a silence would fall on all, upon occasions when the puck was close to the flags, the nervous tension was SOMETHING ALTOGETHER INDESCRIBABLE.

Suddenly the shrill treble of the referee's whistle called the players together. Time was up. After a short consultation the referee announced his decision to the effect that play should be resumed until either side scored a goal—this goal to decide the result of the match.

If the excitement ran high previously, it increased fully ten fold at this juncture. Shortly after the puck was again in play, young Raynor, who, though light, endeavoured to body check, ran up against Montgomery. As "Monty" stands very firmly on his pins and with him, Raynor was so completely knocked out by the encounter as to be forced to retire from the ice. The playing of both teams was so extremely fast that no attempt was made to keep the time in the last game.

A yell which would have made a Blackfoot Indian turn pale with envy was the announcement that Montgomery had made a brilliant dash down the rink with Wonham at his heels and that, at just the right minute, he had passed the puck to Wonham and receiving it back in another moment, had skilfully raised it through

THE GOAL POSTS.

The Peterborough contingent took the ice with a rush and the scene which ensued, beggars description, hats, caps, gloves, gauntlets, sticks and overcoats were thrown high in the air by the boys in their exuberant glee. Montgomery and Wonham were hoisted shoulder high and carried off the rink, and the rest of the team nearly had their hands wrung off.

The only incident which occurred to mar the pleasure of the trip, exists in the fact that just at the last minute Parsons had the misfortune to strain his ankle severely.

NOTES.

During the latter part of the game, one of the Kingston players was guilty of a most unsportsmanlike trick when he came upon the ice with a stick upon the end of which was painted a puck. The boys were deceived several times before they saw through the trick.

Just at the conclusion of the game one of the Peterborough boys recognized in one of the Kingston players an acquaintance named Knowles, of Brantford. The discovery was an awkward one for Knowles as, of course, he was a "ringer" imported for the game and playing under the name of Murphy.

Mr. Morgan Shaw, President of the Kingstons, proved a jovial entertainer and on Sunday the Peterborough boys were shown numerous little courtesies by the Kingston hockey players. The barracks, military school, asylum and several other places of interest were visited during the day.

The party left Kingston at 1.40 o'clock this morning and coming around by Port Hope, pulled into the Peterborough station in the special car at 8.20 a.m. The outing proved to be a most enjoyable one and there is no doubt that, when the finals are played in Toronto, a tremendous crowd will accompany the local team to the Queen City.

In the match between the London II and the Granites Saturday in the Intermediate O.H.A. series, the Granites were successful and therefore Peterborough will play the latter team for the championship of Ontario.

Consumption—Low Condition

Wonderful Results From Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Miss Hannah Wyatt
Toronto, Ont.

"Four years ago while in the old country (England), my daughter Hannah was sent away from the hospital, in a very low condition with consumption of the lungs and bowels, and weak action of the heart. The trip across the water to this country seemed to make her feel better for a while. Then she began to get worse, and for 14 weeks she was unable to get off the bed. She grew worse for five months and lost the use of her limbs and lower part of body, and if she sat up in bed had to be propped up with pillows. Physicians

Said She Was Past All Help

and wanted me to send her to the 'Home for Incurables.' But I said as long as I could hold my hand up she should not go. We then began to give her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She is getting strong, walks around, is out doors every day; has no trouble with her throat and no cough, and her heart seems to be all right again. She has a first class appetite. We regard her cure as nothing short of a miracle." W. WYATT, 39 Marion Street, Parkdale, Toronto, Ontario.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

"Up-to-Date Woman."

The lecture on the above subject to be given under the auspices of the Y.W.C.A., in St. Paul's lecture room, on Tuesday evening next, by Miss Bertha Wright, of Ottawa, President of the Dominion Y. W. C. A. will be of the greatest interest. The lecture will contrast the ideal woman of past centuries with the young woman of to-day, and the whole lecture will be superbly illustrated with lime light views. Everybody interested in the good work of the Y.W.C.A., should attend. As the lecture will only be of interest to adults, parents attending will act accordingly.

McCarthy on Thursday Night.

By advertisement in another column it will be seen that Mr. Dalton McCarthy, who was snowed under literally on Friday evening, Feb. 8th, (the great blizzard preventing his meeting) is to address the electors of East and West Peterborough on Thursday evening next in the opera house. Addresses will be delivered by Mr. McCarthy's colleagues, presumably Col. O'Brien and Messrs. Godfrey and Hunter, of Toronto, these gentlemen having been mentioned as speakers in the first announcements. Mr. McCarthy is a good speaker and doubtless considerable interest will be taken in the utterances of one who was for so long a period in the inner circle of Conservative politics. It is probable that some attention will be paid to the utterances of the ministers in the opera house on Feb. 7th. The front seats in the opera house will be reserved for ladies.

AN ELOQUENT SERMON FOR CHARITY'S SAKE.

DELIVERED BY VEN. ARCH-DEACON CASEY.

A Large Congregation — Liberal Responses to the Appeal Made The Special Music—The Thanks of the Ladies' Aid.

Last evening a sermon was delivered in St. Peter's cathedral by Ven. Archdeacon Casey, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society for the benefit of the charitible funds of that worthy organization in connection with the church. There was a large congregation in attendance. His Lordship Bishop O'Connor occupied the episcopal throne and the cathedral clergy had seats in the sanctuary. Rev. Father Scollard chanted Vespers.

THE ELOQUENT SERMON

delivered by the rector was worthy of the occasion. A condensed summary of it is printed below.

The speaker prefaced his remarks by the recital of the parable of the Good Samaritan, and stated that our Lord came to enkindle in us the fire of divine charity, inspiring us to love our neighbour as ourselves for the love of God. The Jews, the speaker remarked, had also this command from God, but they forgot its exercise—they could not understand how they could love strangers and people of other nations, but nevertheless this parable had a significance to the Jewish people, and at that time charity did not reign as now. Outside the Jewish nation the people had lost the true God, and no charity could be found. Persecution reigned supreme and even in Rome with all its learning, that divine virtue was was unknown. Jesus then sent his apostle St. Paul into Greece and Asia, and while there collections were taken up in aid of the poor Christians. The Church had to meet the persecutions of her enemies, and when the Roman Empire rose against Christendom the people were forced to seek shelter in the Catacombs, and when the persecution had abated the Church came out, and her missionaries preached charity with Christianity, monasteries were built throughout Europe—monoments of charity, where the poor and the stranger could seek aid and shelter.

Here the speaker referred to the noble, self-sacrificing labours of that noble band of monks of St. Bernard, devoting their lives to saving travellers lost in the Alpine mountains.

The charity of Jesus Christ, he continued, was exercised at all times. The poor always assembled at the monasteries throughout Europe, where the rich gave and the poor received, and the poor called down the blessing of God on the donors.

In after days when the world lost part of the faith of Jesus Christ, these asylums of the poor were destroyed. As a consequence the poor began to suffer, and so overpowering was their cry, that those hardened men had to relent. It was about this time that poor houses were established. The teaching of charity was still found in men's souls to-day—we find philanthropic men helping the poor, but not because of the love of God, but rather because it hurts their feelings to see the poor suffering.

At the time of the destruction of the asylums of the poor, the church began a new life. It taught its children to assist the poor, whom our Lord said were always with us. The speaker at this juncture dwelt on that apostle of charity, St. Vincent de Paul, and his noble work for the poor, and also spoke in eloquent terms of that noble army of God—the Sisters of Charity, who could be found in the hovels of the great cities and on the battlefield, tenderly ministering to the suffering and afflicted. He also referred to the days of the pilgrimages to the Holy Land, when the Christians fell into the hands of the heathen Turk, and were persecuted like the Armenians of to-day, and how two saints of the church organised to save the Christians slaves among the infidels, and who were sworn to give up even themselves for the liberation of the slaves.

In conclusion the lecturer stated that the church always used charity towards the poor, the same feeling being manifest to-day. All recognised that they were called upon to help the poor. If we do not practice chrarity we will reap no reward. We should all be Good Samaritans, and by the practice of this virtue we will merit the reward of being welcomed into thd joys of the kingdom of heaven.

The musical portion of the services was of a special character. At the offertory Mrs. G. Ball rendered Harvey's Ave Maria in excellent voice, and during benediction a duet—Millard's O Salutaris Hostia, was very sweetly sung by Miss M. Hurley and Mrs. Geo. Ball. Lambliotte's Tantum Ergo was also well renerded by the full choir. Miss K. Hurley presided very efficiently at the organ.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society desire to thank most cordially Rev. Father Casey for his eloquent and excellent sermon and also the congregation of St. Peter's for their liberal contributions—amounting to about $75 in aid of the charitable funds of the society.

MORE OF MISS LOUISE GOODWYN.

She Secures the Release of Her Brother-in-Law by Paying His Fine and the Costs.

The Toronto News in its Saturday issue says:—"High County Constable Cochrane, of Peterborough, came to Toronto this morning and had Charles Stevens, a printer in the Yonge street arcade building arrested on a warrant of commitment for $21. He was convicted in October last of ill-treating a horse and fined $5 and costs.

Stevens paid the fine and was allowed to go free. He is the young man whose escapades with his sister-in-law, Miss Louise Goodwin, at Peterborough recently created a big sensation."

The county constable states that he was about to bring Stevens back to Peterborough but that Miss Goodwyn came to the police station with the necessary amount of money to secure the release of the prisoner, whom she took away with her.

MR. McCARTHY AND MR. GARVIN.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

NEW YEAR NEW GOODS NEW LEAF 1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will let off cheap.

THE ROAD QUESTION.

It Is One of the Great Problems Now Before the Public.

No person or association in the land can afford to neglect a movement so vital to the country's progress and prosperity; few, indeed, have not, in addition to their concern in the general welfare, some special interest, direct or indirect, in the condition of highways.

The organization that will solve the good-road problem will secure a notable place in the history of civilization. The best thought is required in developing or choosing a plan of action, and the solid support of the people is required when a plan is found.

When the subject shall have been discussed in school district assemblies, in town meetings, in county conventions, and in state and national road congresses, a final conclusion reached, and that conclusion sent back to the school districts and confirmed, we shall then have to come as near as possible to a proper solution of the problem.

Apart from the acknowledged interest in good roads of the builders of wagons, carriages, bicycles, traction engines and implements, that of coaching and country clubs, coach and carriage owners, horse breeders, etc., and that of all merchants and manufacturers, in respect to the cheap and speedy distribution of goods and better collection of raw materials and money returns, there are many great semi public institutions whose interests are deeply involved.

A TYPICAL COUNTRY ROAD.

[For such ruts as these the farmers of the country pay millions every year, to say nothing of loss of patience.]

Railroads, in the equal distribution of their traffic through the seasons, securing constant employment of their force and equipment; telegraph and telephone companies, in the extension of country service; newspapers, in the expansion of their circulation through free delivery that will follow good roads; banks and bankers, in the quicker movement of capital in country business; fire insurance companies, in the ability to reach country fires with town apparatus; life insurance companies, in the prompt relief of the sick or injured, and in a general amelioration of physical and social conditions tending to prolong life; labor organizations, in the non-competitive employment of convicts, and all philanthropic associations and individuals in the provision of employment sufficient to "abolish poverty," or at least want and starvation, for a generation, diminish crime and relieve the congestion in cities, and in the cheapening of food products to all consumers, and general promotion of the happiness and welfare of the whole people.

A strange apathy has fallen upon the country, and a stranger paralysis upon the government, since the time when the fathers of the republic declared it the "duty of congress to bind the republic together with roads and canals." The duty was performed to the best of the nation's feeble ability for thirty years, then neglected by congress and forgotten by the people. But from this apathy there are signs of an awakening.

Columbus discovered America in vain, if after four hundred years we are still behind the ancients and are not advanced yet. Within the past year, through the special reports of our consuls abroad, many people have discovered that all over the world the common roads are among the prime concerns of national government, alike under monarchies and republics, and are asking the pertinent question: "Why cannot the government of the 'great republic' do what all the other governments are doing for the people's benefit?"

The distressingly improvident and wasteful condition of the common roads that are quagmires half of the year and beds of dust the other half, and the great necessity for their improvement, are becoming universally recognized. The people are at last beginning to realize that bad roads annually entail losses that in magnitude are beyond computation, and that this permanent improvement would yearly effect the saving of untold millions of the nation.

It is sufficient to say that in this progressive age, in this great country, filled with every opportunity for progress and adornment, ranking high in position for intelligence and skill in matters that appeal to the comforts and economies to everyone, we could gain valuable lessons from the earliest nations of the world. Roadmaking is a subject of common interest, and because of its magnitude and the varied interests it affects it needs the control of a central power and public legislation to establish an intelligent basis of action.—Rochester (N.Y.) Landscape Architect.

George Vanderbilt's Roads.

George Vanderbilt is a firm believer in good roads and has a laboratory on the estate, where an expert is employed in finding the best soils on the place as well as rock and stone for road formation. The result of these experiments, as well as those of agriculture, are freely furnished to all inquirers and put to practical use at Biltmore. The result is that already around the mansion and at Biltmore forest are ten miles of as fine driveway as can be found in the vicinity of any large and progressive city. But before the improvements are completed this length will be increased to fully fifty miles. Macadamized stone, gravel, ashes and clay are the principal substances used.

Enlarging a Wheelbarrow's Usefulness.

It is often desirable to wheel away from a lawn or garden, light rubbish, straw, hay, or vines, for which purpose the ordinary wheelbarrow does not give sufficient accommodation. So often is it desired to wheel away light but bulky loads of this sort, that such an arrangement as is shown in the illustration will be found very serviceable. It is simply a light rack frame that can be attached to the barrow in the same way that the ordinary sides are attached, the addition of a couple of sockets near the handles being the only necessary addition to the barrow in order to accommodate the rack. The construction is so plainly shown in the sketch that added explanation is not needed.—American Agriculturist.

WHEELBARROW WITH RACK FRAME.

Feeding Wheat.

A press despatch from Toledo, O., says that a grain firm there has received replies from 3,067 dealers and millers in seven States raising nearly one-half the entire wheat crop of the country, in regard to the amount of wheat likely to be fed to animals this season. The reports vary from three per cent. to one-half the crop, with an average of 15 per cent. Kansas will feed the most, Michigan nearly as much, Missouri next, then Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois. Nearly all say farmers have sold more freely than usual; one-half will hold remainder of crop; 836 say about half continue selling, and 809 say they are still selling freely. Indiana and Illinois are disposed to sell; Michigan holds firmly. A report on clover seed is also given, showing that the crop will be smaller than last year. Acreage is much less, though some sections report a larger yield per acre. Mammoth clover will be very short; medium, a trifle below average. Michigan reports poorest prospect for both; Indiana the best, but not over average.—Country Gentleman.

The only blood-purifier admitted on exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair was Ayer's Sarsaparilla, all others being excluded as secret preparations and patent medicines. With doctors and pharmacists, it has always been considered a standard remedy.

NO SUCH THING AS OLD AGE

To those who use South American Nervine

A Lady of 80 Years Permanently Cured by this Wonderful Medicine.

Three Doctors said "Old Age was Her Complaint" and Gave Her Up—Three Bottles of Nervine Gave Relief—Twelve Bottles Cured Absolutely.

MRS. JOHN DINWOODY, Flesherton, Ont.

Wordsworth speaks of "An old age serene and bright, and lovely as a Lapland night." And elsewhere this same writer talks of "An old age, beautiful and free." These are conditions that come to the man or woman, though their years may border close on to a century, when in the enjoyment of good health. In fact it is difficult to think of some of the old men and women on the stage of life to-day as old people, there seems to be such a perennial youthfulness about their every movement and act.

Does someone tell us that cases like this must be the exception and not the rule with those who have approached to or gone beyond the allotted three score years and ten? Not so, if they have become acquainted with the virtues contained in South American Nervine. Before us in this sketch is the picture of Mrs. John Dinwoody, of Flesherton, Ont., a resident of that town for forty years. No person in the town and country side around is perhaps better known than this lady, and none more highly esteemed. Three years ago it was her sad lot to loose a daughter who had been all the world to her. The shock sustained by this event completely broke up the system of Mrs. Dinwoody. She supposed her end had come. She lingered for one year with three doctors, and they gave her case up, saying that it was one of old age and no one, nor any medicine could do her good. Made of the kind of stuff that gives beauty to age at any time she did not despair. She was influenced to try Nervine. She took three bottles, and this was sufficient to show her that her end was not yet. From these she obtained relief. She persevered, and in all took twelve bottles of the medicine, with the result that she is to-day completely cured of that breaking-up of the system that threatened her three years ago.

There is nothing wonderful in the fact that Mrs. Dinwoody would proclaim to the thousands of old people throughout this broad land, that with old age does not necessarily come decline, decrepitude and disease. Why should we not live into the eighties and nineties, and cross the border of the century?

South American Nervine, whether the person be young or old, gets at the nerve centers, and when they are kept in proper condition the system is as well able to withstand disease at eighty as at thirty. With this prospect in view who would not live to an old age and enjoy the pleasures of family, friends and society, and take a part in watching the marvelous progress and developments of these closing days of a wonderful century, which marks as not the least of its wonderful discoveries, the discovery of South American Nervine.

THE SOY BEAN.

The Japanese Plant That Is Suggested as a Substitute for Coffee.

While no substitute will satisfy the lover of high-grade coffee, the peculiar properties of coffee as a drink render it unsuited to a few people in every community. These few persons frequently make use of a substitute, which, while lacking the alkaloid of true coffee, in a measure imparts to the fluid made from it a flavor similar to that of coffee. Such a drink may be palatable, nourishing, and well adapted to the person using it. A desirable and easily available substitute for coffee, which can be grown upon the farm in this latitude, is the Soy or Soja bean.

The Soy bean (Soja hispida) is a Japanese plant that has been but little grown in America. It has an upright, stiff, bushy form, under favorable circumstances attaining a height of three feet. There are three large leaves on a leaf stem. Short flower shoots come from the axils of the leaves, which with maturity produce pods in clusters of two or three. Each pod contains from two to four seeds, a little longer than broad, being about three-eighths of an inch in length. One plant may produce a large number of pods and leaves. The plant sends a vigorous root down into the soil. The leaves, stems and pods are as a rule very hairy.

The writer's attention was first directed to the peculiar merits of the roasted Soy bean, as a substitute for coffee, by Mr. L. D. Brown early in 1892, who was then a farmer in this county. In a letter, Mr. Brown says: "We have used it almost exclusive of other coffee, for coffee, for many years—seven or eight, I believe. I have raised 782 beans on one stalk from one bean planted, and had 16 bushels on one acre in Tippecanoe county."

The seed should be planted about 30 inches apart, in rows, with a bean every 6 to 9 inches in the row. The ground should be prepared as for any other beans. The seed should not be planted until the ground is well warmed, about the latter half of May, though a satisfactory crop has been gathered at this station from seed planted about the middle of June. Yet the season may be too short if planting is delayed much beyond June 1st. After the beans are ripe enough, the plants should be mowed off..or pulled up, and dried in the field in small piles or stacks, after which they may be taken to the barn and threshed out. Care should be taken not to harvest when the pods are too ripe, or they will shell in handling. A flail is a satisfactory instrument for threshing them out with, for they must be broken as little as possible in shelling.

Of the Soy coffee, 17.07 per cent. became soluble when boiled in water for drinking. The one main and essential difference between the seeds of the Soy and coffee is that one contains an alkaloid—caffeine—to which is due its peculiar flavor, which the other lacks. Both contain considerable fat, fibre and albuminoids, but the amount of available nutriment in either case would be inappreciable in a cup of coffee. That there should be so close a relationship in the amount of fat in each is of special interest. It is important to note that the Soy bean roasted is more nutritious than the artificial coffee or barley coffee sold in the market, and that the two latter contain but little fat and a great deal of carbohydrates (starch and sugar mainly).

As tried in the family of the writer, the drink made from the Soy bean was agreeable, and enjoyed more than some of the so-called coffee served in some hotels and restaurants. I have no hesitation in recommending farmers to make a drink from roasted Soy beans, rather than buy the cheap grades of coffee sold on the market, that in so many cases are adulterated with burnt pastry beans, peas, chicory, etc. Drink made by a number of persons in this community from the roasted Soy bean was much relished.

A tablespoonful of the ground beans makes a cupful of coffee. Mr. Brown recommends using one-fourth cupful of Soy to begin with, and one will thus more readily become accustomed to it. If too strong, it has an unpleasant odor, and may be diluted with boiling water. Special care should be taken in roasting. The hull of the bean should be brown, and not black, when properly roasted, and the berry should grind easily in the mill.—Charles S. Plumb, in Country Gentleman.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you it it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's oldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

WINTER WINDOW GARDENING.

The Art and Science of Full Propagating for the Amateurs.

Plants can usually be relied upon to blossom at a specified time if a few simple conditions are observed. Special provision seems to be made for this in a great variety of bulbs. The following will readily respond to the amateur's care: Hyacinths, oxalis, freesia, lilium Harisii, lilium Candidum, amaryllis regina, scilla, and many others. The crocus remains in blossom too brief a time to make it a desirable plant for house culture.

Any good garden soil mixed with a little leaf mold and sand makes good soil for potting. Strong fertilizers tend to too heavy growth of foliage, and sometimes cause the bulbs to decay. Put the bulbs in loosely, just below the surface, water freely and set the pots in a cool, dark cellar to form roots. Some florists recommend cutting the bulbs from top to bottom in several places, the same as gladiolus.

From four to seven weeks after potting, bring them to light and warmth. In a short time blossom buds will appear. If the plants are kept in a cool room the blossoms will remain unchanged a long time.

Cyclamens are recommended highly by florists for winter plants, also sanseveria zelianica—the latter will thrive with little sunlight, and needs little water and will endure well the dust of living rooms. A window box is a pretty receptacle for plants. Filled with ferns, with here and there a flowering plant, it is very attractive.

One of the handsomest window boxes I ever saw was filled with woods moss, ferns, checkerberry vines and a purple and pink hyacinth. Ferns will thrive well in a northern exposure with little sunlight. The soil should be taken from the woods and should be always kept damp but not wet. The roots of ferns lie near the surface and are small compared with the foliage.

A box six inches deep and wide is about the right size. It can be rendered water-tight by a preparation of three parts of builder's cement and one of clean sand mixed with water. This will last a season or two and can be renewed when the box is empty. Do not paint the outside red or any bright color; give it some neutral tint; any glaring or pronounced color attracts from the beauty of the plants. When the flowers fade do not remove the bulbs but leave them in the pots to mature, giving a very little water till the leaves turn yellow, then still less, and at the last let them become quite dry.

An amateur florist who wishes to increase his collection with little or no outlay may be glad to know that plants may be readily propagated from slips. The process is usually successful and not at all difficult.

Green, thrifty shoots should be taken from healthy, vigorous plants. Unless in the case of roses, these should be chosen from the young wood. If a shoot snaps readily from the stock it is in proper condition to grow. Fill a box or any convenient receptacle to the depth of three or four inches with sand, insert the slips and water them well. If the sand is allowed to dry out while roots are forming, your labor will be lost. Keep the box containing the cuttings in a room where the thermometer registers about 65° and out of the direct rays of the sun 36 hours.

As soon as the plants are well rooted remove each one to a pot two and one-half inches deep. Some florists recommend placing the pots in a shallow box or tray containing an inch or two of sand, that the plants be occasionally sprinkled, and the sand kept wet for four or five days, then gradually accustomed to the sunshine.—Ohio Farmer.

Escaping Gas Nearly Ends the Lives of a Couple in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Feb. 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Coady on Friday night arrived from Toronto and drove to the Beatty house. The woman was tired and after partaking of a light supper the guests retired to their room. At an early hour next morning the proprietor was alarmed at the strong smell of gas that pervaded the house. He called the help and a search being made it was found the gas came from the Toronto people's room. The door was burst open and a shocking spectacle greeted the eyes of the first to enter the apartment. At the back of the bed lay the woman and across the foot, with his head hanging out until it touched the floor, lay the man, both senseless and apparently dead. Medical aid was summoned and the couple were removed to the hospital, where they are now in a precarious condition. Coady is a commercial traveller with a Montreal firm.

A Young Actress Murdered.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 18.—Madge Yorke, aged 20 years, a member of Charles E. Blaney's "Baggage Check" Company, was shot and almost instantly killed in a room at Zeiss' hotel last evening by Jas. B. Gentry, an actor. After doing the shooting Gentry escaped and has not yet been arrested. Gentry is said to have been engaged to be married to Miss Yorke and it is supposed jealousy was the motive for the crime. Miss Yorke filled one of the minor singing parts in the "Baggage Check" Company and at one time was a member of the Marie Tempest Company and the Casino Opera Company.

Buffalo Music Hall Burned.

BUFFALO, Feb. 18.—Fire destroyed the Buffalo Music Hall this morning. The building cost $300,000 and was erected on the site of the old Music Hall which was burned together with St. Louis church twelve years ago. The library and society rooms of the German societies were also destroyed.

Transmitting Pictures by Telegraph.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—A special to a morning paper from Duluth says W. W. Lowd, train despatcher of the Northern Pacific road, gave a successful exhibition of his invention for transmitting pictures by telegraph. The test was made in the presence of a number of railroad officials.

Philosophy for the Bill Collector.

A collector of unpaid bills has a hard time of it, but one met a philosophical debtor recently who convinced him of some astounding facts, says the Amusement Journal. The collector said that he had been chasing the said philosophical debtor for about six months and was getting tired. It was always "Come around to-morrow," or "Haven't got it now."

"Say," he said, when he made his last trip, "are ever going to pay this bill?"

"Why, yes, some day," the philosopher replied. "But look here, young man. I want to show you a thing or two. How many bills have you in that pack?"

"About forty," said the collector.

"How long does it take you to visit all these people?" the philosopher inquired.

"About a day."

"What if all paid up promptly?"

"Why, that would be great."

"Would it? What would you do for a living if all these debtors paid up in one day?"

The collector looked blank for a moment.

"Great Jerusalem! I'd be out of a job."

"Well, then, don't be so anxious to collect every penny due to your people. One bill a day is enough. As for me, come around some time next week and I may do something for you, and the philosopher faded away.

Too Much Advice.

I read a good many papers, almost all of which agitate the subject of road making in a general, theoretical sort of way. They advise the government to build them, advocate state taxation, the sale of government land, a whisky tax, and other innumerable ways; but always dodge the only practicable solution of the difficulty to my mind, i. e., the farmer and those contiguous to the roads to be benefited. Just as long as we keep looking for something or somebody, nobody knows what or who, to provide us all with good roads to travel on, we are pretty sure to walk in the mud. When we are once thoroughly dissatisfied of that idea, and we realize that good roads, if they come at all, come the same way as good houses, barns, fences and other improvements, come by individual effort and expense, we will soon be able to enjoy them. Judge Biggie says: "Don't haul a lot of small stones in the road to make the traveler miserable." Other judges say: "Don't haul in loose dirt to make a bed of mud the next time it rains." If there is any other available commodity suitable for making roads, we farmers would like to hear of it as those of us at any rate who live in this quarter of the globe don't feel like treading on air these times.—Woodland (Wash.) Letter in Rural New Yorker.

SUSPICION OF FOUL PLAY.

Three Montreal Men Poisoned While on a Spree.

MONTREAL, Feb. 18.—One man dead and two others in a precarious condition is the result of a drive which three men took on Wednesday night. The three men are Michael Higgins, aged 49 years; Olivia Des Roches and another. The trio visited several saloons, and soon all three were so under the influence of liquor that they did not know what they were doing. Next morning they were all taken sick. Higgins was removed to the Notre Dame Hospital, and Des Roches was taken home. The other man was removed to his lodgings. On Saturday Higgins died without returning to consciousness.

Des Roches, who is the porter of the Richelieu Hotel, is lying at the point of death. When seen by Coroner's Assistant Lacroix, he stated that he thought he and his companions had been drugged, but he had no suspicions as to who had done it.

Another story in connection with the case as to the effect that the three men, who are porters, agreed to go for a drive to St. John's. A rig was engaged and the three men started for their destination, which was never reached. Where they went and what happened during the night is a mystery.

Higgins was taken to the Notre Dame hospital by some one unknown and there he died without recovering from his stupor. The next morning Des Roches was found in his bus, where he had passed the rest of that eventful night. He complained of being ill and was sent to his home, where he fell into an unconscious state, from which he only partially recovered Saturday morning. At one time it was thought that he would expire.

Mr. Michael Alexe, said to be the third of the party, was seen at his residence, 8 St. Monique street. He denies having any connection with Higgins and Des Roches on the night in question. Higgins complained to him of a bad cold which he had contracted while on duty as a "cabby" during the recent storm. Both Higgins and Des Roches had been drinking heavily on Monday and Tuesday morning. In fact Alexe never saw them in a worse condition. He thinks they plied themselves with liquor until they were absolutely stupified and did not know how to take care of themselves. He does not credit the poisoning theory.

An inquest on the body of Higgins was held on Saturday at Notre Dame hospital. The companions of the unfortunate man are still unconscious and the inquest was adjourned until next Saturday, when sensational developments are expected.

WANTS TO APOLOGIZE.

Pacaud Retracts the Charges He Made Against Hon. Mr. Angers.

QUEBEC, Feb. 18.—Hon. Wilfrid Laurier arrived here in connection with the libel case of Hon. A. R. Angers v. E. Pacaud. The case was argued on January 28 last, when the plaintiff alone was represented by his attorneys. Hon. Mr. Laurier has given notice that he will move before Judge Andrews that the deliberation be discharged to allow the defendant to file an apology in the record. A draft of the apology had been submitted to plaintiff's attorney, J. N. Belleau, Q.C., last November by defendant's attorneys. This draft defendant alleges was never returned and thinks that if submitted to the plaintiff himself would have been accepted. He now asks to file the same apology.

The article for which Mr Pacaud wishes now to file an apology appeared in L'Electeur. It declared that Senator Landry had made a present of a pair of horses to Mr. Angers, that he had also offered $100,000 to Mr. Mercier to renew the Beauport Asylum contract which Mr. Mercier had refused, and thereupon had been formed the plot to rob the province of $125,000, of which $100,000 was to be for Mr. Landry and $25,000 for Mr. Angers. The accusation further intimated that Mr. Angers dismissed the Mercier Government and forced the entry of Hon. L. P. Pelletier into the new Government so as to be more able to plot and extort the means of enriching both Mr. Landry and himself. The present Minister of Agriculture at once took action for damages against L'Electeur and the case has been before the courts.

Those Interested Make a Date With the Premier and Ministers.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 18.—Archbishop Duhamel and Rev. Father Allan had a long interview with Premier Bowell on Saturday evening. Its understood they represented the petitions of the Roman Catholics in regard to the Manitoba school question.

Rev. Father Paradis and Dr. Brisson, general agent of the Montreal Colonization and Expatriation Society, had an interview with Sir Mackenzie Bowell. They arranged for interviews with the Premier, the French ministers and the Minister of Interior on Wednesday by a delegation from Quebec and the Michigan district in regard to the Government granting transportation and some other assistance to about 4,000 settlers in the State of Michigan who are desirous of removing to the Nipissing district and settling upon lands of the company. The most of these parties left Canada some years ago and are now dissatisfied with their condition and are anxious to return.

A four hours' session of the Cabinet was held on Saturday, every minister being present. Contrary to general expectation, no announcement was made respecting a session or dissolution. The fact that Tuesday, the 26th, has been fixed for the hearing of the application by Manitoba Catholics for remedial legislation leads to the supposition that the Government will then immediately announce its policy and go to the country.

STUDENTS ON STRIKE

Serious Trouble Brewing at Wesleyan College, Montreal.

RUCTION IN OLD VARSITY

An Actual Boycott Against the Institution Commenced in Earnest by the Students, Who Are Incensed at the Recent Dismissal of Prof. Dale.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19.—There is trouble brewing in the Wesleyan college here, which may or may not assume serious proportions. The board of governors have appointed a Mr. Harris to the chair of church history. Mr. Harris has been instrumental in raising $30,000 for the benevolent fund, and this is the reason assigned for his appointment. The students and professors object strongly to the appointment. It is represented that Mr. Harris' standing in the college is no higher than many of the students whom he will be called upon to teach. The professors say that he is not fit for the position. A meeting of the students and professors was held on Saturday, and a requisition was sent to the board asking the cancellation of Mr. Harris' appointment. One of the professors stated that he will resign unless the requisition is granted.

THE FIGHT IN TORONTO.

The Trouble at 'Varsity Assuming a Serious Aspect.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—The trouble between the students of the University and the senate authorities, which has been simmering for some time, and which reached a climax on the dismissal of Professor Dale last week by the Ontario Government, is becoming one of unusual importance. The students of the University have instituted a boycott, and positively refuse to attend the lectures until such time as they consider their rights have been fully recognised.

Of the 700 students registered only five were in attendance at lectures yesterday. There never was so much excitement in University halls. A large number of students were in the lobbies, anxiously discussing the situation and the probabilities. One thing seems certain, and that is that those who are attending lectures will not have many additions to their numbers. They are looked on with scorn and are called by the name of traitors. No one cares to emulate them or follow their example. There was but one man at a lecture between 9 and 10 o'clock and he was a freshman in pass mathematics. Two men will attend lectures in third year classics. One man will go to the classical lectures, one to fourth year moderns and one to third year moderns. The students are making no effort to forcibly prevent students from attending lectures.

A number of occasional students, ladies from the city, who take English lectures from Prof. Alexander, evidently not understanding the signs of the times, were present at Prof. Alexander's lecture. All the professors are in attendance, and wait for a short time for students, and when none put in appearance, adjourn the meeting. The president is in the building, but has done nothing, and has not even put in an appearance, but remains quietly in his own room.

Prof. Hutton is endeavoring to have the Classical Association meet and disclaim their part in the boycott. Only two of the entire four years, with about fifty students, favor such an action. There is not the slightest sign of the students weakening, and from the encouragement they received yesterday they will keep up the fight with greater zeal.

Fumigating Causes Death.

OTTAWA, Feb. 19.—Georgina Lanthier, a five-year-old child living on Rochester street, died yesterday from inhaling sulphur. She went into a room which had been fumigated by the sanitary inspector for a case of diphtheria and inhaled the sulphur and died of congestion of the lungs.

A Farmer Badly Injured.

GUELPH, Feb. 19.—Mr. Peter Mahon, of Aberfoyle, a prominent farmer and patron, was seriously injured by the upsetting of a load of a hay which he and his son were on, near the homestead. Mr. McMahon alighted on his head and injured his spine. Paralysis has set in.

Break Up of the Ice Field.

MANISTEE, Mich., Feb. 19.—The ice field broke up yesterday releasing Ann Arbor ferry No. 1 which is now in harbor and will lie here until the wind goes down, making the entrance of Frankfort harbor safe. The transfer boat has been locked up in the ice for 10 days.

DEATH IN AN EXPLOSION

Gas, Ignited by a Naked Lamp, Causes a Bad Accident,

SIX MINERS LOSE THEIR LIVES

Fire Following the Explosion Fatally Burns Four Others—300 Men May be Thrown Out of Work Before the Fire is Controlled.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 19.—By an explosion of mine gas yesterday at West Bay Ridge colliery of the Reading Coal and Iron Company at Mahoney Plains, six miners were killed and five were burned, four of them probably fatally. The dead are: Peter Greenback, St. Clair; Joseph Glibe, Crescent Hill; Thomas Durkin, Girardville; Benjamin Reaber, Mahoney Plane; Peter Kline and Anthony Myers, Ashland.

The first five men were probably instantly killed and it was some time before their bodies were recovered from the workings, but Myers was taken out alive and died while being carried to the hospital. The injured are: Edward Davis, Girardville; William Minnich and William Goff, Ashland; John Lamey and Wm. Davis, Mahoney Plane. It is feared that the first four of the injured men are fatally burned, but Davis was only slightly hurt.

The origin of the explosion is not known but it is supposed that a naked lamp ignited a large body of gas that had been let loose from a blast that was made in the gangway. The explosion set fire to the timbers of which is called the "Monkey Airway" cutting off the escape of the five men killed in the mine. The six men who were taken out alive were nearest the gangway and escaped the suffocating fumes of the gas and the avalanche of coal and timber which followed the explosion.

A fierce fire broke out in the gangway but the work of rescuing the imprisoned men or recovering their bodies if dead was at once proceeded with. A line of hose was run into the gangway and between two and three o'clock in the afternoon the dead bodies of the five men were recovered. The fire in the mine is still raging fiercely and it is in a place not easy of access. The mine officials hope to be able to extinguish the flames before they get a hold on the coal for in that case the mine would have to be flooded and over 800 men would be thrown out of work. The colliery has a capacity of 250,000 tons annually.

PEABODY CENTENNIAL.

Hundredth Anniversary of His Birth—The Queen's Message.

PEABODY, Mass., Feb. 19.—The centennial celebration of George Peabody's birth was brought to a close last evening with a grand banquet in the town hall. The following cablegram was read by Francis H. Appleton, the presiding officer, during the evening: "London.—On this the hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Peabody, the grateful remembrance of him and his noble beneficent deeds of charity in this country is fresh in my heart and in the hearts of my people. (Signed) Victoria."

Ten Negroes Drowned.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 19.—A special from Waycross says: A report from Sherley says that ten negroes were drowned one day last week in the Satilla river at the bridge of the Florida Central and Peninsular railroad. The negroes were raftsmen on a raft of cypress timber. Their faces, hands and feet were frost-bitten and their limbs were so benumbed that they were powerless in steering the raft. The freshet had reached the highest mark and the raft became unmanageable. The negroes grew desperate and rolled off of the raft into the river and tried to reach the shore. They were unable to swim and soon sank. Their bodies were found floating in the water a few days afterward.

Literary Women in Tights.

OTSEGO, Mich., Feb. 19.—The Women's Literary Club created a great sensation the other night by donning tights and performing Longfellow's "Spanish Student." There were three preachers present, who, in spite of perfunctory disapproval, admitted that the play was well put on. A novel feature was the appearance of a score of prominent citizens dressed in broadcloth, wearing bald-headed wigs. They marched in with dignity and quietly seated themselves in the orchestra circle amid loud applause. The women are indignant at the gentlemen who appeared in the front row with bald-headed wigs.

Suicided From An Ocean Steamer.

QUEENSTOWN, Feb. 19.—The steamer Aurania, from New York for Liverpool, arrived here yesterday. Her officers reported that she encountered an easterly gale on the 15th, 16th and 17th. Several heavy seas swept her decks and two saloon port-holes were broken by the waves. A steerage passenger, named Patterson, jumped overboard. The steamer was stopped, but Patterson sank before help could be got to him. In a letter which Patterson addressed to his wife in Chicago and left in his berth he said that he was tired of life and its struggles.

New Professor at Cambridge.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Lord Acton has been appointed professor of modern history at Cambridge, to succeed to the late Professor Seley. Lord Acton is 61 years old. Between 1860 and 1870 he edited two reviews and a weekly newspaper. He took a conspicuous part in the discussion resulting from the declaration of Papal infallibility and for his loyalty to Dr. Doellinger, of the Old Catholic party, was made Ph.D. in 1872 by Munich University. He is regarded as the leader of the Liberal Catholics of England.

ROSEBERY SUSTAINED

Chamberlain's Amendment Defeated in the House of Commons.

BY A MAJORITY OF FOURTEEN

The Closure of the Debate on the Address Carried by a Majority of Eight—Colonial Judges for the Privy Council Under Consideration.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—The House of Commons last evening rejected by a vote of 297 to 283 Joseph Chamberlain's amendment declaring it to be against public interest that the time of the House be wasted upon bills which the ministers admitted would not pass, when measures involving grave constitutional changes which should be considered without delay had been announced.

Sir William Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, looked after the Government's interest in the debate preceding the division on Mr. Chamberlain's motion. He referred to the Conservative demand, last voiced by Lord Salisbury on Saturday, that the Government appeal to the country on the home rule issue alone. There never had been, he declared, and there never would be, a general election with a single issue. The ministers regarded themselves as absolutely bound until condemned by the House of Commons to prosecute the policy which they had been delegated to carry out.

Arthur Balfour, the Unionist leader, replied.

After the division Sir William moved the closure of the debate on the address. The motion was carried by a vote of 279 to 271 and the address was agreed.

In the Commons yesterday Mr. Sydney Burton, Parliamentary Secretary for the Colonial Office, replying to Mr. Stanley Leighton, M.P. for Shropshire (Conservative), said that the Government had under earnest and active consideration the question of appointing colonial judges to the judicial committee of the Privy Council.

WEI-HAI-WEI CAPITULATES.

Foreigners Placed on Parole—Admiral Ting's Body Saluted.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—A despatch to the Herald from Wei-Hai-Wei says: The negotiations for the surrender of the naval stronghold of Wei-Hai-Wei have been completed. The Japanese took possession of all the guns of the forts, the ammunition and the Chinese warships. The crews of the vessels were set free and the Chinese soldiers and sailors taken to the Japanese lines on the Shantung promontory and there set free along with their officers.

The foreigners who assisted the Chinese at the defence of Wei-Hai-Wei were taken to a place some distance away, where they will be placed on parole, not to resume military or naval positions in China. It was a Chinese officer, and not a foreigner, who, after the suicide of Admiral Ting and General Chang, arranged for the surrender. Naughai is in possession of the Japanese.

LONDON, Feb. 19—A despatch from Shanghai says the magazine of the Satene fort at Tokio, Formosa, has exploded, destroying the fort, killing fifty soldiers and injuring many others. The explosion also damaged a number of houses, and injured many of the inmates.

A despatch from Shanghai to the Pall Mall Gazette says it is asserted England and Russia have offered to meditate between China and Japan. It is reported in Shanghai that the Foreign ministers in Pekin have ordered the Legation Guards, composed of sailors and marines from the warships attached to the Chinese stations, to report to the respective legations in Pekin at once. These guards have been awaiting orders in Tien Tsin for some time.

The Central News correspondent at Chee Foo says: The foreigners who were taken prisoners at Wei-Hai-Wei with the one exception of Howie have arrived here. The steamship Kangchi brought the bodies of the Chinese naval officers who committed suicide. The Japanese saluted the Kangchi, bidding a solemn and reverent farewell to Admiral Ting's body. The Chinese were greatly impressed. The Japanese will not come to Chee Foo. Junks brought the Chinese soldiers from Wei-Hai-Wei to this port.

A Rebellion in Muscat.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—A Central News despatch from Bombay says: "A serious rebellion has broken out in Muscat, the Arabian seaport on the Indian Ocean. The rebels have seized most of the forts commanding the town. No more details are obtainable."

From the Ill-Fated Elbe.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Several hats, caps and bonnets were washed ashore near Dool, Cornwall yesterday. One cap was marked "Elbe" outside and "Soper" inside. The articles are supposed to have been carried to the Cornish coast by the strong east winds of the last two weeks.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 19.—The Moscow Gazette attacks Lord Rosebery, the English Premier, for basing his views of Armenian affairs on the worthless inventions of Senor Ximenes the Spanish traveller whom it denounces as a mere adventurer and impostor.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1895.

As Others Size It.

The Ottawa Free Press thus refers to our pet local fake :—Some people living in the Peterborough district seem to think that there will not be an immediate election, as there is still so much "shilly shally" and fake work going on in connection with the Trent Valley Canal. It is stated that Mr. Haggart, when in Peterborough a few days ago, tried to avoid all reference to the subject, and had to be brought to it by someone in the audience. Anyway there are now some "doubts" as to the best routes, etc., and the plans have to be changed as usual on such occasions. No doubt there will be a good many more changes before this wonderful work is completed. All the better for Ondordonk. And yet there is a heavy deficit of $5,000,000, and Mr. Foster stated last session that the country is "nearing the end of extraordinary expenditure for heavy public works, and coming to a period when our revenue must more nearly equal our expenditure." There must be a "good time coming," but under Tory regime it seems likely to be a very long time upon the way. It is true that this wonderful scheme has been cut as election dupes for years, but has never got any "forrader." In June, 1882, on the eve of a general election, Sir John Macdonald told the Peterborough people that he had "a surplus to build the Trent Valley Canal." In 1891 the apparently defunct scheme was again fanned into life, and Sir John Macdonald telegraphed the sitting member, "Parliament will be asked in the estimates for a grant for the canal." And so ended that particular spurt. Now, the elections are impending once more, and the Trent Valley Canal is once more pressed into the public service. No doubt the people in the locality, having been fooled so often, do not expect anything this time. The most dangerous feature in the present instance is that the public generally may have to pay through the nose for this piece of electioneering trickery on the part of the Government. "My dear Onderdonk" has his finger in the pie, and the taxpayers may well feel nervous.

The Way it is to be Worked.

It is stated that the Dominion Government is to make an effort to show its good faith in reference to the Trent Valley Canal. There are, it seems, a few hundred dollars left of the appropriation made for work which have not been expended by the engineers and surveyors, and that a few men are to be employed ostensibly on actual work, especially till after the elections. It is also stated that this decision is due to representations made to the government to the effect that unless some men are actually employed, the government candidates will not get a vote on account of the canal. This action on the part of the government would not be at all remarkable—it would only be in line with the course pursued towards this important work since its political resurrection fifteen years or so ago. But the people are prepared for every move of the government. The great splurge of surveying, ostensible letting of contracts, etc., is suspicious, coming as they do on the eve of a general election. If the Government had been in earnest, all this could have been done years ago and the sections now being used as a vote factory could have been completed. The people have heard the cry of "wolf" so often that they will only be convinced by the production of the live animal itself, that is, the completed sections.

HARVEY.

Council Meeting.

(From Our Own Correspondent.

The Harvey council met at the clerk's office, on February 11th, 1895, the members all present. The minutes were read and confirmed. On motion C. E. Bonnell, M. D., was re-appointed as Medical Health Officer for Harvey, for the current year. On motion the auditors' report on accounts for 1894 was adopted, and the clerk instructed to procure 200 printed copies of the same for distribution. A by-law was passed appointing pathmasters, pound-keepers, fenceviewers, deputy-returning officers and polling places. On motion, Mr. Bewdney was appointed to inspect and furnish winter clothing for John Lancefield. He was also appointed to arrange for a right of way across lot 20, concession 15, for Sonchar's and Thurston's road. On motion, the reeve was instructed, in accordance with chap. 48, sec. 170, sub-sec. 3, Ontario statutes, for 1893, to purchase such lots at the land sales as he may deem necessary to recover taxes in arrears upon same. A by-law was passed fixing the amount to be paid for a tavern or hotel license at $200 in the whole. Accounts passed and orders drawn for payment :—W. P. Chase, auditor of accounts for 1893 and 1894, $4.00; John Elliott, auditor of accounts for 1894, $2.00; John Elliott, repairs on shed at town hall, $1.00; Scratton & Hall, advice and attending court at Lakefield, $9.00. On motion, Messrs. Bewdney and McIlmoyle were appointed a committee to examine Gordon's bridge and report, with power to act if necessary. On motion, the council adjourned to meet at Buckhorn, on Saturday, March 16th, 1895.

The Dowly Case.

Facts as Published Yesterday Confirmed by Her Husband.

Owen Sound, Feb. 18.—The case of Mrs. Dowly, as published yesterday, receives further confirmation from this town. The facts as told by her husband are as follows: "My wife was ailing from six to seven years with kidney disease, run down in flesh and could not sleep nights. She commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills about six months ago, and shortly after began to improve. After using four boxes it made a complete cure, and she is now well and strong, so that I have very good reason for recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills.

An English Physician from the Tight Little Island.

He is Pleased with Canada

Talks about Canadian People.

He Says we Have Too Many Pale and Half-Dead Women.

His Experience With Paine's Celery Compound.

Thinks it is the Right Medicine for Building up Weak and Sickly Girls and Women.

In the early part of January an English physician of high standing and considerable wealth, visited the principal cities and towns of Canada, after a tour in the United States.

He was exceedingly well pleased with what he saw of the Dominion, and spoke in glowing terms of the good nature and hospitality of our people.

When asked what he thought of Canadians from a physicological point of view, he replied :—

"Taken as a whole you have a fine, sturdy population, but there is room for improvement. You have splendid specimens of manhood ; your women generally look healthy and vigorous, but you have too many who are pale, listless and half-dead looking, such as I have met in the United States.

"Oh, yes! I know something about Paine's Celery Compound ; I haved used it occasionally myself, and know of it being used in England. I have recommended it to pale, weak and run-down women and girls in England, and it has produced very satisfactory and pleasing results. From what I know of the formula of Paine's Celery Compound, I have no hesitation as a physician, in prescribing it in cases of general debility, dyspepsia, nervous affections, kidney and liver compiaints and general weakness.

"Your pale, weak and half-dead women and girls have a true, life-building agent in Paine's Celery Compound. There is no other preparation that I know of that is so well adapted for the troubles of weak females.

"I am pleased to know that Paine's Celery Compound is so popular in your midst ; it really deserves every line of praise now received from the public."

YOUNG'S POINT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A most pleasant time was spent at the hop in the Lakeview in Kearney's Hall on Thursday evening last. The floor and music for the occasion were excellent, and over twenty-five couples tripped the light fantastic. At midnight a most recherche supper was served in excellent order, consisting of cold meats, salads, cake and fruit, and the table was most tastefully decorated.

Miss Mary Pope, of Peterborough, is visiting friends here.

Miss Nellie Young has returned home after spending a few days with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. A. Fobert and Miss Jennie, of Chemong, are spending a few weeks visiting their cousins here.

GOLD COIN VERSUS SILVER.

Preference for the Former Sustained in the U. S. Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Yesterday's session of the Senate was interesting from start to finish. Early in the day the resolution offered last Saturday by Mr. Stewart (Pop., Nev.), declaring that there was no authority in law for the purchase of gold coin in preference to other coin was laid before the Senate, and Mr. Gray (Dem., Del.) took advantage of it to reply to the attacks made last Saturday upon the President of the United States in connection with the contract for the purchase of gold by the issue of four per cent. 30 year bonds. Mr. Gray entered into a defence of the action of the President and showed that the President had twice appealed to Congress for aid in sustaining the credit of the United States; that Congress had sat dumb and irresponsive to these appeals; and that the executive action was dictated by his duty under the laws. It was entirely the fault of Congress, not of the President, if the government had to pay interest at the rate of 3 3-4 per cent. instead of 3 per cent.

Senator Sherman, (R., Ohio) also addressed the Senate, contending that a promise to pay in coin meant payment in such coin as the holder of the bond desired; and that as the government had required gold coin to be paid for all the bonds issued since 1869, honesty and fair dealing required their payment, principal and interest, in gold coin. Mr. Sherman, however, was far from approving the contract whereby four per cent., 30-year bonds were sold to the syndicate at 104 1-2, when they were really worth in the English and American market (measured by the quotations for the four per cents having ten years to run), 120. He characterized the bargain as faulty and improvident on the part of the United States, but concluded that it had now to be submitted to. There was no action on the resolution.

GING MURDER TRIAL.

Miss Wachter Testifies to Being Threatened by the Prosecution.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 19.—At the Hayward trial yesterday Miss Wachter was called to the stand. When asked as to the statement that Blixt had accused Adry Hayward of being an accomplice and that Harry was to be accused of the murder she said: "Blixt said they put up the job about two weeks before the murder and went out and picked out the spot. On the day of the murder Blixt said Adry told him to take the iron and go out to the lake where they picked out the spot and if he wanted help Frank would be there to help him."

She said that Blixt had given this as part of a statement to his attorney but that the latter had become very angry and told Blixt to say nothing more about Adry.

"After that," said Miss Wachter, "Blixt said 'I thought you wanted me to tell the truth.'"

When asked whether she had been threatened by attorneys in the case Miss Wachter replied: "I should think I had." She then told of the visit of Mr. Hall last Saturday. The attorney had flattered and threatened her. He had attacked her character and threatened her with loss of employment. She had also been threatened by the attorney for Blixt and in short her life had been made a misery.

Edward Goodsell, of Chicago, a cousin, testified to meeting Harry at the Grand Pacific Chicago, November 5 and at that he had $5,000 in cash.

Submitted to a Committee of Experts.

PARIS, Feb. 19.—A deputation representing the farmers in the departments of Pas de Clais and Nord visited M. Gadaud, Minister of Agriculture, yesterday, and pointed out to him the grave danger of infection to French cattle arising from the importation of American cattle from contagious diseases. M. Gadaud informed the delegation that the matter to which they referred had been submitted to a committee of experts on cattle diseases, and their decision would shortly be given. After leaving M. Gadaud the delegation called upon M. Ribot, the Prime Minister, and submitted their grievances to him. M. Ribot promised that he would take the matter into consideration.

Our Doctors Praise It

Lactated Food Now Used in the Homes of Physicians.

It is a notable fact that our physicians are now fully alive to the important question of infant feeding, and are taking a great interest in Lactated Food.

Our oldest and best doctors have given Lactated Food many severe tests, and in every case victory and complete satisfaction has been the result. Scores of Canadian doctors are now using this wonderful food in their own families, which is surely a strong reason why the mothers of our land should make it their choice. A well known and popular physician writes about Lactated Food as follows:—

"I have used your Lactated Food with children and in old age with very satisfactory results. It is pleasant to the taste, and apparently easily digested and assimulated. It has been especially useful for old people whose powers of digestion were weakened, furnishing them with a very pleasant and nutritious food."

HALF THE CITY DUG UP

THE PROGRESS MADE IN THE EXCAVATIONS AT POMPEII.

Professor Mann's Description of the Discoveries So Far Made in the Overwhelmed Roman City—History Beginning Long Before the Christian Era.

The City of Pompeii already existed in the sixth century, B.C., as is proved by the remains of its oldest public building, the Doric temple. Past the date of the first foundation of the city is quite unknown, says Professor Mann in the London Daily News. It was inhabited by the Oscans, a race whose language is imperfectly known through some inscriptions. The name of Pompeii is derived from a word belonging to this ancient language, the word "pompa," or "five." The city was wrested from its original inhabitants by the Samnites, when they advanced from the mountains to the coast in about the year 425 B.C. The Oscans and Samnites together, under the influence of the neighboring Greek colonies, developed a civilisation probably far outstripping that of the contemporary Romans. In the years 343 B. C. and 290 B. C. the Samnite laws led to the subjection of Pompeii by Rome. The city was drawn into the Roman confederacy, during which it preserved its independence as to home affairs. It was only in the year 80 B.C., when the Samnites were conquered by Rome, that Pompeii became entirely Romanised, being then occupied by a colony of veterans under P. Sulla, a nephew of the then dictator. The city was presently named Cornelia Veneria Pompeianorum, after the family name of the Dictator Sulla and the goddess of whom he was a special devotee, and who then became as the Venus Pompeiana, the tutelary divinity of the city. At the same time a suburb was founded, probably by the citizens who had been driven out in favor of the Roman veterans, which was named Pagus Felix, after the byname of the dictator, and later, in honor of Augustus, Pagus Augustus Felix. The descriptions which have been found at Pompeii show that many state offices existed in pre-Roman times. There was a Kombension, national assembly or senate, it is not known which; a medix or medix tutix, the chief of the city; a koaistur or quaestor, who was probably intrusted with the city treasurer; and two aidili, edilles, employed in the making of roads. Under the Romans, after 80 B. C., there were the usual decurienes, edilles and other public officers, also priests, priestesses, ministers and magistrates.

Pompeii was built on the point of an ancient stream of lava, running toward the sea, close to the then full-flowing River Sarnus. The city was the natural south-eastern port of the plain through which the river flowed. The sea was then not more than 1,500 feet distant from the city, the river serving as a harbor. On the banks of the river stood a small suburb of the city. From the busy port were exported not only the produce of the country in the interior, but also the products of the plain itself, namely, wine and vegetables. The lava was cut into millstones, which formed a large article of export in the second century B.C., but later on this source of profit ceased to be cultivated, and millstones were often imported into Pompeii from abroad. The harbor town grew more and more wealthy, from the fact that the Roman aristocracy, attracted by its beautiful situation and fine climate, began to settle in the environs. The inhabitants of Pompeii at that time numbered probably 30,000.

It will be remembered that the volcanic mountain on the slopes of which Pompeii stood, ran woke after ages of inactivity in the year 63 A.D., when many buildings were damaged or destroyed. Traces of the earthquake that happened then are still to be seen in the excavated city. Then, in 79 A.D., came the awful eruption which, while the people were still repairing the damage done in it, buried the city to a depth of more than six feet in small pumice stones and, some time later, with a rain of ashes to a similar depth. Those pumice stones and ashes were not red hot, as is generally believed, as the wood has been found seemingly carbonized, has only been thus changed by chemical processes. Traces of real burning on the mural paintings are very easily distinguished from the red tint, which, in some unexplained way, overspreads a great portion of the wall paintings when these have come in contact with the ashes. The manner in which Herculaneum was buried was very different, for there the pumice and ashes do not lie in regular strata, as in Pompeii, but are mixed together in a sort of muddy paste, which, hardened into stone during the course of time, makes excavation difficult. After the catastrophe the upper stories in the houses in Pompeii protruded above the ashes, showing where the city lay. Digging on a large scale then took place, and building material and valuable objects were carried away. All the marble, except a very few fragments, was removed in ancient times. Later on the remaining upper stories of the houses were destroyed by time, as very little of them has been found. In 73 A.D. most of the inhabitants escaped. It has been calculated that only 2,000 of the 30,000 were killed on the spot, but how far the fugitives were able to run is not known; the fact is that many of them were overtaken and buried by the falling ashes at a place on the banks of the Sarno, not far from the city, for in 1860 and 1861 many skeletons, together with many valuable objects now kept in the Naples museum, were found there.

Though the existence of Pompeii under the fields that then covered it was discovered as early as 1594, the city has only been regularly excavated since 1748, and till the year 1826 only the public buildings round the Forum, the theatre and the street of the tombs had been laid open to view. The present reasonable and scientific mode of excavation was begun by Professor Fiorelli in 1861, and continued by Professor Ruggieri, who has only just resigned his office in consequence of his advanced age. At present nearly the half of the whole city is excavated and the circle of its walls determined. It is probable that the still unexcavated part will not contain many public buildings, perhaps a few temples and baths, but if the present slow rate of excavation be continued it will take another fifty or sixty years to lay the whole city bare.

FARM AND GARDEN.

FARM WIND-BREAKS.

Why Every Country Place Should Have a Natural Fence of Willows.

Every farm needs wind-breaks, some more than others, for protection in winter and summer, for what breaks the force of the wind in the winter will not only serve the same purpose in summer, but if the right kind will also supply shade, and shade on a farm is as necessary as some other things.

Anywhere, under any circumstances, a wind-break saves—saves fuel in winter whether put into the stove or fed to the stock, and in the summer saves the life or prolongs the life of man and beast. A tight board fence costs, but it is economy to build if no other kind be available; but a board fence in the summer may be in the way and is always a radiator of heat. If it run in the right direction it may furnish shade, but other wind-breaks are better.

Better than wood, more picturesque and more useful in summer is the natural fence of willows—the common willow that grows wild in great abundance. Nothing requires less care. A farmer went into a meadow and cut an armful of willows in the spring, thrust the scions into the earth where he wanted his wind-break, making two rows, eighteen inches apart, and the work was done.

The willows grow with surprising rapidity if there be sufficient moisture, and moisture they should have in abundance at the start. After they are rooted they will grow if the soil is not moist, but they grow faster with moisture.

In two seasons they may be an appreciable wind-break, and in another the hedge will turn a cow. In the summer the hedge of willows is ornamental; it gives the yard, the buildings and the surroundings generally a bright setting; and more, it provides through the hot months shade for all small stock on the farm.

The ducks, geese, hens, chickens and the turkeys delight in the shady retreat; the turkey may make her nest there instead of going to the woods or roadside bush. In providing a living wind-break, several purposes are accomplished, every one important and useful.—George Appleton, in Farm and Fireside.

Mr. John Steele desires to express his sincere thanks and gratitude to the members of the Fire Brigade Band and those who so kindly took part in the complimentary concert given to him on Friday evening last, as well as to the public generally for their very liberal support. His wishes to extend his especial thanks to the members of the committee, who had in hand the management of the concert, and wishes to acknowledge the receipts, which were most thankfully received.

The Dark Attraction.

An enthusiastic rehearsal of the Rugby Football Minstrels was held in the Opera House last night. All the parts were gone through with. The chorus parts came out strongly and well. The first [illegible], led by Mr. Hiller, had a good practice. In this the members appear in costume, and the drill is extremely intricate and pretty; to see them coming down on the stage they appear a veritable light brigade. There will be a full rehearsal to-morrow evening at 7 p.m. Every member must attend. It is imperative and necessary that every member be on hand. The whole programme will be gone through with.

He pronounces it a decided improvement, and quite an economiser of fuel, and is going to attach it to his steamboat boiler, being convinced that it will save all that is claimed for it, as well as making the boiler less liable to scale on account of the increased circulation of the water, thus saving a good many stoppages in order to take on fuel and enabling the steamer to make better time.

A bedroom suite of native white maple with birdseye maple panels, now in A. The American Hotel Improved.

With the recent change of proprietors of the American Hotel, Hunter street, has come a decided change in the general interior of the hotel. Mr. Alex. O'Brien, the new proprietor, believes that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well, and having decided on making some changes, does not intend to stop until this well-known house is put in proper shape throughout. The playing of rink No. 3 was closely watched, the members being composed of the players who go up to Toronto this afternoon to play in the finals of the Tankard series, to-morrow.

The final matches for the Ontario Curling Association's Tankard will be played Wednesday and Thursday in Toronto. The drawing will be made to-night at 9 o'clock, at Secretary Russell's office, and there is every reason to believe that the 16 primary group will be represented by their respective champion clubs. Play in the first round will take place on the ice of the Victoria, Granite and Prospect Park clubs. The finals in the main match are set for Granite ice, and those of the consolation for Victoria.

The umpires appointed are:—Victoria Rink, John Bain; Granite Rink, Dr. J. C. Clarke; Prospect Park Rink, Robt. Armstrong.

Lord Aberdeen, the patron of the association, will not see the finals. He has written a very friendly letter to his brother curlers, regretting his inability to be present at the games, from which he had anticipated much pleasure.

An innovation has been made in the programme for the week that promises to be a very pleasant departure from the old procedure. To-morrow night the skips of the competing clubs will meet the officers of the O. C. A. in a friendly game on Victoria ice, and after two hours' play a social gathering will be held in the Victoria Club for the furtherance of good-fellowship and better acquaintance among the visiting curlers, who will represent every group in the association.

HOCKEY.

The Collegiate Institute II team drove to Keene on Saturday, and were defeated by the team of that village by a score of one goal to none. The young fellows, though handicapped by the bodily strength of their opponents, played the superior hockey. The one goal was scored in the second half by Miller for Keene. The teams lined up as follows:

The Kingston Whig speaks as follows of the match which took place in the Limestone City, Saturday:—"Peterborough hockey team defeated the Kingston Athletics, on Saturday night, in the semi-final of the O. H. A. matches. It was a smart game and full of excitement. The score ended seven to seven when time was called, and further play occurred until either side scored a goal. Peterborough, by a clean shot, was successful. The first half ended five to three in Peterborough's favour, but in the second half the Athletics, by quick rushes and fair combination work, tied the score and went one better. Then Peterborough added two goals, and half a minute before time was called the Athletics pushed the puck between the posts and evened up the figures. Peterborough in five minutes more time, won the match. Mr. Gilmour, of Osgoode Hall, refereed the game. The attendance was fair. The Peterborough rooters were enthusiastic over the result. The teams were very evenly matched. Rayner, in black, looking very much like Mephisto, was the king of the company. He played the game for the Athletics. He had to retire because of cramps before the last goal was taken, and it was his forced retirement that brought defeat to his club. During the game Phelan, of Peterborough, was retired in the first half for five minutes as the referee claimed his hockey stick had been raised above the shoulder. Phelan played a good game. The Peterborough men did better combination work than Kingston.

The News says:—"The Peterboroughs came, saw and conquered, but they tussled hard to do it and lost in the course of the proceeding their halo of glory acquired in matches with the western teams. Heralded by stories of prowess that almost frightened their young opponents of last Saturday night, everyone naturally expected them to give a great exhibition of the fast team game about which so much has been heard. As the Kingstons were a new team and genuine juniors, it was thought that they would not have a ghost of a show against the visitors. This illusion was pleasantly dispelled, the local men putting up a strong and aggressive game. The Peterborough combination was not in evidence to any great extent, the stone-wall defence work of Metcalfe and Rigney breaking it up on every occasion, before it was well started. Kingston had the game well in hand on several occasions, but luck favoured Peterborough, who won the match but with only one goal to spare.

A Kingston rush was the first item on the programme and for several minutes play was entirely in the visitors' territory, Thompson ending the suspense by putting the rubber through. Nobody was more surprised than the Kingstonians by this satisfactory opening and their satisfaction was increased when Rayner put in another shortly afterwards, Peterborough having scored only one in the meantime. Then things looked blue for a time. Wonham, Davidson and King scored one each for the visitors in succession, and the Peterborough contingent "enthused" correspondingly. The Kingstons were not disheartened at all and Rayner and Nolan after many plucky but ineffectual attempts succeeded in scoring again. Peterborough did likewise and at half time the score stood 5 to 3 in their favour.

The second half opened promisingly for the local boys. Nolan scored once and Rayner twice in short order and the hopes of their friends rose high as they secured the lead. Then King evened up and Davidson put Peterborough ahead after a plucky dash up the ice. Kingston tied the score once more just before time, forcing the puck through by a combined dash. This made an extra period of play necessary and the excitement was intense as the rubber shot up and down the ice followed by the players. Everybody shouted encouragement and the men plainly were doing their utmost. Kingston was weakened by the absence of Rayner, who was compelled to retire on account of injuries received. Probably this fact accounted for the triumph of the visitors as much as anything else, but whatever the reason, they scored the deciding goal and the contest concluded amid great excitement.

A Very Enthusiastic and Important Meeting Held Last Night.

The regular fortnightly meeting of the Young People's Association of St. John's was held in the school house last night and was well attended. In the absence of the president, Rev. J. C. Davidson occupied the chair. Reports were received from the various committees showing progress of work, and several names were handed in to be placed on the roll. Miss Kate Henderson and Miss M. Perry were elected to fill vacancies on the programme and fatigue committees respectively.

When the general business of the evening was taken up several members were of the opinion that a slight change ought to be made during the Lenten season. Others thought that a pronounced change should be be made. After a good deal of discussion it was decided that a slight change be made to the effect that during the evening a paper on some religious historical subject be read as part of the programme.

A short programme, consisting of a military recitation by Master Cranfield, instrumental selection by Miss Vink, and choruses by the members was rendered, after which the meeting adjourned until March 4th.

THE FORTNIGHTLY CLUB.

The Iron and Nickel Deposits of Ontario—An Interesting Meeting.

The eighth regular meeting of the club was held last evening, and was largely attended.

Mr. Fife, instead of speaking generally on the mineral resources of Ontario, confined himself to the iron and nickel deposits. He referred first to the fact that only two of the five great geological ages (apart from the present age), namely, the Palæozoic and the Azoic ages, were represented in Ontario; and that only the three most ancient of the five periods of the Palæozoic age, namely, the Devonian, Silurian, and Cambrian, were to be found. These three systems of rock deposits, together with the Huronian and Laurentian systems belonging to the Azoic age, are, therefore, the "rock bottom" of our Province. As everybody knows these systems are the most ancient formations, and it is here we get our iron, copper and nickel.

THE HURONIAN AND LAURENTIAN

rocks extend from the Lake of the Woods to Lake Superior, thence eastward to the Ottawa River, and thence across the St. Lawrence to the Adirondaak Mountains in New York.

Iron has been known to exist in Ontario since 1800, and the first blast furnace was built at Gananoque Falls in that year. Mr. Fife gave a brief history of the attempts to work the mines in eastern, central and northern Ontario, all of which attempts have been more or less failures. The supply, however, is practically inexhaustible, though there is some difference of opinion as to the quality. Magnetite and Hematite ores are the varieties we have in greatest abundance. The former contains quantities of sulphur and titanium, which are somewhat difficult to get rid of. Mr. Fife thinks that we could produce charcoal iron—for many purposes preferable to coke iron—at a lower price than it costs in the United States; and that, since we are well protected three or four blast furnaces would succeed, if established. There is not, however, a furnace in the province; but we get our raw material from the United States and England.

FROM FOREIGN COMPETITION,

There has been greater success in nickel mining. The deposit occurs in the Huronian belt, which extends from the north shore of Lake Huron to Lake Abbittibi, near Quebec, a distance of 300 miles by 75 miles wide. It is in the Sudbury region that the nickel is illimitable. The output from the Sudbury mines was 1,076,446 lbs. more than the total production of the United States for the 16 years previous. Nickel is coming into wider use than formerly, being employed in union with steel for many purposes.

Mr. Strickland added much to the interest of the evening by bringing to the meeting some of his valuable collection of minerals. In his remarks on the paper, he expressed the opinion that our supply of iron but that until this fact was clearly ascertained, it should not be given out as a fact. It is often the case that those mines which appear most promising, turn out to be very limited. Interested parties have perhaps greatly exaggerated the extent of the Ontario ore, by treating the surmises of scientific men as ascertained facts.

WAS WITHOUT LIMIT,

Mr Irwin referred to the large percentage of metal in our nickel ores—3½ to 4 per cent—and to the disproportion between our mineral output and that of the United States, the proportion being $2.50 to $0.00.

Mr. Hay spoke of having received many inquiries as to our iron from parties in the United States, who seemed to be satisfied as to the quality of the ore and were only concerned about the quantity.

Mr. Dumble, in his interesting way, gave some facts which had come under his own observation.

The excellence of the paper was generally commented on. The next meeting will be held on Monday, March 12th. Programme—"The Censorship of the Press," R. M. Denhistoun, B.A. Special speakers—Mr. J. R. Stratton, M. P. P., Rev. W. B. Young, B. A., Mr. J. Jeffries, B. A., and Mr. F. H. Dobbin.

Municipal Union and Machinery Exemption Discussed—The Questions Referred to the Town Council.

A regular meeting of the Ratepayers Association was held in the council chamber last evening. There were present the president, T. H. Bradburn, in the chair, the secretary, Mr. W. G. Morrow, and Messrs. E. H. Abell, W. H. Moore, J. J. Hartley, Jas. Carnegie, Geo. Dunsford, Adam Hall, A. Stevenson, A. L. Davis and Mayor Kendry.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, and the secretary read

COMMUNICATIONS:

From the Finance Committee of the Town Council in reference to municipal union, stating they had not secured sufficient data in the matter to take action.

From the city clerks of Ottawa, Belleville, London and Woodstock, in reference to street pavement, and the cost of laying in the above cities.

The question of the relative cost in each place and the material used was discussed briefly by the members, and on motion of Messrs. Hartley and Carnegie, Messrs. Chairman Bradburn, Dumble, Hall, Kendry and Denniston were appointed a committee to enquire into the matter of street pavement.

THE QUESTION OF EXEMPTION.

At a meeting recently held of the Executive Committee, the question of the exemption of manufacturing machinery was discussed, and a sub-committee appointed to deal with it. Mr. Carnegie being a member of that committee, the president called upon him to express his views.

Mr. Carnegie stated that the increased prosperity of the town depended on our population. There were many, he stated, who took grounds against the exempting of manufacturies, but he did not take that stand. They were all there, he continued, to discuss the best means to promote the interests of the place. Other places were holding out inducements to manufacturing concerns to locate in their midst, and he believed that it was in the best interests to exempt all machinery in town. It was certainly wrong, he contended, to exempt one manufacturer and burden others in the same business, and it was desirable, he thought, to exempt all machinery in the municipality. When the machinery was not employed it proved to be a burden to the owner, and a manufacturer going into the money market was forced to pay a very high rate of interest. He claimed that those who put money in manufactories should receive the encouragement of exemption. The assessment on machinery in town, according to the assessment roll, amounted to only $68,000, and under that head the loss to the town would be $1,700, and the burden placed on the rest of the town would amount to about $1,000. The council of the city of Hamilton had passed a resolution exempting all machinery in the city, and had instructed the assessors to that effect. It was questionable if they were legally qualified to pursue that course, and Mr. Carnegie was of the opinion that it would be wise to deal with the question legally. There would be no difficulty under existing law to exempt for a period of ten years. He also believed that the buildings should be exempt, but those questions should be discussed separately. In concluding, Mr. Carnegie said he believed that if the town would adopt this policy it would have nothing to lose. He then read the following resolution:

Whereas the value of immovable property very largely depends upon the density of the population residing thereon or adjacent thereto, and whereas it is desirable in the interests of the ratepayers of Peterborough that its population should be increased, and whereas such increase can only be brought about by its becoming more and more a manufacturing centre:

Be it therefore resolved that to this end the Town Council be respectfully requested to pass a by-law or by-laws providing for the exemption from taxation of all machinery, patterns and plants used for manufacturing purposes, such exemption to be to the largest extent and for the largest period authorised by the Municipal Act.

Mr. J. J. Hartley stated that although he was not very much in favour of exemption, still he believed that the question of exemption of machinery would induce manufactures to locate here, and expressed himself in favour of the proposal.

Mayor Kendry stated in reference to the action of the city council of Hamilton in the question of exemption, that no city had made as much progress as Hamilton. In regard to the business he was interested in, he stated they were forced to replace their machinery every ten years in order to keep abreast with modern improvements, and be in the race of competition. In discussing the question of the exemption of machinery, which he favoured, he stated he discussed it having in view the best interests of the town, and it certainly would be to the advantage of the town to place all on the same level.

Mr. W. H. Moore had no fixed idea on the matter, and was not altogether convinced of the propriety of what was proposed to be done. If other towns were moving in this matter we should consider it seriously. It should be discussed before the legislature, and the whole question sifted. It was not fair to exempt one portion and shoulder the responsibility on other ratepayers.

Mr. Carnegie in reply inquired of Mr. Moore where the town would be if it were not for the machinery? Why was it, he continued, the best town in Canada, and why did farmers prefer coming long distances to market in Peterborough?

Mayor Kendry stated that in other towns they hardly tax the manufacturing concerns. Take for instance the towns of Sherbrooke, Almonte and Campbellford, where factories were exempted for twenty years. He did not agree with the arguments of Mr. Moore. All manufactories, he believed, should be dealt with fairly.

Mr. A. L. Davis, in referring to the question, stated that he had very little interest in manufactories, but he was in sympathy with the resolution. We were all proud of our town, and when we see other places drawing in manufacturers we should do likewise. We have, he said, a case, which shows the position in respect to the ratepayers and manufacturers—the Canadian General Electric Works, which were exempted. Their weekly pay roll is large, and the money is spent in town, being in amount from $25,000 to $30,000 per year to the merchants. In his opinion, the only policy to adopt was to exempt as other towns were doing.

Mr. P. McNamara, from the audience, also spoke strongly in favour of exemption.

The submitting of Mr. Carnegie's resolution to the meeting by the President evoked more discussion, several members being in favour of laying the matter over until another meeting when there would be a larger attendance of members. The discussion finally drifted into the question of exemption again, and the matter was pretty thoroughly dealt with, and finally, on motion of Messrs. Carnegie and Davis, it was decided that the resolution be adopted and presented to the Town Council. It was further decided that a copy be also sent to the Board of Trade and their co-operation asked.

CHANGE OF MEETING NIGHT.

As the regular meeting night of the Association conflicted with other events held on the same evenings, it was moved by Messrs. Hartley and Carnegie, and carried, that the next regular meeting be held on the last Tuesday of March.

BADLY RUN DOWN.

A Phrase that Expresses the Condition of Thousands—How one Man Regained his Health.

Mr. Geo. E. Quinn is one of the principal workmen in the establishment of the Brantford Carriage Co., and is highly esteemed by both his employers and fellow-workmen. At one time Mr. Quinn's system was so badly run down that he was forced to quit his trade, but no one seeing him to-day was ever imagine that his health was anything but the most robust. To a reporter of the Expositor, Mr. Quinn said in reference to his health: "I was not really suffering from any disease. I was simply in the condition known as 'run down,' and my condition was so bad that I was forced to quit my trade. Having read so often of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I at last determined to give them a trial, and I can state emphatically that it was that medicine that made the complete and desirable change you see in my condition. I feel like a new man, am able now to do as much work as any man, and have not lost a day's work through illness since I finished the Pink Pill treatment. I can, and do, recommend Pink Pills whenever the opportunity arises, and I know of several in the shop who have taken them and been greatly benefitted."

To those whose system is run down from overwork, worry or from any cause, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer the most speedy and effectual means for a complete restoration to health and strength. They build up the blood, restore shattered nerves and cure when all other medicines fail. Refuse imitations and other so-called blood builders, which are worthless, and may be dangerous to the health.

NEW YEAR NEW GOODS NEW LEAF 1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Clothe and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will let off cheap.

A FORTUNE FOR A SONG.

THE AUTHOR OF "AFTER THE BALL" TELLS HOW IT WAS COMPOSED.

5,000,000 Copies Have Already Been Sold —All His Famous Ballads Founded on Incidents in Real Life, Which Helps Their Popularity.

Mr. Charles K. Harris is a man who has earned popularity by writing a famous song. As the author of "After the Ball" he has made himself both famous and rich. And yet he is not a musician, don't know one note from another, and turns out entirely by ear the airs that later are sung up and down the land, and are printed by hundreds of thousands.

Mr. Harris was an obscure banjo teacher in Milwaukee. He had written several ballads, but none of them "caught on" until one morning in the spring of 1893 he awoke to find himself famous. Orders for "After the Ball" came from leading dealers in 5,000 lots, and he began to enjoy an income of over $1,000 a day.

His first songs were sold to publishers, but he decided to become his own publisher, and one of his songs, written before "After the Ball" and entitled "Kiss and Let's Make Up," netted him $8,000. Mr. Harris is about thirty years of age. He lives in Milwaukee in a sixteen-room house, built by him a year ago. He is married.

The other day Mr. Harris was asked where he got his ideas for his descriptive ballads. He said in reply:

"Well, ordinarily, a man gives no thought to his surroundings. But with me it is different. I notice many little things on the street, in the cars, or in a theatre, which most people wouldn't bother themselves about. I happened to be in Chicago about two years ago. I was waiting for my train, and by my side stood a handsome man with a beautiful golden-haired child. The train from Milwaukee drew in and a beautiful, stylishly-dressed lady stepped from a car and was passing through the gates when she spied the child. The child at the same moment gave a scream of delight and was rushing to her outstretched arms, when the gentleman quickly drew the child away and sprang into the car.

C. K. HARRIS, AUTHOR OF "AFTER THE BALL."

"It seemed that they were parted, and I found out from the conductor afterwards that she had left her husband, who was a prominent insurance man, for an actor. From that scene was originated 'Fallen by the Wayside,' which is one of the hits on my catalogue."

"Will you tell me how you came to write 'After the Ball?'"

"I attended a ball in Chicago given by one of the prominent clubs there and stood talking to a handsome business man. I noticed that his eyes constantly followed a certain young lady in the ballroom. I found out subsequently that they had been engaged, but had parted through some lovers' quarrel. While he was dancing with other girls she would anxiously watch him. I knew by the expression of their faces that their hearts were aching.

"On my return home I was in my office completely tired out, when a member of the Wheelmen's Club came and asked me to compose a song for an entertainment to be given by the club. I told him I was too tired after the ball, but if he would leave me alone I could perhaps compose something for him in time for the entertainment. The words 'after the ball' kept ringing in my ears, and I could not rest. I sat down at the piano, and at that moment I had the entire idea, music, subject and all. In an hour the song was finished.

"It was sung at the Wheelmen's Club. The singer forgot the third verse and the song fell flat. I put the manuscript away in disgust and forgot all about it. One day I received an order from Chicago for ten copies of the song. I wrote back that the song was in press, quickly resurrected the manuscript, sent it over to my printer and had a thousand copies struck off. Orders came in very slowly for the first six months. Really, I did not give much attention to it, as my mind was on other songs which I had just published, mainly 'Kiss and Let's Make Up,' which was proving a great hit.

"I placed a small advertisement in the dramatic papers and received several orders from professionals for the song. All at once, before I could realize it, it was being sung in nearly every theatre and home in the English-speaking world. There have been more copies of 'After the Ball' sold than of any other song known in history, excepting 'Home, Sweet Home.' Three million copies have been sold up to the present day. I am continually receiving large orders for it. For months my income from this song alone was from $1,000 to $1,200 a day."

Hanging a Stable Door.

In windy climates some other way of hanging the stable door than swinging it on hinges is greatly desired. A device to do this is shown in this engraving, and can be made from the following description. For a doorway three by eight feet, make a batten door in the usual manner, weigh it, and procure two square sash weights that together will just balance the door, or make the door to balance the weights. Purchase about eight yards of sash cord and two large sash pulleys. Place in position a frame made of two by eight inch plank having the pulleys near the top, and fit the door so that it will slide up and down without wearing the cord. Fasten the sash cords to the bottom of the door near the batten. On each side of the door fasten to the frame strips of inch square pieces to hold the door in position. The weights may slide up and down on the sides of the frame, which may project out far enough for the purpose, or be boxed in to protect them and the cord from the weather. This method costs less than the common overhead hangers, is very durable, can be used for doors or shutters, and any farmer who is handy with tools can easily put it into practice.

A SECURELY HUNG STABLE DOOR.

Washing the Bark of Trees.

In spite of the many professional theories about the nature of bark and the injury to it from being coated with outside material, the German farmers of Pennsylvania have extremely healthy apple trees by washing the bark with lime. No cleaner or healthier bark may be seen on apple trees anywhere than those German trees present. The white color of the lime is of course objectionable, but this may be readily obviated by putting a little yellow clay or even coal ashes in.

NO SUCH THING AS OLD AGE

To those who use South American Nervine

A Lady of 80 Years Permanently Cured by this Wonderful Medicine.

Three Doctors said "Old Age was Her Complaint" and Gave Her Up—Three Bottles of Nervine Gave Relief—Twelve Bottles Cured Absolutely.

MRS. JOHN DINWOODY, Flesharton, Ont.

Wordsworth speaks of "An old age serene and bright, and lovely as a Lapland night." And elsewhere this same writer talks of "An old age, beautiful and free." These are conditions that come to the man or woman, though their years may border close on to a century, when in the enjoyment of good health. In fact it is difficult to think of some of the old men and women on the stage of life to-day as old people, there seems to be such a perennial youthfulness about their every movement and act.

Does someone tell us that cases like this must be the exception and not the rule with those who have approached to or gone beyond the allotted three score years and ten? Not so, if they have become acquainted with the virtues contained in South American Nervine. Before us in this sketch is the picture of Mrs. John Dinwoody, of Flesharton, Ont., a resident of that town for forty years. No person in the town and country side around is perhaps better known than this lady, and none more highly esteemed. Three years ago it was her sad lot to loose a daughter who had been all the world to her. The shock sustained by this event completely broke up the system of Mrs. Dinwoody, she supposed her end had come. She doctored for one year with three doctors, and they gave her case up, saying that it was one of old age and no one, nor any medicine could do her good. Made of the kind of stuff that gives beauty to age at any time she did not despair. She was influenced to try Nervine. She took three bottles, and this was sufficient to show her that her end was not yet. From these she obtained relief. She persevered, and in all took twelve bottles of the medicine, with the result that she is to-day completely cured of that breaking-up of the system that threatened her three years ago.

There is nothing wonderful in the fact that Mrs. Dinwoody would proclaim to the thousands of old people throughout this broad land, that with old age does not necessarily come decline, decrepitude and disease. Why should we not live into the eighties and nineties, and cross the border of the century?

South American Nervine, whether the person be young or old, gets at the nerve centers, and when they are kept in proper condition the system is as well able to withstand disease at eighty as at thirty. With this prospect in view who would not live to an old age and enjoy the pleasures of family, friends and society, and take a part in watching the marvelous progress and developments of these closing days of a wonderful century, which marks as not the least of its wonderful discoveries, the discovery of South American Nervine.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
An' said, 'be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home.
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

WOMEN IN THE ARMY.

Many of the Heroic Deeds Performed by the French Cantinieres.

In the list of decorations given by the French Minister of War on January 1st, there appears the name of Mme. Cordier, the cantiniere of the Seventy-Second Regiment of Infantry at Amiens. She received the military medal. Judging from her heroic acts she is well worthy of it. She distinguished herself during the war of 1870-71, and after the capitulation of Sedan she saved several officers by hiding them in her wagon. Before that she followed her regiment to Africa and took part in more than one expedition. Mme. Cordier is one of the oldest cantinieres. The oldest of all is Mme. Vialard. She served thirty-seven years, went through four campaigns, and received two medals. She is a Lorraine woman, and began her military career in the Crimea.

One of the most celebrated cantinieres was Mother Joey. She was in the Crimean, the Italian and the Mexican campaigns. Generally she went on foot, and supported all the fatigues of the march like a man. She was the cantiniere of the Third Zouaves, and died at Blidah at the age of seventy-four years. She also received the military medal.

Mme. Vialard, whom we have mentioned above, received the military medal in 1856. Before July, Mme. Madeleine Trimoreau, the cantiniere of the Second Regiment of Zouaves, received the same decoration for her conduct at the battle of Magenta. As long as she had any cognac in her little cask she went from rank to rank reviving the wounded and exhausted soldiers, and displaying contempt for the whistling bullets, which nonetheless tore her short dress. When the last drop of cognac was given out she took up the gun of a wounded soldier and accompanied the Zouaves in their bayonet charge without receiving a scratch.

Since the month of August, 1890, an ordinance from the war ministry has forbidden the distinctive costume of the cantinieres, and, in addition to this, the Minister decided that they should not appear on parade with the troops, but should remain with their wagons. Consequently we were obliged to bid farewell to the pretty tri-color uniform, the red and blue dress and white apron so often made famous on the field of battle, and which more than one military painter has immortalized in his pictures.

In old engravings the vivandieres are represented as old women, with energetic faces and a masculine air; and, as a matter of fact, such they very often were. Mingling with the conscripts, speaking familiarly to the old soldiers they acquired masculine habits. But in some regiments, and especially the cavalry regiments, the cantiniere was the pride of the regiment, and we might cite one regiment of dragoons, for example, in which there were seven that had the reputation of being extremely beautiful girls. Their green uniform and white apron were very becoming to them. In addition, they were excellent horsewomen, for they were obliged to ride on horseback when the squadrons to which they were attached were called to arms.

The history of the vivandieres, if it were written, would contain more than one thrilling chapter and many thrilling pages. On more than one occasion they distinguished themselves by their courage. Like the soldiers themselves, they loved the number of their regiment, and their wagon was often used as an ambulance. Under fire they followed their battalion, picking up the wounded and quenching their thirst, and often consoling the dying.

As one can easily imagine, under such conditions the life of the cantiniere is not without danger. Many of them were not spared by the bullets. Mme. Rajan, the cantiniere of the Second Algerian Rifles, received four wounds during the last Franco-German war, and another cantiniere, Mme. Massey, was also wounded. In regard to this latter, there is one act of heroism that is mentioned by the Courier des Etats Unis. The mother of a soldier in her battalion asked her to watch over him. He was killed. Mme. Massey ran up to him, kissed him, and, crying out, "You shall be avenged!" rushed to the front rank in the place of the dead soldier, and was among the last to fire a shot.

Mme. Telman, cantiniere of the Second Regiment of Zouaves at Reichshofen, lifted up Col. Detris, who was badly wounded, and did so under the very lances of the Uhlans. She took part in a memorable defense of Bitche. The poor woman is now blind.

Finally, we have Mme. Bondu of the Thirty Fourth Regiment of the line, who distinguished herself in the combats of Patay and Coulmiers.

A few days after these battles, in which she displayed the most remarkable courage, she gave birth to a son. Speaking of the baby who said: "That's a chap that will never be afraid of the rattle of artillery!"

There are also cantinieres who are decorated with the Legion of Honor, among them Mme Jarrethout, the cantiniere of the Free Shooters of Chateaudun.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you if it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's oldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

KEEPING LOVE ALIVE.

Mrs. Lynn Linton Says Some Sensible Things on the Subject.

Sometimes Mrs. Lynn Linton says such wise things that the lover of humanity wishes they might be painted and posted in conspicuous places all the world over. Some of her recent utterances on the art of "keeping love alive" are among these. Mrs. Linton does not believe that any good things, from life itself down, can exist without special effort on the part of the person to whom they are intrusted. Badness dies without care. Health disappears unless precautions are taken to keep it. Intellect is dwarfed and starved without food. And even these finest and most elusive possessions—love and friendship—need care and nourishment if they are to live.

"Too many," says Mrs. Linton, "suppose that a love once confessed and consolidated needs never more expression—that friendship once knitted up will last forever without care to keep the loops from 'running' and the threads from loosening. No greater error, and none more disastrous to happiness, can exist. Love and friendship need as much care to keep alive as that greenhouse flower we spoke of before, or the business which lives by a man's exertions and dies by his neglect. How often young married people blunder in this, and, taking marriage to mean per se adamantine stability, neglect the simplest precautions to insure continuance! 'At home' with each other as they are, sure of each other's affections as they are, they put no restraint on themselves, but 'let themselves go' in speech, habits, temper, appearance, as all of minor importance, where the main thing, their love, is all right. She, in a crumpled dressing-gown, with untidy hair and discolored hands—he, in broken slippers and shabby coat, unbrushed, unshaven, unkempt—and both unappetizing to the last degree; this begins the first process of degradation. She, peevish and discontented over small matters, whereof, were she wise, he would never have heard the very echo—he, preoccupied, snappish, unsympathetic; and both without self-restraint or reticence; this begins the second process of disintegration. But they come together again after their little tiffs, and in the beginning of things the old proverb about the quarrels of lovers holds good—but only in the beginning of things. By degrees that coming together is slacker, and the elasticity of recovery is losing daily. The love that is between them begins to die for want of keeping alive by care, and soon the sorrowful tense is changed and for 'is' we read 'was.'

"So with friendship, which indeed requires as much tact and care to keep alive as love itself, being in its essence love without the passion that inflames that other form. Two friends have all faith and confidence in each other. That does not excuse the neglect by which one, we will say the younger, tries the stability of the elder's affection. Letters left long unanswered or but scantily replied to when acknowledged—reticence over those pleasant little occurrences of daily life which keep the interest active, and which seems when told to bring the two parted spheres into closer contact together—in a word, neglect, though only in small and trivial matters, as surely kills the sweet growth of friendship as personal neglect and unrestrained tempers kill that of love. For nothing on earth is immortal and nothing is unchangeable. No affection that lives in the human breast is indestructible, and even the mother's love can be chilled, alienated and destroyed. If this be so with the most intense, the most deeply rooted of all, how much more then will others which are in a manner what may be called growths of super-imposition—something that comes after and upon the more purely instinctive and prototypical? No! Friendship and love have to be kept alive by a little care, a little attention to details, a little self-restraint, keeping one back from an ungainly amount of self-indulgence."

Those are wise words, and friends and lovers everywhere will do well to read, mark, learn and inwardly digest them.

One Palatable Siberian Dish.

There is a Siberian dish called "pilman," that makes good eating in Canada on a cold day, and can be made to utilize scraps of cold meat, though the Russian dish calls for fresh meat. Chop quite fine about a pound of cold meat—steak, if you use fresh meat; put with it one small onion and season well; then add a cup of rich gravy. If the meat is fresh, cook for a few moments in the gravy, for the Canadian palate likes well cooked meats. If the meat has been cooked, simply heat it through and set aside to cool while you make the paste. Beat up one egg; then add it to a pound of flour, salted slightly, and work into a stiff, tough dough, with as little water or milk as possible. Roll the dough very thin and cut out round pieces, in the center of which put two tablespoonfuls of meat. Gather the edges up and pinch together, as for apple dumplings; then put them in a kettle of boiling soup stock. As soon as they come to the surface of the stock they are sufficiently cooked. Serve them with a gravy broth made of melted butter, with a dash of vinegar in it, or with a boat of the broth in which they were boiled.

An Original Doctor.

Professor Zakharin, one of the most celebrated doctors in Russia, who was in attendance on the Czar, is an original character, whose feats of eccentricity have added to his fame. When the state of the Emperor became alarming, the Governor of Moscow received from St. Petersburg a telegram ordering him to send Dr. Zakharin without delay. The Governor dispatched his aide-de-camp to him. "In two hours," said the officer, "the express train will start." "The express! What do you mean?" exclaimed the professor. "The Emperor is ill, and you talk to me about a train leaving in two hours! Go to the railway manager, and command him to get a special train for me in twenty minutes." It was done.

The only blood-purifier admitted on exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair was Ayer's Sarsaparilla, all others being excluded as secret preparations and patent medicines. With doctors and pharmacists, it has always been considered a standard remedy.

LAURIER SPEAKS IN MONTREAL.

Maintains His Former Attitude on Questions of the Day.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 19.—Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, leader of the Liberal party in the Dominion, addressed a Liberal meeting of nearly 10,000 people at Sohmer park last night.

Mr. Laurier, who spoke in French, dealt with the minor issues before the electors, covering the same ground as already covered in his previous speeches. He scored the Government for not announcing its decision in regard to the general elections and challenged the ministers to make some announcement of its plans. Regarding the Manitoba school question, Mr. Laurier said the Government was evidently afraid of it. It was a question that had to be settled, but it required men of courage to settle it, and the only policy that the Government seemed to have was one of procrastination.

Mr. Laurier said that his attitude in this question was what it had always been. He had frequently said, and he repeated it, that if the schools were Protestant, as had been represented, it was an outrage on the Catholic minority, and justice demanded that the question should be settled as speedily as possible. He promised that if the Liberals were returned to power they would see that justice was done to all. Mr. Laurier also denounced protection, which he claimed had been an injury rather than a blessing to the country.

Mr. H. G. Joly endorsed Mr. Laurier and speeches were also delivered by Messrs. Tarte, Devlin and others.

During the meeting what nearly proved a panic took place owing to the breaking of a window. The crowd rushed on to the platform and it was only after a strong appeal from Mr. Laurier that quiet was restored and the speakers were able to proceed.

Khedive Will Marry the Slave Girl.

Confirmed by the Italian Consul.

ROME, Feb. 19.—The Italian Consul at Erzeroum has reported to his Government that he has confirmed the accounts of the Armenian massacres with the testimony of eye-witnesses.

T. H. & B. Suit Against the Spec.

HAMILTON, Feb. 19.—Carscallen & Cahill, acting for the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo Railway Co., have issued a writ a writ against the Spectator Printing Co. for $50,000 for alleged libel. The action is based on two articles which appeared in the Spectator on January 11, a day or two after the collapse of the Binkley Hollow bridge. The articles described the road as being built in a cheap and unsafe manner and insinuated that the whole road was being constructed in like way. Notice of the action was served some weeks ago. The case will probably come to trial at the April assizes.

Agitating Soup Kitchens in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19.—"Bread or work" is the cry of the unemployed of the East end, and it is now swelling louder than ever. A delegation is now being selected by the idle workingmen to go before the Mayor either to-day or to-morrow and ask that soup kitchens be opened immediately. It is stated that there are over 1,000 idle workmen in the eastern part of the city who find it impossible to get anything to [illegible] and whose families are actually on the verge of starvation.

Conservatives of Russell County.

OTTAWA, Feb. 19.—At a convention of the Conservatives at Eastman Springs in Russell County yesterday, E. N. Hurtubise was nominated as a candidate to contest the riding at the next general election. The nomination was made unanimous.

Biliousness and Liver Complaint, headache, etc., are cured by Burdock Pills.

SUING FOR DAMAGES.

One of the Keith Suspects Trying to Get Even for False Arrest.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—One of the Chattelle murder suspects who suffered at the hands of the amateur detectives who swarmed about Listowel, the days succeeding Jessie Keith's murder, is bringing suit against his captors for false arrest.

James McCabe, an insurance agent of Arthur, was walking home from a party on the morning of October 1, the day after the murder, when John Marshall, a reeve in Wellington county, overtook him on the road between Fergus and Alma. Marshall, who was driving, sized up the pedestrian for the murderer and asked him to take a ride. McCabe climbed into the rig and was immediately driven to jail, locked up and precautions taken to save him from lynching. It required a day's time to show the officials that they had made a mistake and for what he suffered in that day and since McCabe asks for $10,000. He began suit yesterday at Osgoode Hall.

A Hamilton Man's Suicide.

HAMILTON, Feb. 19.—Henry Geiger, a German, who for many years kept a quiet hotel at King and Queen streets, was found yesterday hanging by a rope from the top round of a ladder leading to the loft in his barn. He left a short note in German saying that he was tired of life, and that business and other troubles had led him to determine on suicide. Recently Geiger lost considerable money by backing a note for a friend. Two months ago he separated from his second wife, whom he had supposed was a widow before he married her, but about a year ago the husband returned after being thought dead for many years. Geiger was 65 years old and left a grown-up family. No inquest will be held.

Political Fight in London Council.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 19.—The Conservative members of the council have been given to understand that writs were being issued by the Liberals against the Conservative members of last year's council on the ground that they were disqualified because they had not levied a sufficient rate to meet the sinking fund. It is a question whether or not the county judge, before whom these writs must be tried, will hold that the aldermen of last year were disqualified under the Act. They claim that they believed the rate struck was ample. The council expected to get $47,000 from the water commissioners, which they did not, the money having to be used to pay for extension facilities. The money has since been paid into the sinking fund.

Arrested for Child Desertion.

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 19.—Lydia Venton, who recently arrived from Toronto, was arrested on the charge of child desertion. She left her infant at the door of a resident here. In the police station the unfortunate girl admitted her guilt. She gave her correct name saying her age was 19 years and that she was known in the city, having worked here as a dressmaker until a few years ago, when she went to Toronto to work at her trade. She gave the name of a well known Kingstonian, who, she said, had accomplished her ruin under promise of marriage. The girl appeared before the police magistrate and was remanded to give her an opportunity of communicating with her friends.

A Homeless Unfortunate.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—A lunatic named Vina Earls, who came to Toronto last Thursday from the east, and who was sent to the jail, is still there awaiting instructions from her friends, whose names, however, have not yet been ascertained. She has stated to the jail authorities that she came from Trenton and was married the day before she left there to a man named Welch. She says that she lived for a time with a man named Benjamin Mallory, near Cobourg, and that Dr. Mallory attended her when sick. She could tell nothing more except that she was an inmate of the Toronto Asylum seven years ago. The police are looking for her friends.

A Toll Road Trouble.

HAMILTON, Feb. 19.—The Barton and Stoney Creek Consolidated Road Company have had H. Anderson summoned before the magistrate for driving on their road for 100 yards in order to reach the free road opened up by the Hamilton, Grimsby and Beamsville Electric Railway. The toll road company has also applied for an injunction to restrain the H. G. & B. Co. from using land along its line as a highway for vehicles, for the purpose of avoiding the payment of toll on plaintiff's road. The city will probably defend this suit.

T. H. & B. Men Quit Work.

HAMILTON, Feb. 19.—About 250 to 300 laborers employed on Section 20 of the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo Railway quit work on Saturday night because they had not been paid their wages. The delay is bad for Bracey Bros. & Co., of Chicago, the contractors, and if the work is not completed in time it is probable the penalty of $360 a day will be enforced against them.

Florida Oranges Seized and Destroyed.

BUFFALO, Feb. 19.—Office of the Health Department seized and destroyed 45 boxes of Florida oranges, part of a consignment of 2,000 boxes which the Health Department had condemned. The balance of the 2,000 boxes will be sent to Baltimore principally, but some 300 or 400 boxes went to Canada. The stock seized here was taken by the garbage collectors to the rendering works and cremated.

Will Press the Removal of the Embargo.

ANTWERP, Feb. 19.—In consequence of the report of the Belgian specialist, Dr. Nocard, expressing doubt as to the presence of pleuro-pneumonia in the Canadian cattle which have been landed at Antwerp, representatives of Canada are about to apply to the Belgian government for a removal of the restrictions at present in force.

Governor Morton's Partisanship.

ALBANY, Feb. 19.—Geo. W. Aldridge, recently appointed superintendent of public works, has removed the three Democratic assistant superintendents of the Erie canal and appointed three "Platt" Republicans as successors, one being a brother-in-law of Gov. Morton. The Democrats had refused to resign and the removals were solely for partizan reasons. Each of the assistant superintendents receives $3,000 per annum and travelling expenses.

THE "SUN" LIFE LEADS IN RESERVE REFORM.

IT DECIDES TO ADOPT THE 4 PER CENT. HM. RESERVE BASIS.

The Following Article is Copied From the Current Number (Feb. 15) of the Insurance and Finance Chronicle—It is of Interest to the Insuring Public.

The rate of interest which should be employed in valuing the liabilities of life companies is rapidly becoming a burning question in Canada. The Dominion Parliament so far as lies in its power, has settled the matter for Canada by declaring that the basis to be used in valuing life policies shall be the Hm. mortality Table, with interest at four and a half per cent. There are persons, however, who think the time is not far distant when this decision must be reconsidered. Twenty years ago, when 8 per cent. was the ruling rate of interest obtainable on mortgages on real estate, 4½ per cent. was a perfectly safe basis for the valuations of reserves, and it may continue to be so for some years to come. But, with the obvious downward trend of interest realizable on investments, a more conservative rate than 4½ per cent. must, in the near future, be adopted by all our life assurance companies.

While this inevitable movement must have been in the thoughts of all who study life assurance business, we were considerably surprised to learn that the Sun Life had decided to calculate its Reserves on all its policies on the Hm 4 per cent. table. By thus taking time by the forelock, the company has led the way to a change which will tend to consolidate and strengthen its already substantially laid foundations. This step, too, will give the Sun Life distinguished prestige as the pioneer in a resolution that anticipates the future, which is ever a wiser course than waiting for the future to compel such a step to be taken.

We believe the forthcoming report of the company will show that this resolution has been put into operation in computing its reserves for 1894. The full effect of that step will be better understood when we state that for every $100 which the company would have set aside as reserves under the Government standard at 4½ per cent., it must, under Hm 4 per cent., reserve, $105.57.

As the American and the Combined Experienced Tables as well as the Hm are used by both American and Canadian companies in determining their policy liabilities, we give below the amount that would be required by these several tables of a company in actual operation:

American 4 p. c.	American 4½ p. c.	Hm. 4 p. c.	Hm. 4½ p. c.	Combined Exp. 4 p. c.
103.90	94.27	105.57	100	104.21

It will thus be seen that for every $100 that the present Dominion standard calls for, the Sun Life would have to set aside $105.57. As its Reserves must be about $4,000,000, it was a courageous move on the part of the Sun Life directors to take such a truly conservative step. We shall be glad to know how its surplus holds out after increasing its Reserves so largely as is indicated by the above figures.

It is especially notable that by the above showing the American Mortality Table with interest at 4 per cent. actually calls for a less reserve than either of the other tables. Our own Dominion Standard applies the severest test to the companies of all the three tables. In other words, the reserves imposed by law upon the United States companies is considerably less than that imposed upon Canadian companies by the Dominion law. It therefore follows that the Sun Life has in reality conformed to a standard of solvency policy reserves more exacting than that applied at present to any other Canadian or American life company.

The remarkable development of the business of the Sun Life in the last 14 years is evidenced by the following table of comparisons:—

	Income.	Assets.	Life Assur. in force.
1873	$ 48,710	$ 546,461	$ 1,084,320
1876	103,823	715,944	2,914,088
1880	141,402	911,132	3,337,479
1884	278,879	1,274,397	6,544,404
1888	525,275	1,536,816	11,981,316
1892	1,184,267	2,486,700	23,901,000
1894	1,372,996	4,616 419	31,328,562

A leap from one million to thirty-one and a half millions in amount of policies in force in 22 years is such a tribute to the energy, skill and sagacity of the management as outstrips any eulogy we might pass upon it. We cannot too highly commend the step just taken by the Sun Life, as we believe it to be in the right direction.

Early Styles for Spring Trade.

25 cases of New Goods for the coming spring have already been opened out, consisting of 10 cases of the latest styles of English and American Spring Hats, and 15 cases of Solid Comfort Boots, Shoes and Slippers, from the best makers in the world.

At the HEAD to Stay!

Words are weak in attempting to describe our range in everything that goes to make up the smartest HAT STOCK to be found. We aim to get every first-class idea for the "top" extreme, and we are sure to please, as we we are always—"AT THE HEAD TO STAY."

WIVES, SISTERS, MOTHERS, do you like that Hat your Husband, Brother or Son wears? Send him to a Hat Store where they fit Hats to THE STYLE OF THE MAN. What looks well on some folks may not look well on him. We have a happy knack for head dressing. Don't spoil your credit by a seedy top-piece—look like prosperity. We have the pick of the styles from such famous English makers as Stanley & Co, Jackson & Co and Wilkinson & Co; and we have the celebrated American EAGLE brand of Fur Hats, union made. The prices won't scare you, either. If you buy your Hats at GOUGH'S you'll soon find out that you save just 20 per cent.

At the FOOT to Lead!

People who wear our Shoes say they enjoy as much solid comfort as the old-timers who wore sandals. But ours are handsome as well as comfortable. We sell easy fitting, durable Shoes, with all the style put on to them that such artistic makers as Slater & Son, of Montreal, can invent. We have all intermediate makes, as well as the cheaper grades from Lower Canada, where they don't pay much for making—sometimes nothing at all.

LADIES are reminded that all the best Boots marked at other stores to sell at $3.00 and $4.00 we mark at $2.00 and $3.00. Cheaper lines run from 75c to $1.50.

GENTLEMEN are reminded that all the best Boots marked at other stores to sell at $3.50 and $5.00 we mark at $2.50 and $3.90. Cheaper lines run from 90c. to $1.75.

It's the same way with Misses, Boys and Children's Boots and Shoes—the goods and prices will do the talking better than anything we can say.

A CRISIS IMMINENT

A Hurriedly-Called Meeting of the British Cabinet.

ROSEBERY IN HOT WATER

So Rumor Says—He Confers With the Queen—Dissolution is Imminent, it is Said—The Opposition Disappointed—Expected a Government Defeat.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—Arnold Morley, postmaster general, in answer to a question on the subject said it was a fact that while British mails carried by German and American steamers from Southampton to New York paid the postal union 1 shilling 9 1-2 pence per pound, the Liverpool mail steamers calling at Queenstown and bound to sail on fixed days got three shillings per pound for carrying the mails.

BERLIN, Feb. 20.—Prince Bismarck is suffering from an attack of neuralgia and his illness is aggravated by a cold and the excitement attendant upon the preparations for the celebration of the 80th anniversary of his birth, which occurs on April 1.

Sir Edward Grey, Parliamentary Secretary of the Foreign Office, replying to Right Hon. Sir George Baden Powell in the House of Commons to-day, said that the President of the United States has, in a message to Congress, recommended that there be made provision for the prompt payment of the $425,000 as compensation to the Canadian sealers under the Behring sea award. However the Ambassador at Washington, Sir Julian Pauncefote, reported that while this had not been appropriated he had no reason to doubt this sum would put in the estimates before the rising of Congress. Replying to a further question Sir Edward Grey said that the British Government understands there is no intention to modify the agreement regarding the seal fisheries between the United States and Russia. It is similar to the British agreement with Russia, and remains in force until either party gives notice to modify it.

In political circles there is much gossip owing to the fact that Lord Rosebery, the Prime Minister, upon his arrival at the official residence in Downing street yesterday, hastily summoned a meeting of the Cabinet.

The measures taken to summon the Ministers were rather extraordinary. Messengers were despatched in cabs to the offices or residences of the different Ministers, and all came to the meeting, which lasted fully an hour.

The precarious condition of the party as shown by the narrow majorities on various questions in the House of Commons and the fact that Lord Rosebery had a long conference at Buckingham Palace yesterday afternoon with the Queen, soon after her arrival from the Isle of Wight, and also a long conference with the whips of the Liberal party yesterday, all served to increase rumors that a dissolution of Parliament is imminent.

For several minutes when the vote was being taken in the House of Commons on Sir William Harcourt's motion to close the debate on the address in reply to the Queen's speech opening the session of Parliament, it was confidently believed by the members of the Opposition that it would be found that the Government was defeated when the vote was announced.

An election was held yesterday at Colchester to fill the vacancy in the House of Commons caused by the resignation of Mr. Naylor-Leyland. It resulted in a victory for the Liberal candidate, Sir Westman Pearson, who was defeated at the last general election with Naylor-Leyland as his opponent by a majority of 61. The Conservative candidate was Capt. Vereker who was strongly supported by the Irish Unionist alliance. Great interest was taken in the contest by politicians throughout the country and a number of well-known speakers took part in the campaign. The vote was: Pearson, 2,580; Vereker, 2,292. At the last election the result was: Naylor-Leyland, 2,178; Pearson, 2,119.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—August Vacquerie, the dramatic author, is dead. M. Vacquerie was born at Villequier on November 19, 1819. His first journalistic work was done in 1848, when he founded, with the two brothers of Victor Hugo, L'Evenement. In 1859, in conjunction with P. Maurice, Rochefort and the Hugo brothers, he started the Rapfel. He wrote many dramas and comedies which were produced at the Porte Saint Martin, Odeon, Gymnase and Theatre Francais.

Republicans Elected.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—City Solicitor Charles F. Warwick and Wm. J. Roney, Republican candidates for Mayor and Receiver of taxes, respectively, have been elected over ex-Governor R. S. Pattison and Col. Sylvester Bonnafon, jr., Democratic candidates for the same offices. An estimate of the Republican majority cannot be given with any accuracy at this hour but it promises to be a big one.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

SOME DEVELOPMENTS

Harry Hyams' Damaging Story to Miss Lattimer.

DIFFERS FROM HIS FIRST STORY

Dr. Caven Rebuilds the Broken Skull—That Weight Would Have Crushed the Skull to Atoms—Link by Link the Chain is Forged.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—Link by link the police authorities are putting together a chain of circumstantial evidence which is intended to show that William Wells did not meet his death in the cellar of the now famous premises on Colborne street by a weight falling upon him, but that death resulted from a fall or blow from a smaller and more easily wielded instrument.

The detectives are endeavoring to keep the evidence as much as possible to themselves, and only a certain portion will be adduced at the preliminary hearing before the magistrate to-day.

Crown Attorney Curry will to-day probably ask that the prisoners, Harry P. and Dallas Hyams, be remanded for another week in order to give Drs. Caven and Johnson an opportunity to complete the post mortem examination.

Dr. Caven spent a couple of hours down at the morgue in examining the skull, and he has expressed a strong but guarded opinion as to the cause of death.

When the body was first prepared for the post mortem examination the skull was found to be fractured in several places, presenting an appearance similar to that of a pane of glass that had been shattered by a stone, but the outer covering held the bones together leaving the skull apparently intact.

When the covering was removed the bones fell apart, and as a consequence the post mortem examination was adjourned.

Yesterday Dr. Caven succeeded in setting up the bones again and has now a complete skull to work on. So far as he has gone, Dr. Caven, it is understood, has satisfied himself that the big weight found beside the body never fell on Wells' head, but he has not decided how the fractures were caused. He is of opinion that if the weight had hit Wells on the head it would have smashed the skull into a mass.

Miss Lattimer, who was a clerk in the employ of the Hyams brothers when Wells was killed, will be one of the strongest witnesses for the Crown, she having made a statement to the police.

On the morning of the tragedy it will be remembered she was sent to a distant part of the city to deliver letters, and when she returned she found Harry walking up and down the office wringing his hands and apparently very much excited.

"What is the matter?" she asked.

"Willie's killed. He is in the cellar," replied Hyams.

"How did it occur?" asked Miss Lattimer.

"Oh, Dallas let the weight slip," replied Harry, and then hesitating a moment, he added, "I don't know how it occurred."

Later Harry Hyams made a statement to the police in which he said that while Wells was in the cellar repairing the hoist the weight accidentally fell from the third storey and striking him on the head killed him.

The police cannot reconcile the two statements.

County Crown Attorney Curry after some hesitation admitted that the Crown was in possession of both statements.

The detectives have found another man who has identified the big weight found beside the body. The man is named Rankin and he was engaged for years in the premises on Colborne street under Messrs. Imrie & Graham.

He says he ran the hoist for three years and never had an accident, and he is of opinion that the weight could not have come off the hook without human agency.

The police heard a rumor that two American detectives were coming to Toronto to hunt up evidence in the murder charge.

"In the States," said Inspector Stark, "this practice is a growing evil, and sometimes leads to a frustration of justice. If any American detectives come here and attempt to interfere with or tamper with Crown witnesses they may find themselves in jail."

THE MIDLAND DISASTER.

Station Agent Weighill Has His Preliminary Hearing.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—On the charge of causing the death of John Rigg, the engine driver in the recent Midland railway wreck, Albert Weighill is having his preliminary examination before Squire Wingfield. Weighill, it will be remembered, was adjudged guilty of negligence by the coroner's jury and arrested on a charge of manslaughter.

New Charge Against Verral.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—Ex-Ald. J. E. Verral was yesterday arraigned in the police court on the second charge of consenting to accept from Otto E. C. Gusich, $15,000 as an inducement to him and other members of the city council to vote against a certain resolution. Much against the wish of the defence the case was adjourned until Monday. The present information differs from the previous one, which charged Verral in conjunction with Hewitt of counselling Gusich to offer the bribe.

Counterfeiter Sent for Trial.

INGERSOLL, Ont., Feb. 20.—John Palmer and Adam Ross, who were arrested here a few days ago for making counterfeit money, were tried in the Council chamber yesterday. F. R. Ball, Q.C., of Woodstock, appeared for the Crown, and J. B. Jackson for the defendant. After hearing a number of witnesses Ross was discharged, there not being sufficient evidence to convict him, and Palmer sent up for trial at the spring assizes

ELECTIONS ARE NOW ON

Voters' Lists Are Being Rapidly Pushed Through.

ACTIVITY AT THE CAPITAL

Everybody's Cook Sure the Elections are at Hand—Ministers Significant Talk—Printers are Rushed—Formation of a Political Club—Ottawa Notes.

OTTAWA, Feb. 20.—At a meeting of Liberals in the hall of the Reform Club on Elgin street it was decided to form a Young Liberal Association in the city. The idea of forming a Young Men's Liberal Association has been talked of for some time past. A number of young men of Liberal ideas, but so far not connected with any political association, have been approaching members of the Executive of the Reform Association and members of the Reform Club asking them to call a meeting for the, purpose of organizing such a body, or rather bringing into life again the old association of this name which existed here some years ago.

The following are the members of the committee appointed to make the necessary arrangements for the organization of a Young Men's Liberal Association: F. H. Christer, Frank Haanum, D. H. MacLean, W. H. Barry, D. B. Rochester, J. R. Reid, and A. W. Fraser.

An evening paper says of dissolution:—The announcement of dissolution may not be made until after the hearing of the Manitoba school case, or it may be any day, but the general belief now is that it is certain to come before a session of Parliament.

The activity in Ministerial circles goes to show that the elections are on and that it will be the unexpected that will happen if there is a session before dissolution. Hon. A. R. Angers, for instance, has gone to Quebec to look into the political situation there. Hon. J. C. Patterson is in Toronto on business of a similar character, Hon. J. A. Ouimet, Hon. Dr. Montague and Hon. John F. Wood were at Eastman's Springs last night, and they did not fail to tell the electors there that the political fight was on. Meetings have been arranged for in Western Ontario, and the Ministers have been billed to speak there. One of these meetings takes place in Collingwood this week. In official circles the indications all point to a general election. Another sign of an election being on is found in the way that the voters' lists are being rushed through. It is said that almost the whole staff of printers was to-day put to work on the lists. Everything, therefore, points to a dissolution.

HAMILTON HAPPENINGS.

A Day's Occurrences in the Ambitious City—A Forger Confesses.

HAMILTON, Ont., Feb. 20.—A summons has been issued against James and Thos. Crooks, who bought the refreshment privileges from the Jockey Club, for selling liquor at the winter ice meeting last week. R. C. Stinson has a license for the Road House at another end of the track, and this bar is closed up during race meetings when liquor is sold under the grand stand. The Jockey Club will probably fight the case. The temperance people laid the information.

Henry Stewart, a young Scotchman, is in jail charged with forgery. He purchased a gold watch for $80 at Wolfe's pawn shop from Baron Rosenstadt and gave the latter a note for $40 on the Bank of Hamilton signed by Chisholm & Logie, and payable to Stewart. The Baron accepted the note, gave Stewart the change, and then marched him to the police station where the prisoner acknowledged the forgery and made a full confession. He will come before the magistrate to-day.

It is said the men have been promised their January pay immediately and will resume work.

BRITTON FOR KINGSTON.

The Limestone City Liberals Nominate an Able Q.C.

KINGSTON, Feb. 20.—Amid much enthusiasm Mr. B. M. Britton, Q.C., was last night nominated and accepted as the Liberal candidate for the House of Commons for Kingston. Mr. Britton declared his purpose to be in it to the end, and expressed thankfulness for the confidence reposed in him. The Liberal Association also elected its officers for the ensuing year thus:—Honorary president, Alexander Gunn; president, E. J. B. Pense, proprietor of the Whig; vice-presidents, Ald. J. J. Behan, W. J. Livingston, F. S. Rees and Captain Craig; treasurer, John McKelvey; secretaries, W. R. Dick and J. M. Farrell. Mr. J. M. Mowat, a nephew of Sir Oliver Mowat, a former secretary, in his retirement was presented with a portfolio and dressing case for his gratuitous services.

THE EAST RIDING MASS MEETING

The electors of East Peterborough, particularly, are reminded of the mass meeting, which will be held in the Town Hall, Norwood, on Tuesday, Feb. 26th inst. for the purpose of selecting a candidate to contest the representation of the riding at the approaching Dominion elections. It is deeply important that that there should be a large and representative attendance of the Liberals of the East Riding. That the candidate chosen may be the unanimous choice of the Liberal party, representing all parts of the riding; and that arrangements may be taken and, so far as practicable, completed, for a thorough organization of the riding. It is absolutely necessary that both a candidate be put promptly in the field and that preparations for the battle be promptly made. The Dominion Government is exercising its powers in an arbitrary and improper manner in refusing to declare for either another session of parliament or dissolution. The chances are that, deterred by their present evil record, and a big deficit, and fearing to meet Parliament, the Government will ultimately declare for dissolution and spring the elections unexpectedly upon the country. But Liberals should block their little game by being prepared for the elections whenever they may be brought on. A large gathering of Liberals is looked for in Norwood, on Tuesday, Feb. 26th.

The date of the convention for West Peterborough will be announced in a few days. The report that interested persons are circulating, that there will be no Liberal candidate in the West, is unfounded—the Liberals of West Peterborough intend fighting every inch of the ground.

IN THE MATTER OF HOGS.

Our innocent contemporary, the Review, quotes from the Mail and Empire, figures to show that the repeal of the "defensive" tariff would flood Canada with cheap Chicago pork. It says that in Chicago hogs are $3.30 per hundred weight, and in Toronto the figures run from $3.65 to $4.20. Now, the very same issue of the Mail and Empire from which our honest contemporary takes the above figures, in its market reports quotes hogs at $4.25 to $4.40 in Chicago; in Buffalo at $4.20 to $4.35, and in New York at $4.40 to $4.60, while top Toronto quotations are $4.20. It is very probable that Canadian farmers are very much frightened at the prospect of being flooded with cheap Yankee pork, which in the leading American markets rules much higher than in the best Canadian market. Our Yankee cousins are very likely to ship hogs from a $4.40 or $5.00 market, like New York, Buffalo or Chicago, from 500 to 1000 miles, and offer them for sale in a $4.00 to $4.20 market. Will our esteemed contemporary take a few lessons in hog finance?

HON. J. C. PATERSON, Minister of Militia, is a fine-eater, and has proclaimed martial law against the Liberals. Speaking in Toronto on Feb. 7th, 1895, Mr. Paterson indulged in this fine burst of broad-minded patriotic sentiment: "He charged the Liberals with being unfaithful to the country and the country wanted none of them. The Young Conservatives would fight their efforts to secure power with their ballots and, if necessary, with their bullets." These be brave words. It is to be hoped that the Minister of Militia will be so magnanimous as to give the poor Liberals a little notice of the date of shooting, so that they can seek safety in the secure hiding place where the Government has, so far, concealed the "home market." Well, isn't that a nice way for a minister of the Crown to talk anyway?

KINMOUNT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

It was reported in last weeks issue that Johnny Dettman was seriously ill. It is our sad duty this week to record his death. In spite of every effort of the physicians he rapidly sank and on Tuesday evening passed away. He just lacked one month of being sixteen years of age, and on Thursday afternoon, when the funeral took place, the scholars of Kinmount school marched out in a body to pay respect to the remains of one who had so lately been one of their number. With their teacher they headed the unusually long procession to the cemetery, where his remains were laid to rest. His bereaved parents have the sincere sympathy of the whole community in this their hour of deep affliction.

The children are all looking forward to the Sunday school anniversary which takes place next month.

Those wanting tinware should not fail to see the new stock Mr. Kingsboro is having made in his own shop. Mr. Taggart, his workman, is an adept at his trade.

Somebody broke into Mr. H. T. Graham's store last Saturday night and carried off a quantity of tobacco, candies and some other articles. The circumstances go to indicate that this is the work of a few idle scamps whose names may soon appear in the reports of the police court proceedings.

Notwithstanding the universal cry of hard times and general stagnation of business, our village, though not up to former days, is still alive and is doing a lively business in the different lines of the timber industry.

We are pleased to know that Miss M. F. Campbell, who was suffering last week, from illness, is able again to resume her duties in the school.

BALFOUR FOR SPEAKER.

The Popular South Essex Man to Wield the Gavel—The New Legislature.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—W. D. Balfour, the Radical from South Essex, will be the Speaker of the new Legislature, the first session of which will be opened on Thursday. The selection will be universally approved. Personally Mr. Balfour is popular with the Conservatives; his long and able service has endeared him to the Liberals; his radicalism has won the admiration of the Patrons, and his position as publisher of one of the best weeklies in the province, coupled with his well-known gentility, will endear him to the press gallery.

The new Legislature will be an interesting body. The presence of a considerable third party, for the first time in the history of Ontario politics, will make it unique. There will, too, be widespread curiosity to see how the new factor in provincial legislation will comport itself, especially in view of the imminence of the Federal elections in which that party is vitally interested.

MONTREAL POLITICIANS.

Hon. James McShane Will Oppose Curran—Professionals Decline to Contribute.

MONTREAL, Feb. 20.—At a meeting of the Liberal electors of Chambly county held at Longueil the namination of Liberal candidate was offered to R. Prefontaine, the present member, but he declined. It was decided to call another meeting for the nomination of candidates. Mr. Laurier was present and delivered an address.

Hon. James McShane was nominated last night as the Liberal candidate against Solicitor-General Curran in St. Annes division.

The Tottenham Inquest.

TOTTENHAM, Ont., Feb. 20.—The inquest on the death of Mrs. Newbury was concluded yesterday and the jury in a few minutes returned the verdict that Mrs. Newbury had come to her death by a bullet from a revolver in the hands of her husband, Robert Newbury. The little girl is doing well.

Madge's Murderer Captured.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—James B. Gentry, the actor who shot and killed Madge Yorke, the actress, in this city Sunday evening, was arrested by a policeman last night at 53rd street and Columbia avenue.

A Stock-Breeder's Death.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 20.—Col. R. P. Pepper, one of the wealthiest stock-breeders in Kentucky, died at his house in this city yesterday. Col. Pepper was the owner of the famous stallion Onward.

A TRIBUTE TO THE BARD.

The following lines were written on learning through the EXAMINER of the serious illness of Mr. William Telford and the wish that God would spare him to see the snow all melted, birds singing and flowers in bloom.

Dear friend, I hope that God will in his goodness grant,
The earnest wish of your true Scottish heart;
Once more to see with joy the mantle white removed,
Ere your soul wings its flight to realms above.

My earnest wish is that you may be spared
To hear the birds sing in some sheltered glade,
And watch the flowers that in your garden grew,
Emblems of innocence God gives us here below.

But if God's will should be adverse and not accord with ours;
He knows the sheaf is ripe—you may not see the flowers.
I know your lamp is trimmed and in a ruddy glow;
Ready for that blest home above not dimmed by winter's snow.

Farewell, dear friend, if God should take you to the heavenly home,
I know you'll hear well done pronounced before the great white throne;
You loved the birds' songs; tender flowers, have ever been your care,
But nothing here on mother earth with heaven's bliss compares.

THE RECENT COLD SNAP.

How it Affected a Single Toronto Industry and the Public.

TORONTO, Feb. 20—The recent cold snap and resultant blizzard caused much misery to hundreds of Canadians. Owing to the blockade on the railroads many large consignments of Dodd's Kidney Pills, the only known specific for kidney disease, were considerably delayed in transit and much misery was occasioned in consequence. In order to guard against a recurrence of this state of affairs in the future the proprietors are considering the advisability of locating branch establishments in the various provinces of the Dominion. With the securance of these distributing points they will be enabled to supply all their customers with Dodd's Kidney Pills irrespective of the condition of the weather.

About 2.30 on Monday morning the English church bell pealed forth a fire alarm which startled a large number of visitors out of their sleep. The fire proved to be the house of Mr. Wm. Matthews. The fire engine was taken out of the fire hall and steam got up, but as there was no water in the neighbourhood of the fire, it was not taken over. The hook and ladder, fire pails and hand engines were taken over, and although they could not save the burning building, yet with the assistance of energetic villagers, they did good work in preventing neighbouring buildings from taking fire. When it was found that the buildings could not be saved all turned in and saved nearly all the furniture in the house. Mr. Matthews besides the house, sheds and stable, lost a buggy, his potatoes, meat, butter, etc., stored in the cellar, lumber, a number of hens, etc. His loss will be in the neighbourhood of $600 or $700, on which he had no insurance. As the fire started in the woodshed, it is thought it occurred from the old story, "hot ashes." The whole community sympathizes with Mr. Matthews in his loss.

Mr. Wm. Postlethwaite who has been a sufferer from cancer for some time, passed away on Monday morning at the age of 65 years. He was buried Tuesday afternoon.

LOUDON LOCKS THE DOORS.

But Bolts and Bars Did Not Keep Mr. Tucker Out.

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—The most sensational incident yet was in connection with a meeting of the medical students yesterday afternoon. The President had learned that Messrs. Tucker and Greenwood were intending to address this meeting, and he sent over a note to the Biological Building announcing to the men that these gentlemen would not to be admitted. He did more; he had the doors locked, and no doubt from fear that the two college men were coming over with axes and battering rams to break down the barricade, had two watchmen placed by the doors. Prof. Helmer, who was lecturing, refused to read the note, as did also Prof. Chapman.

The students, however, found the note, and started after Messrs. Tucker and Greenwood. They found the doors locked, for in locking the two out the students had been locked in. The men got out and went after Messrs. Greenwood and Tucker, who had no intention of addressing the students. They did go over, however, and made a short address.

During all this time Prof. Loudon himself was in the building, but on the invitation of the class to address the meeting he had left.

The students deny positively that Prof. Mavor was assaulted. The boycott has been carried out with order and quietness.

The students are as yet divided as to whether specific charges should be made. Some say that the entire system is inefficient and the removal of Messrs. Mavor or Wrong will not greatly benefit the institution.

Others believe that even the retirement of these two men would be of some assistance to the University, if nothing more could be gained.

There is a statute, however, which is being looked up now which says that the Government will investigate the entire management when grievances serious enough are made.

At the meeting to-day the question will be discussed thoroughly, and probably charges of a wide nature will be made and a change in the management advised. The meeting will be attended both by the women and the men.

An effort is being made to have a compromise effected and some of the professors and members of the Senate are urging President Loudon to meet the students and try to effect a settlement. The President, however, has not signified his intention of adopting any such a line of action.

ENTHUSIASTIC PROHIBITIONISTS.

Gather at Woodstock and Call for Straight Prohibition Voting.

WOODSTOCK, Feb. 20.—The town hall of Woodstock would not hold the immense audience that gathered for the prohibition mass meeting last evening. It was a union public meeting of the annual convention of Royal Templars and of the Oxford County Prohibition Association, the members of which were fresh from the convention which nominated independent prohibition candidates for North and South Oxford. The enthusiasm was intense and rounds after rounds of applause greeted the spicy speeches and the delightful sayings. Mr. MacKay, manager of the James Hay Company (Limited), presided.

Greetings to the Royal Templars were presented by Mayor Cole, the W. C. T. U., and by Rev. D. MacKay and were responded to by Rev. W. Kettlewell, of Paris. Songs were given by the Crusaders and the Emeralds, two noted Royal Templar revival bands. Principal Austin, of Alma Ladies College, St. Thomas, and W. W. Buchanan, of the Templar, Hamilton, made the addresses of the evening.

Principal Austin stated that he was not a pessimist but he was almost weary of the patience of some prohibitionists who in this quality would outrival Job. For his part, he wanted to arouse the conscience of the people that they would leave their old political parties for the supreme issue of prohibition, before the political leaders could count on prohibition votes. Prohibitionists must teach them them that they would leave and kill the old political parties if necessary for this cause. The politicians must be taught that they would receive a quid pro quo for the loss of the liquor support.

Mrs. Dempster Sentenced.

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 19.—The much married woman, Mrs. [illegible] of Dowsley, will spend the next three years and six months in the Kingston penitentiary as a result of her matrimonial adventures. Mrs. Dempster, it will be remembered, pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy some time ago, and the case has created widespread interest through the issues and charges against other people that have arisen from it. The date for pronouncing sentence in her case was fixed several times, but it was always postponed pending an investigation of the other charges. However, yesterday Judge McDougall was in a position to pass sentence, and in doing so, with an evident reference to the leniency showed Wilson on the conspiracy charge, he intimated that the sentence was a just one for her own offences, and she was not being made a scapegoat for the sins of others.

Parkhurst Assails Clergymen.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Rev. Dr. Charles Parkhurst in his sermon on Sunday charged a number of clergymen with lack of honor in having misapplied a fund which was raised for a specific purpose and intrusted to their care. Dr. Parkhurst's charge created a sensation, but he would not be interviewed. He said: "I cannot name the clergymen, but the facts will probably come out in a few days."

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Feb. 19, 1895.

On the street here 100 bushels of wheat sold at 64 to 64 1-2c. for white, and 61c. for spring; 150 of barley brought 48c. and 150 of oats 35 to 36 1-2c. Outside prices were unchanged with little doing.

Last week's visible supply of barley was 1,722,903 bushels and this week the stocks are 1,664,009 or a decrease of 74,000 bushels.

Wheat advanced 1-4 to 3-8c. in Chicago on decrease in the visible supply. Corn advanced 1 4c. and oats 3-8c. in sympathy with wheat.

At the Buffalo barley market the supply of free or sale barley is light and sellers are very stiff in their views and talk of higher prices in the near future. Choice No. 1 Canada 65 to 66 and 64c. to arrive; No. 2 Canada, 63c.; No. 3 extra 60 to 61 1-2c. some ask 62 to 63 1-2c.

At East Buffalo the sheep and lambs market closed very dull at a further decline for medium and poor stock and a large part of the supply holds over unsold.

In London the firmness in silver stocks was again the feature of the day. American stocks were depressed by the absurd bluster of the silverites in the Senate on Saturday. Their course is strongly condemned here by all but the bi-metallists.

Speculation at the New York stock exchange was quiet. The market was erratic in its course and did not develop any definite tone until the close, when it was firm on covering of short contracts.

Pretty.

A bedroom suite of native white maple with birdseye maple panels, now in A. Clegg's window, attracted considerable notice on Saturday; and especially during the evening large numbers stopped to admire. It is almost white, of neat design, just the thing for a young ladies room. Though pretty and dainty, it is not expensive. dw

A quiet wedding took place at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning, when Mr. John O'Connor and Miss Teresa Kennealy, both of Otonabee, were united in the bonds of wedlock by Rev. Father Scollard. The Dark Attractions at the Opera House.

On Monday night next the black man will pound his tambourine, strum de ole banjo, kick up his heels and make a fool of himself generally for the benefit of the public. The curly headed coons will capture the hearts of all. As it says on the programme, any person may have a lock of the end man's hair by applying at the box office—it will be a curl from my baby's hair. It is said that one of the black men actually turned to a pallid colour when he heard one of the end men's jokes, but the audience will turn black with laughter when they hear Mr. Johnsing's sad tales next Monday night, February 25th, at the opera house. The plan of seats will be open at Salisbury's bookstore on Thursday morning (to-morrow). Have a good laugh before Lent comes. 1d

A BLOODY FIGHT AT ZION'S CORNERS IN OTONABEE.

Two Young Men Strip and Settle Their Difficulty With Their Fists.

One of the wickedest rough-and-tumble fights which was ever pulled off in this locality took place one evening, recently, in the Forester's hall at Zion.

Two young Otonabee farmers on the Saturday previous exchanged a few uncomplimentary expressions in town and very nearly came to blows on the spot, only the fears of subsequent arrest deterring them from ascertaining who was the better man, on the spot.

Arrangements were made for a meeting to take place at Zion's corners on the same evening as that upon which the Foresters held their meeting in the hall at that place. Matters were so arranged as to enable the two young farmers to meet after the hall had been opened and before the Foresters, who were in total darkness regarding the affair, assembled. At the appointed hour the two principals drove into Zion, and the floor being cleared, the mill began. There was a large number of spectators present both from the town and country. There was no scientific sparring, but each man struck out straight from the shoulder and if his fist reached his opponent's face, the blood flew.

Several times the two clinched and went down, but the first square knock down blow was credited to the smaller man, who weighed 170 pounds, while his opponent tipped the beam at 192.

The battle raged for half an hour, when the big fellow finally gave in and cried quits. The Foresters began to arrive just at this juncture, and were very indignant to find their walls, floor and fixtures liberally bespattered with blood. The witnesses of the sanguinary encounter describe it as bloody and fierce in the extreme. It is alleged that the quarrel took its inception from the fact that the man who was thrashed circulated rumors derogatory to his opponent's character.

THE RACES ON THE LITTLE LAKE.

The Different Events Will Prove Interesting—The Purses.

The ice races on Little Lake this afternoon, began at two o'clock, with two events on the card for the afternoon's programme, viz. the three minute trot and the colt race. For the first event there are seven entries:

"Essie Carr," owned by Mr. Ed. Brown, Peterborough.
"Harry B.," owned by Mr. H. LeBrun, Peterborough.
"Lulu B.," owned by Mr. R. J. Hewitt, Brighton.
"Lapidist Chief," owned by Mr. John Cochrane.
"Last Chance," owned by Mr. Samuel Curry, Belleville.
"Black Jessie," owned by Mr. Dennis Lake, Belleville.
"Canadian Golddust," owned by Mr. Gilmour.

This promised to be a hot race, and by the first heat it looked as though the spectators would have a treat in store for them.

In the Colt race there were five entries.

To-morrow there will be lots of sport on the ice, as the 2.40 trot and the free-for-all are on the card. The ice is in A 1 condition and doubtless some fast time will be made.

The management of the Peterborough races are inaugurating a new system, whereby the owner of the winner of a race is handed his winnings before he leaves the track. A great many noted sporting men are in town for the events.

We are exceedingly sorry to learn of the death of Mr. John Dettman, son of Mr. Frederick Dettman, of the township of Galway. The sad event took place on Tuesday evening last after a short illness of inflammation of the bowels. The bereaved parents and friends have the sympathy of the entire neighbourhood in which the EXAMINER most feelingly joins.

The Last Obsequies in St. Peter's Cathedral, This Morning.

The funeral of Mr. William O'Brien, who died from the effects of a severe attack of pneumonia on Monday last, took place this morning to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

A solemn requiem mass chanted in St. Peter's Cathedral, Venerable Archdeacon Casey being the celebrant. The offices of deacon were performed by Rev. Father Collins, and those of sub-deacon by Mr. Michael O'Brien, brother of the deceased. A full choir was present on the occasion and the music, which took the form of a Gregarian chant, was most beautifully and effectually rendered.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Sperry, of Peterborough, are the guests of their daughter, Mrs. D. Fraser.

Misses Alma and Alzad Hammond, of Orillia, are visiting their sister, Mrs. F. Fry.

Miss A. Fraser, Warsaw, visited the parental roof this week.

Miss A. Fowler, Cobourg, is spending a few days in Norwood.

Miss E. Stewart of Thornbury, who has been spending a few weeks in Norwood, is visiting friends in Ashburnham.

A High School hockey club has been organized by the boys attending the High School. We hope for some interesting matches between this team and the village team. The following officers of the High School Club were elected:

Hon. President—J. Davidson, M.A.
President—D. Hunter.
Secretary-Treasurer—Ross Cameron.
Captain—S. E. Hill.
Vice-Captain—Alex. Fraser.

A very sudden death occurred here last Sunday morning. Richard Macdonald, the thirteen-year-old son of Mr. Chas. Macdonald, proprietor of the Norwood, Hastings and Warkworth stage, was the victim. Deceased burst a blood vessel while coughing, and death ensued shortly afterwards from loss of blood. Richie was a clever little fellow and was popular with his school mates and companions. The funeral took place Monday morning and was well attended. The pupils of the third and fourth forms of the public school followed the remains of their late companion from Mr. Macdonald's residence to the Roman Catholic church, where service was held by Rev. Father Conway. The body was interred in the Asphodel R. C. cemetery.

The funeral of the late T. H. Pearce took place Saturday afternoon and was one of the largest ever seen in Norwood. Finlay's factory, the foundry and all places of business were closed for the afternoon and almost every citizen of the town was present to show the last respect to the dead. The funeral cortege which left the residence of Mr. Pearce about 2.30 o'clock was headed by the brass band. The pall bearers were six students of Trinity Medical College in caps and gowns. Following is the order of the procession:

Band.
Clergymen.
Bearers.
Hearse.
Mourners.
High School Pupils.
Municipal Council.
Citizens.

A special meeting of the council was held on Saturday, Councillors T. J. Drain, H. G. Buck, R. J. Stewart and H. Reynolds present. On motion, Councillor Drain took the chair, and the following resolution was carried unanimously: Moved by Councillor Buck, and Councillor Stuart, that the following resolution of condolence be handed to the reeve, J. B. Pearce, Esq., with the corporate seal attached, and that the same be entered in the minutes of the council: "That the members of this council have heard with profound regret of the very severe affliction that has befallen the family of the respected reeve of this municipality, J. B. Pearce, Esq., in the untimely death of his son, T. Harry Pearce, while pursuing his medical course at the Trinity Medical College, Toronto; that they desire to convey to him and to the members of h'e family their deepest sympathy in this hour of sad bereavement, as well as to express their appreciation of the excellent character of the young citizen so suddenly called away, and they pray that the consolations of religion may be granted to them by the Great Shepherd, who alone can temper the wind to the shorn lamb."

The following resolution was also passed—Moved by Councillor Stuart, seconded by Councillor Reynolds,—"That the thanks of the council be extended to the band for their services rendered out of respect to the reeve on the occasion of the funeral of the late T. H. Pearce."

WEDDING BELLS IN OTONABEE.

The Deyell–Mills Nuptials–Many Invited Guests Present.

On Friday evening last a most pleasant occurrence took place at the residence of Mr. Robert Mills, of Otonabee, when his second daughter, Clara, was united to Mr. Edward Deyell, second son of Mr. John Deyell, of Otonabee.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Howard, of Keene, there being fully one hundred guests present.

The bride was daintily apparelled in a cream cashmere gown, prettily trimmed with lace and ribbon, the bridesmaid, Miss Octavia Wood, of Otonabee, being similarly attired. The offices of best man were performed by Mr. Ernest Deyell, brother of the groom, and at the conclusion of the ceremony, which took place at 8.30 o'clock in the evening, the guests were invited to partake of a most inviting repast which had been prepared for the occasion. Quite a few from town were present to witness the ceremony.

A STRANGER ON THE STREETS.

A Young Girl Runs Away From Her Home in Smith's Falls.

A young girl was discovered crying most pitably on King street near the creek last night at about eleven o'clock by a resident of the south ward. Inquiry revealed the fact that the girl had run away from her home in Smith's Falls, on account of what she alleged was ill-treatment on the part of her step-mother. She was on her way to Toronto where she has friends and stepped off on the platform at Peterborough intending to resume her place before the train started. Remaining on the platform too long, however, she was left behind and being without money, was placed in a very embarrassing position. She wandered around the streets until met by the citizen in question who furnished her with money sufficient to purchase a return ticket to her home. The girl refused to state her name but announced her determination of remaining at home hereafter.

MANUFACTURERS' LIFE.

Financial Statement for 1894—Commendable Progress of a Well Known Canadian Insurance Company—Big Steadily Increasing Assets and Low Death Rate.

The financial statement of the Manufacturers' Life Assurance Company for 1894, which is published hereunder, exhibits some features which deserve more than passing mention. The conservative policy which was inaugurated by the present management five years ago, and which has been followed in every yearly statement since, continues to be rigidly adhered to with the most satisfactory results. The first policy issued by the company is dated 19th August, 1887, seven and a half years ago, in which time the company has piled upon its shoulders $6,[illegible] of business which is beyond all question the very best. From 1889 until the end of 1894, the gross assets have increased nearly 330 per cent., and now amount to the handsome sum of $[illegible]; the net surplus has increased from [illegible] to $50,460.73; the cash income has increased nearly 100 per cent., and the insurance in force has increased 50 per cent. These results have been attained by principles of method and caution, by principles which render a moderate amount of carefully selected business secured at a moderate expenditure, so large totals obtained at a correspondingly large outlay.

The death rate of the Manufacturers' Life, which has always been remarkably low, and which in the year 1893 was less than 1893 by $30,000 in claims paid, was for 1894 less than 1893 by nearly $10,000, being for 31 deaths for $44,123; a most remarkable mortality experience, and one which fully attests the careful medical supervision exercised in the selection of risks for which the Manufacturers' is noted.

But what will be of equal interest to our policy holders and others concerned in the welfare of the company is that notwithstanding the steady increases which have been made during the past year, (at a time when the cry of "hard times and no money," was heard early and late, and when the greater part of the insurable community were as so many Jeremiahs, whose lamentations made life underwriting a more than usually difficult task to say the least), these increases have been secured at no corresponding increase of expense. And in proof of this the put-by for the year amounts to $180,000 or over 50 per cent. of the income, whilst an increase of insurance in force of 50 per cent. of the income, whilst an increase of insurance in force of 50 per cent. over 1893, has been secured at an increase in expenditure of less than 5 per cent. These results speak for themselves, and are an eloquent tribute to the present sound and economic management of Managing Director Ellis.

A MOST INTERESTING LECTURE

Members of the Y. W. C. A. and their Friends Listen to an Interesting Address.

A large audience comprised principally of ladies assembled in the lecture room of St. Paul's church last evening to hear a lecture on the "Up to date Woman," by Miss Wright, the president of the Dominion Young Women's Christian Association.

Miss Wright, who is a clear and forcible speaker, handled her subject in a way to interest all.

THE IDEAL YOUNG WOMAN

of previous centuries was contrasted with the young woman of to-day. Tradition, romance and education, she reasoned taught the young woman three things, she must not, be—she must not be learned, she must not be strong minded, and she must not be useful. These things taught the young woman that her sphere was to be as attractive and as helpless as a child.

Miss Wright spoke strongly concerning the object of the Y. W. C. A. in inspiring its girls to seek higher intellectual attainments in providing for all grades of mental development from the rudimentary English branches to university courses.

A testimony from Miss Willard was given on the benefits of

THE HIGHER EDUCATION

of woman. In this connection it proved most interesting.

When expounding on the matter of the physical development of woman and what the association is doing in regard to the matter, magic lantern views of the Delsarte class at Ottawa were thrown upon the canvas.

The lecture then went on to point out that culture, rather than spoiling the woman for filling the sphere which God designed for them, viz:—the home—broadens and extends their sympathies and makes them more intelligent companions. In illustration, two beautiful home pictures of Lord and Lady Aberdeen and family were shown. The idea of usefulness in the home was further emphasized by showing views of the Association's Schools of Domestic Science.

During the course of the evening Mr. R. M. Roy gave one of his popular slight-of-hand performances to the no small mystification of the audience, who accorded him the most liberal applause at the close of the clever exhibition.

THE NEW SPEAKER.

William Douglas Balfour the Probable Choice of the House.

To-morrow being the opening day of the initial session of a new Legislature, one of the first duties of the Assembly will be to select a Speaker to preside over its deliberations during the next four years. The name that has been most prominently mentioned in this connection is that of Mr. William Douglas Balfour, who has represented South Essex in the Local House for the past twelve years, having been first elected Oct. 25th, 1883, and re-elected at each general election since, and there is little doubt that the choice of the House will fall upon this gentleman. The address in reply to the speech from the Throne will be moved by Mr. John Craig of East Wellington, an old Peterborough boy, and at one time an employee of the EXAMINER, and seconded by Mr. Donald McNish, of West Elgin, who take their seats in the House for the first time to-morrow.

MARRIAGE OF A COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE PUPIL THIS MORNING.

Last Week a Student, To-day a Bride—Congratulations.

Miss Kate Nelson, of Otonabee, who, until last week, was a student at the Collegiate Institute, was married this morning to Mr. Captain Edwards, head master of the Keene School. As Miss Nelson was one of the most promising pupils in attendance at the Institute, the faculty were most anxious that she should remain at school until the conclusion of the present term, but Miss Nelson did not ask their advice in the matter. As well as being a most clever scholar, Miss Nelson was one of the most popular young ladies of the Institute and will be greatly missed by her classmates, who, however, all join with the EXAMINER in extending to Mr. Edwards the most hearty congratulations on having secured so fair a bride.

Collecting Canceled Stamps.

What is apparently more useless than canceled postage stamps? And yet there is a store on Michigan avenue where they seem to be in demand. One of the windows is entirely heaped up with present day United States stamps, mostly of the 2 cent denomination. There must be thousands of them, and the observer can only wonder what in the world can be their value. They cannot possess any particular interest to the stamp collector, for they are neither rare nor valuable. To the ordinary person the canceled 2 cent postage stamp seems a worthless thing indeed. Prices paid for such stamps, however, are 10 cents per 1,000, $1 per 10,000, and $12 per 100,000. Many an industrious lad will probably be moved by this offer (as the appearance of the window indeed testifies), and yet the immense labor of collecting 100,000 stamps can be appreciated.

Yet during the Centennial stamps were bought in the same manner, and those who purchased them are today reaping a handsome profit, for the Centennial postage stamp has increased wonderfully in value in a canceled condition during the last few years. As time goes on stamps increase greatly in value, especially stamps issued for one year only on a special occasion like the Centennial or fair. To show how valuable a stamp may become, the writer of this may mention the fact that eight years ago he purchased a first issue English envelope stamp in London for $7.50, and it was at that time worth a great deal more in this country. Now it has probably increased still more.—Detroit Free Press.

MURDER OF EMIN PASHA

STORY FROM THE LIPS OF THOSE WHO KILLED HIM.

The Capture of the Assassins and Their Story of the Deed as Extracted From Them by United States Agent Mohun—The Details of the Crime.

The details of the murder of Emin Pasha stirred the whole civilized world. The story is told by R. Dorsey Mohun, United States agent in the Congo Free State. Two of the murderers of Emin Pasha were discovered by Mr. Mohun's Sergeant, who had been a member of Stanley's expedition for the relief of Emin. They were arrested, and a confession was drawn from them by Mr. Mohun. The murderers were hanged last May. The leading points in their confession are as follows:

Ismailia began by stating that he had been in the service of Emin Pasha, having been loaned to him by Said to take charge of his caravan on the march from the Unyoro. I asked him if he had been well treated on the road, and if he had any cause of complaint to make against Emin Pasha. He answered that he had none; that he had always been treated with the greatest kindness, and that the Pasha had frequently given him pieces of cloth for himself and for his three women; that he liked the Pasha very much, and had no feeling of hatred against him. Mamba broke in, saying that he also liked the Pasha, and that he was very sorry he had died.

Mamba then turned to me and said: "I did not want to help kill the Pasha, but I knew that Kibonge was a much bigger chief than my master, Said, and that if I did not obey he would probably kill me; so I told Ismailia that I would do as I was ordered."

Ismailia, continuing, said: "I then went back to Kinena's, and on the veranda of the chief's house Emin Pasha was seated, surrounded by a few of his soldiers. He was writing at his table, and many birds and bugs were scattered around. These he had caught coming from the Aruwimi. The first letter, which Mamba had brought, was in front of him, and he was laughing, and seemed in cheerful spirits at the thought of leaving next morning for Kibonga. Kinena came up with a few men, who were carrying guns. Kinena had in his hand the letter which I had given him. He stopped near the Pasha, and began reading to himself. When he had finished he said: 'Pasha, as you are going to leave to-morrow morning for a twelve days' march, don't you think you had better send your men into the plantations, and get bananas, manioc and peanuts for the long march which you have before you? Tell your men to get all they wish; and I hope that you won't think of paying me for them, as it is my present to you, and in return for the many little things which you have given me and my women since you have been my guest.' The Pasha looked up, and thanked Kinena very much. He then told one of his orderlies to have the bugler call the men, which was done.

"When they arrived Kinena said: 'Tell the men to leave their arms on the side of the veranda, because if they go into the plantations carrying guns the women working there will become frightened and run away.' Thereupon Emin's men, numbering thirty or forty, placed their guns on the veranda, and departed. The plantations were an hour's walk from the house. During the time it took the men to go to the plantations Kinena talked to Emin, expressing his regret at his departure. Mamba and I were standing next to the Pasha, and at a sign from the chief we seized him by the arms as he was sitting in his chair. He turned and asked what we meant. Kinena looked at him and said, 'Pasha, you have got to die!' Emin turned and exclaimed rather angrily: 'What do you mean? Is this a joke? What do you mean by seizing me in this manner? What are you talking about my dying for? Who are you that you can give orders for a man to die?' Kinena replied: 'I do not give the orders. I receive them from Kibonge, who is my chief; and when Kibonge gives an order to me I obey it.'

"Three of Kinena's men came and assisted us in holding Emin, who was struggling to free himself and to get at his revolver lying on the table; but his efforts were fruitless, and we forced him back into his chair. Then Emin told Kinena that it was all a mistake, as he had just received a letter from Kibonge that morning saying that he should have safe conduct to his village, and that the letter was on his table in front of him. Kinena replied, 'Pasha, you read Arabic, don't you?'

"'Yes.'

"'Then read this,' holding the second letter close to Emin's eyes, as the Pasha was nearly blind.

"Emin read the letter and saw that it was true. Drawing a long breath he turned and said: 'Well, you may kill me but don't think that I am the only white man in this country. There are many others who will be willing to avenge my death; and let me tell you that in less than two years from now there won't be an Arab left in the entire country now held by your people.'

I asked Ismailia if Emin showed any signs of fear, and he said that he showed none; but when he spoke of having care taken of his daughter, 3 years of age, he trembled slightly.

"What did he say about his child, Ismailia?" I asked.

"He said: 'My child is not bad, she is good. Send her to Said Ben Khedi as Kibonge, and ask him to look out for her.'"

Ismailia continued: "At a sign from Kinena, the Pasha was lifted out of his chair and thrown flat upon his back. One man held each leg, one man each arm, and I held his head, while Mamba cut his throat."

Mamba here put in a vigorous protest, saying he had not cut his throat. But Ismailia stuck to his statement and swore that it was Mamba who had acted as executioner. Mamba said it was another slave, but that he stood by and watched the murder being committed.

Ismailia then said: "Emin made no effort at resistance. His head was drawn back until the skin across his throat was tight, and with one movement of the knife Mamba cut the head half off. The blood spurted over us, and the Pasha was dead. We held to him for a few moments; then we arose and left the body where it was. Afterward Mamba severed the head from the body and Kinena had it packed in a small box and sent to the Kibonge, to show that his orders had been obeyed."

The reason, it appears to me, for Kibonge's having sent the head to Nyangwe was that he desired to show Munie-Mohara, who had almost as much influence as Tippoo Tib, that he (Kibonge) was as big a chief in his own country and could kill a white man as well as Munie-Mohara, who had ordered the destruction of Hodister's expedition.—Century.

Sunlight for Horses.

The proper nursing of sick horses requires only slightly less delicate attention than the nursing of sick men. Not to speak of diet and medicine, frequent change of bedding and clothing are as indispensable in one case as in the other. Perfect attention, abundant light, and pure atmosphere should always be prime considerations in treating the stable patient as well as the human subject. The influence of light on the animal frame, and even on the rudest form of organism, or death, as the case may be. The horse is by nature one of the children of light, and not of darkness—of the open air, not of the confined stuffy stall. In his wild state he seeks the sunlight of the plains, and avoids the darkness of fore t glens; and if we would fortify him against the destructive effects of protracted illness, we should ensure him the free light of day and full enjoyment of the pure circumambient air. He should, when ailing, not be tied up to rack or manger, but have the comparative freedom of a roomy box. It is strange that most stable architects think any odd space in a dark corner, that cannot be well utilized to form stalls, is quite good enough a situation for a loose box or for an infirmary for a horse "told off" as too ill to work and requiring veterinary treatment. There is much room for improvement in the architecture and sanitation of the stable for both sick and healthy horses.—London LiveStock Journal.

A Color Experiment.

It has been suggested that the contrast between the black and white of a printed page would be less trying to the eye if the latter could simultaneously rest on a bit of color. Accordingly, a Boston publisher is getting out books that have margins of azure, yellow or green. No reports have been received as to the success of the experiment.

NO SUCH THING AS OLD AGE

To those who use South American Nervine

A Lady of 80 Years Permanently Cured by this Wonderful Medicine.

Three Doctors said "Old Age was Her Complaint" and Gave Her Up—Three Bottles of Nervine Gave Relief—Twelve Bottles Cured Absolutely.

MRS. JOHN DINWOODY, Flesherton, Ont.

Wordsworth speaks of "An old age serene and bright, and lovely as a Lapland night." And elsewhere this same writer talks of "An old age, beautiful and free." These are conditions that come to the man or woman, though their years may border close on to a century, when in the enjoyment of good health. In fact it is difficult to think of some of the old men and women on the stage of life to-day as old people, there seems to be such a perennial youthfulness about their every movement and act.

Does someone tell us that cases like this must be the exception and not the rule with those who have approached to or gone beyond the allotted three score years and ten? Not so, if they have become acquainted with the virtues contained in South American Nervine. Before us in this sketch is the picture of Mrs. John Dinwoody, of Flesherton, Ont., a resident of that town for forty years. No person in the town and country side around is perhaps better known than this lady, and none more highly esteemed. Three years ago it was her sad lot to loose a daughter who had been all the world to her. The shock sustained by this event completely broke up the system of Mrs. Dinwoody. She supposed her end had come. She lingered for one year with three doctors, and they gave her case up, saying that it was one of old age and no one, nor any medicine could do her good. Made of the kind of stuff that gives beauty to age at any time she did not despair. She was influenced to try Nervine. She took three bottles, and this was sufficient to show her that her end was not yet. From these she obtained relief. She persevered, and in all took twelve bottles of the medicine, with the result that she is to-day completely cured of that breaking-up of the system that threatened her three years ago.

There is nothing wonderful in the fact that Mrs. Dinwoody would proclaim to the thousands of old people throughout this broad land, that with old age does not necessarily come decline, decrepitude and disease. Why should we not live into the eighties and nineties, and cross the border of the century?

South American Nervine, whether the person be young or old, gets at the nerve centers, and when they are kept in proper condition the system is as well able to withstand disease at eighty as at thirty. With this prospect in view who would not live to an old age and enjoy the pleasures of family, friends and society, and take a part in watching the marvelous progress and developments of these closing days of a wonderful century, which marks as not the least of its wonderful discoveries, the discovery of South American Nervine.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations would be kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and do what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then were home, but stop, I miss,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
Ans said, "I good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no. If you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

RAIN COSTUMES.

Properly Clad Women Can Face the Weather's Worst Elements.

Now that it is the fashion to go about in rainy weather, it is absolutely necessary to know how to costume one's self fully for rain or snow. It is quite a new fad, this of not paying any attention to whether the day be fine or stormy, but where a few years ago a woman in the street on a rainy day was quite a rarity, now there are just as many to be seen as there are on fine days. This is more sporty looks, of course, but what has to do with this, for the women who stayed at home soon found that they were far behind in the race, and one and all set their wits to work to devise how to go out and stay out in pouring rain without, in consequence, catching a fearful cold.

A well gotten up woman shows to particularly good advantage on a dull day. Draggled skirts and wet clothing are most depressing, but for these there is absolutely no necessity if only pains be taken to provide one's self with a proper outfit. There is no doubt but that woman's needs are rapidly increasing, and a costume for each sport seems to be a matter of course. Bicycle costumes, skating costumes, golf costumes, yachting costumes, not to mention house and dinner gowns, have each their place, and now comes the storm costume.

The first step in the right direction was taken when the decree went forth that trained skirts were absolutely impossible to wear in the street. Hideous as they looked on a fine day when they swept the pavements far better than any street cleaning department has as yet succeeded in doing, their full hideousness was never so palpable as when, on a rainy day, a woman would try to hold up the mass of material with one hand and keep her umbrella over the head with the other. Whenever she opened or shut the umbrella down went the skirts into the wet and mud, to be picked up when she started off again and held at exactly the right angle to most thoroughly wet her ankles. Beneath the skirt of her gown fashion in those days ordered she should wear a petticoat with many ruffles, or, more ghastly still, a white muslin or cambric, trimmed with lace. Small wonder was it that no woman who could avoid it went out of doors in bad weather.

The woman of the present day has more than one way of attiring herself in order to brave the elements. First and foremost she wears heavy boots, in some cases waterproof ones made of calfskin, with cork soles, and coming high up on the ankles. Some women wear low shoes, rubbers and then gaiters. This last plan keeps the feet and ankles absolutely dry, but is very far from becoming, as it gives an extremely clumsy appearance even to the smallest ankles. When the snow or mud is deep, skating boots are quite de rigueur. These are made of heavy leather, are laced, and come far up on the calf of the leg. They have invariably broad soles and low, flat heels. They are not so clumsy in appearance as might be expected, for they are carefully cut, and like all laced boots fit very smooth and tight. The fin de siecle girl has quite given up ruffled petticoats for rainy weather, instead of which she puts on under her serge gown black satin or cloth knickerbockers, and buttons on a pair of leggins that reach from foot to knee. Equipped in this very thorough manner she feels quite certain that that most ghastly of all things, the bedraggled petticoat, is spared her. There are a number of materials sold which claim to be waterproof—cheviots, serges, silks, alpacas, and even a new plush called lisrsine, and many women have entire costumes made up of these different fabrics. The heavy Scotch cheviots and serges, not to mention homespuns, certainly do shed the water, but they are none of them absolutely impervious to rain.

Walking costumes made of dark tweeds or of the Scotch frieze, quite short, so as to clear the ground, very simply made with coat and plain skirt, look trim and neat, and when a felt hat is worn the outfit is complete. The woman who wears it looks extremely fit, much more so than does she who has her gown made in some fussy manner. Ruffles and flounces are fortunately tabooed on all kinds of gowns this year, but in no way are they more out of place than on a rainy day costume.

FIT FOR ANY WEATHER.

The rubber cloaks with the cloth finish are extremely fit and can be made to be exceedingly becoming. Light tan colors and dark blues, the capes of the latter lined with red, are the favorites. There is not much variety in the styles. A long coat reaching to the bottom of the skirt, tight fitting in the back, with loose fronts fastened with big horn buttons, a belt of the same around the waist and a single or double cape of the same reaching to the hips, is the favorite model.

Cloth ulsters are always in fashion. When well made they have a certain air and style which is very smart, but they are very warm garments, and really only suited for wear in the winter. The heavy woolen goods need to be lined with silk, and this makes them additionally warm.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you if it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's oldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM WORK.

The Distribution of Grain and the Influence of United Action.

The importance of the distribution of grain can best be indicated by giving an idea of what has been done in the different departments and the effect of the experimental work of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa upon the quality and production of Canadian farm products. In order to induce the farmers to observe and study the productive elements of their land and ascertain by actual experiment what varieties of grain are best suited to the soil and climatic conditions of the districts in which they live over 22,000 three-pound bags of various kinds of seed grain were distributed last year to farmers in the different provinces. Owing to the early frosts in the northern districts of the northwest there is considerable danger of crops being damaged. Experiments in crossing different varieties of grain, such, for instance, as Ladoga wheat, noted for its early ripening qualities, and red Fife wheat, celebrated for its productiveness, have resulted in obtaining new varieties possessing a blending of both qualities of early ripening and productiveness. Experiments are also made in early and late seeding, and the effect upon different varieties of grain and the results made known by monthly bulletins giving the results. In the other provinces the tendency toward mixed and dairy farming is accentuated at the market end by an ever increasing demand for the products of the dairy and stockyards, while at the other end the rest given the land from continual seeding of grain and other cereals preserves the utility of the soil. One of the greatest inducements offered to the farmer in turning his attention to stock raising and dairy farming is the success of experiments made in obtaining scientific mixtures of fodders, which give a complete ration to animals in the shape of ensilage. The adoption of this cheap and productive means of feeding cattle throughout Canada during the past few years has worked a marvelous change. In 1886 there were not more than a dozen silos in the entire Dominion, while now, as a result of the work done on the experimental farms, over 5,000 are in use in the province of Ontario alone. As a result the growth of corn as fodder purposes has more than doubled each succeeding year. Last year experiments proved that an ensilage mixture containing sunflower seeds produced most satisfactory results. It was found that the 720 pounds of fat contained in an acre of sunflower seeds grown at a cost of 3 cents per pound yielded from cattle fed on the mixture in the form of butter fat at least 18 cents per pound.

Not only has corn fodder been found cheaper and more productive as a food for cattle in the production of dairy products, but stock raisers and feeders of fat cattle are adapting the ensilage system with beneficial results. The feeding of swine on damaged grain has shown very satisfactory results. Experiments show that it produces an increase of from eleven to fourteen pounds in live weight per bushel of wheat consumed, or a realization on unmarketable wheat thus used of from 45 to 75 cents per bushel at the selling price of pork. The satisfactory result of this experiment is important to the Canadian farmer, for every year large quantities of wheat grown in the Northwest are damaged by early frosts and rendered comparatively useless for sale in the grain market.—William Smith.

THE TIRE OF THE FUTURE.

The question to what extent the pneumatic tire, so familiar on bicycles, will be adopted on the wheels of other vehicles is one of considerable interest. According to a London scientific journal for cabs and broughams in English cities, the rubber tire, with an iron hoop outside, is steadily growing in favor, and thousands of them are seen. Since, even on the smooth wood and asphalt pavements of London, the rider knows at once whether his hansom has elastic or rigid tires, the contrast must be still more marked on macadamized roads or streets paved with granite or cobblestones.

The only blood-purifier admitted on exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair was Ayer's Sarsaparilla, all others being excluded as secret preparations and patent medicines. With doctors and pharmacists, it has always been considered a standard remedy.

To save life from the ravages of disease is nobler than to win a kingdom. Burdock Blood Bitters cures all blood diseases scrofula, blotches, pimples, skin diseases, etc., by its cleansing power over the entire system.

"I was troubled a long time with sick headache. MASQUERADED AS A WOMAN.

A St. Catharines Man Adopted This Disguise to Find His Erring Wife.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 19.—I. A. Turner, of St Catharines, Ont., who was stylishly dressed in female garb was refused admission to the Planters Hotel yesterday when his sex was discovered.

Turner explained that he was searching for his wife who eloped from St. Catharines six weeks ago with a commercial traveller and that he had traced the pair to this city. His disguise was adopted to aid his search. Turner secured lodgings elsewhere and is watching the depots and hotels.

He Came to Canada.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 20.—It was learned to-day that Chief A. B. Hunt, of the fire department, who disappeared a few days ago, has gone to the home of his father in Bradshaw, Ont. Hunt was under indictment for having produced naturalisation papers fraudelently.

Jacket Makers Strike.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—A crowded mass meeting of the childrens' jacket makers local 135 K. of L. was held last night, at which it was announced that a general strike had been ordered by the executive committee. Telegrams were received from Brownsville and Brooklyn announcing similar action on the part of the unions there. Between 8,000 and 9,000 people will stop work.

Buffalo Briefs.

BUFFALO, Feb. 20.—Mrs. Mary O'Day, 65 years old, was struck by a Lake Shore train at a street crossing yesterday and instantly killed.

Thos. Taylor, 18 years old, was deported to Canada by the Emigration Inspector yesterday on the charge of being a common pauper.

American Navigation Regulations.

THE ROAD AT SEA.

Postponement of the Regulations Agreed to by British and Americans.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The resolution reported by the Senate Committe on Commerce and adopted last night by the Senate, postponing the time of taking effect of the revised international regulations for preventing collisions at sea, which has been fixed for March 1, 1895, contains a preamble reciting, that while Great Britain on April 20, 1892, communicated to this government that no time should be lost in carrying the regulations into effect, announced to this government on January 16, 1892, that the British Government found it impossible, until Parliament had been consulted, to fix a date for bringing the regulations into force and earnestly requesting this government to consent to a temporary postponement of their enforcement. As it is desirable that the regulation should be put in force by the Maritime powers simultaneously, the time was postponed to a subsequent date to be fixed by the President by proclamation.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The board of trade has made a long reply seriatim, to the objectors to the new sea rules adopted by the international conference at Washington. The reply concludes with an expression of opinion that no worse service could be done by ship-owners than the disturbing, without the gravest reasons, of the valuable international agreement formulated.

THOSE GOLD BONDS.

Gold Literally Flows Into the Treasury—The Syndicate's Big Profits.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The prospectus in which the new 4 per cent. Government bonds are offered to the public by the Morgan-Belmont syndicate was issued yesterday afternoon. The $62,315,000 bonds are offered at 112 1-4, dated Feb. 1, with accrued interest until March 1, which brings the bonds practically to a 3 3-8 per cent. basis, and is about the same price as that at which they are offered in London. The profit to the syndicate will be from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000, according to the cost of securing the gold and the losses on the sterling operations by which gold exports are checked. J. Pierrepont Morgan says that the offering of the bonds to the public is a mere formality as the whole sale is already completed. Subscriptions are in for twice the amount of the bonds to be sold in this country, and it is probable that subscriptions will be closed to-night. The gold deposited by the syndicate in the sub-treasury yesterday amounted to $2,457,417, the amount deposited throughout the country now aggregating over $32,000,000. The deposits of gold due from this country are practically completed.

Another Canadian Bigamist.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Feb. 20.—Mildred Whitmore, 21 years old, was arrested yesterday for bigamy. Four years ago she met a man named John Harkins, of Dufferin, Ont. Each became enamored of the other and a marriage soon followed. Both lived happily for some time until she became wearied of her husband. Some time afterward, the story goes, she met a man named Whitmore, of Orangeville, Ont., and after a limited courtship married him. Then trouble began. She was arrested for bigamy and indicted. She gave bail to appear before the court of assizes. When the time for her appearance arrived she was not to be found. But yesterday she was found by officer Smith of Orangeville and has consented to return to Canada without the formalities of extradition proceedings.

That Temperance Petition.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Mr. Blair (Rep., N.H.) introduced in the House yesterday a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the manufacture, importation, exportation, transportation and sale of alcoholic liquors in the United States. The measure was offered at the request of the general officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and as the legal expression of the polyglot petition just presented to the President of the United States.

Starving in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—According to a report made by the Outdoor Relief Committee of the County Board there are 150,000 persons in Chicago who require assistance to avoid starvation; 50,000 persons have already been supported at their homes at public expense. Many are said to be industrious persons who have been out of employment until their credit and resources are exhausted. Many more are in danger of being evicted from their homes.

Terrible Diphtheria Scourge.

CORRY, Pa., Feb. 20.—The village of Grand Valley is being visited by a terrible scourge of diphtheria. Fifteen deaths have occurred and the State Board of Health has taken measures to check the spread of the disease.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Feb. 20, 1895.

On the street yesterday 200 bushels of wheat brought 63 1-2 to 64 1-2c. for white, 61 to 62c. for red and 60 1-2c. for goose. Some 300 bushels of barley sold at 48c. and 300 of oats at 35 1-2 to 37c. There is no change in outside quotations.

It was another quiet day at the New York stock exchange, the traders having held aloof pending the outcome of the efforts of certain senators to pass a free silver coinage bill. There was also a disposition to await the result of the government bond offering by the Belmont Morgan syndicate. At the opening the market was quiet and a feeling of hesitancy prevailed but this soon gave way to firmness and prices moved up 1-4 to 1 3-8 per cent. Jersey Central, Lackawanna, Delaware and Hudson, Coalgas, New England, The Grangers, Chicago Gas and Sugar were all prominent in the rise. The strength of the last named was due to the advance in refined sugar. After the advance noted prices yielded all along the line.

In London the new American loan was at 3 1-2 per cent. premium. Money was scarce on preparations for applications for the loan. Applications will probably be astonishingly large. The stock markets were quiet and dullish.

THE TWO EXTREMES!

HATS and BOOTS

Early Styles for Spring Trade.

25 cases of New Goods for the coming spring have already been opened out, consisting of 10 cases of the latest styles of English and American Spring Hats, and 15 cases of Solid Comfort Boots, Shoes and Slippers, from the best makers in the world.

At the HEAD to Stay!

Words are weak in attempting to describe our range in everything that goes to make up the smartest HAT STOCK to be found. We aim to get every first-class idea for the "top" extreme, and we are sure to please, as we we are always—"AT THE HEAD TO STAY."

WIVES, SISTERS, MOTHERS, do you like that Hat your Husband, Brother or Son wears? Send him to a Hat Store where they fit Hats to THE STYLE OF THE MAN. What looks well on some folks may not look well on him. We have a happy knack for head dressing. Don't spoil your credit by a seedy top-piece—look like prosperity. We have the pick of the styles from such famous English makers as Stanley & Co, Jackson & Co and Wilkinson & Co; and we have the celebrated American EAGLE brand of Fur Hats, union made. The prices won't scare you, either. If you buy your Hats at GOUGH'S you'll soon find out that you save just 20 per cent.

At the FOOT to Lead!

People who wear our Shoes say they enjoy as much solid comfort as the old-timers who wore sandals. But ours are handsome as well as comfortable. We sell easy fitting, durable Shoes, with all the style put on to them that such artistic makers as Slater & Son, of Montreal, can invent. We have all intermediate makes, as well as the cheaper grades from Lower Canada, where they don't pay much for making—sometimes nothing at all.

LADIES are reminded that all the best Boots marked at other stores to sell at $3.00 and $4.00 we mark at $2.00 and $3.00. Cheaper lines run from 75c to $1.50.

GENTLEMEN are reminded that all the best Boots marked at other stores to sell at $3.50 and $5.00 we mark at $2.50 and $3.90. Cheaper lines run from 90c. to $1.75.

It's the same way with Misses, Boys and Children's Boots and Shoes—the goods and prices will do the talking better than anything we can say.

Little Men and Women

I have made a specialty of taking Babies Pictures for years, and the task has become an easy one. To be successful in this special line it is necessary to study the nature of the youngsters and their characteristics. That's why mothers find less difficulty in getting good photos of their little ones here than elsewhere. Now is the season of the year, before the sun darkens the complexion, to have your work done.

The Rush on the Voters' Lists Continued.

ELECTIONS LATE IN APRIL

The Political Prophets Say So—Two Ministers Looking Over the Ground in Montreal—Printers Working on the Lists—Various Ottawa Matters.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 21.—At the Supreme Court yesterday argument was heard in the Chatham National Bank vs. McKeen. An interesting feature was involved in the next case, Bradshaw vs. the Foreign Mission Board of the Baptist church, being the question of right of appeal from judgment given by a judge who has since resigned, in this case, Judge Palmer, of New Brunswick. The appellant Mrs. Bradshaw took suit against the legality of the will of her husband by which he willed $70,000 to the Missionary Board and left his family without anything. It was held that he was not competent at the time to make his will. What is wanted is a new trial. This will likely be granted.

The Montreal delegation who desire assistance from the Dominion Government to bring settlers from Michigan to the Nipissing district to reside on lands of the Colonization and Expatriation Society, interviewed the Government this afternoon. The Michigan part of delegation will not arrive until Friday.

Hon. John Costigan, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, yesterday denied all knowledge of another Behring Sea commission being appointed by Great Britain, Russia and United States, as stated in despatches from Washington. He believes the report is a fabrication, pure and simple, and made up without the slightest foundation.

Hon. J.A. Ouimet and Hon. John Haggart are in Montreal looking after Conservative organization in that district. They met a number of prominent Conservatives yesterday and talked over local organization.

A Toronto despatch says: To hasten the completion of the voters' lists the Government has given out a number to outside newspaper offices with instructions to have them completed at the earliest possible moment. The Orange Sentinel is among the papers to get some of the patronage, and it has rented twenty-five printers' cases from the old Empire to hasten the work along. This has given rise to the rumor that the elections is at hand, April 25 being the date named.

A WOMAN IN IT AGAIN.

A Michigan Constable Shoots His Sweetheart's Brother for Interfering.

UNION CITY, Mich., Feb. 21.—Ed. Cosier, a village policeman, was out walking last night with a Miss Davis when her brother James came along and objected to her being on the street with the officer at that time of night and told her to go home. This ruffled the officer and he and Davis were soon at close quarters. During the row Cosier pulled a revolver and shot, the ball entering just below the heart, passed upward and lodged under the left shoulder blade.

A young couple with the officer and Miss Davis skipped. Cosier stayed by his victim after he fell to the ground and made explanations to the excited crowd that soon gathered. The wounded man was at once taken to his home when physicians were called and removed the ball. While Davis seemed fairly comfortable the doctors say his recovery is doubtful. Cosier gave himself up.

Vigorous Measures.

ALBANY, Feb. 21.—Commodore Elbridge T. Gerry, of New York, argued before the Senate judiciary and the assembly codes committees yesterday in favor of his bill to adopt the whipping post in this state as a punishment for certain offences in addition to the state prison sentence. After the hearing the Senate judiciary committee in executive session decided to report the bill favorably amended so that corporal punishment may be inflicted on persons assaulting a child of either sex under the age of 16 years. Wife-beaters, whom Mr. Gerry was anxious to reach as well, are exempted from the provisions of the bill to the amendment.

Pretty.

A bedroom suite of native white maple with birdseye maple panels, now in A. Clegg's window, attracted considerable notice on Saturday; and especially during the evening large numbers stopped to admire. It is almost white, of neat design, just the thing for a young ladies room. Though pretty and dainty, it is not expensive. dw

POSITION IS CRITICAL

Grave Questions in the Lands Across the Sea.

THE CRISIS IN GREAT BRITAIN

A Motion to be Sprung To-Day in the Hope of Defeating the Government—The Egyptian Question—The Jealous Frenchman's Protest.

PARIS, Feb. 21.—The Journal des Debats, commenting on a despatch from Cairo to the London Times, dealing with Egyptian affairs, says: "The English press seems to have lost the respect which is due to the Khedive, and also to have lost its capability to appreciate the real position of affairs. It is France's task to arouse Europe from her apathy and cause a demonstration of sympathy with Egypt and against Great Britain. Inquiries at all the Chancelleries show that the whole of Europe considers itself wronged by the indefinite occupation of Egypt by England."

The Cabinet has decided that if the German Reichstag votes in favor of granting bounties upon exported sugar measures will be immediately taken by France to counteract the effect of such bounties upon the French market.

FLORENCE, Feb. 21.—The trial of Signor Merlino, an anarchist, who was accused of publishing seditious pamphlets, ended here yesterday in his acquittal. The verdict was loudly applauded by the spectators.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—A despatch from Constantinople to the Standard says the witnesses recently examined by the Armenian commission of inquiry at Moosh have been anti-Turkish. Five of them gave testimony to having been witnesses of massacres of children.

A despatch from Foo Chow reports that numerous secret societies are being formed whose objects are unknown. It is supposed, however, that they are political organizations.

Japanese warships are in Formosa channel waiting to intercept vessels with contraband cargoes.

A Central News despatch from Tokio says that Admiral Ito reports from Wei-Hai-Wei under the date of February 17 as follows: To-day the entire fleet entered the harbor. The forts on Liu-Kung-Tao Island, the torpedo stations and the warships Chen-Yuen, Chi-Yuen, Kwang-Pin, Chen-Pien, Chen-Chun, Chen-Pi, Chen-Nan, Chen-Si and Chen-Leng, together with the government buildings, were ceded to us and our crews were sent to prepare the ships for sailing. The Chen-Yuen will temporarily be sent to Port Arthur and the other vessels will be sent to Japan. All of the forts are now held by crews from the Port Arthur naval station. The Ywang-Chi was disarmed and given up as a conveyance for the remains of Admiral Ting.

Queen Victoria arrived at Windsor Castle yesterday.

A despatch to the Standard from Constantinople says that in consequence of the action of the customs authorities at Jaffa an American tourist to the Holy Land has been greatly annoyed and hindered. Complaint was made by many tourists to United States Minister Terrell, upon whose representations the Porte has recalled the director of customs at Jaffa and tourists will be enabled to visit the holy places a great deal more readily in future.

The Central News correspondent in Constantinople says: "The Druses in North Syria continue turbulent. They recently attacked the house of the sub-Governor of the Houran district and forced him to flee to Damascus."

The Central News correspondent in Tokio says: Premier Count Ito made a speech in the Chamber to-day on the supplementary budget for the expenses of the war with China. He received the undivided attention of the members and was loudly applauded by all when he took his seat.

A despatch dated at Kai-Ping on the 17th says that about 1,000 Chinese troops attacked the Japanese outposts at Kumo-Cheng in the morning and were promptly repulsed. The Chinese retreated precipitately leaving 80 dead on the field. The number of wounded had not been ascertained. The Japanese suffered no losses whatever.

The Daily News is informed that Sir Henry James, Liberal Unionist, will move the adjournment of the House of Commons to-day to direct attention to the Indian cotton duties. He proposes to divide the House. The division will be extremely critical as many Liberals have Lancashire seats. The News will have a double leader on the subject. The tone of this leader and the care taken to avoid definite opinions betray some apprehension as to the result.

The Daily Chronicle will discuss Henry James' motion in a leader headed "The Government in danger. A possible dissolution."

The writer says: Mr. Balfour who at first was disinclined to challenge a division on the cotton duties issue has, it is said, been influenced by Mr. Chamberlain to try to throw the Government out on any issue whatever. If the Tories under the leadership of Mr. Balfour chooses to adopt this policy of alarmed and panic-stricken selfishness by all means let them come into office on the most inglorious policy with which a great English party was ever identified.

The Times correspondent in Cairo says that the attitude of the Egyptian lower classes in Alexandria towards Europeans, especially British soldiers and sailors, is openly defiant and aggressive. The circumstances favor the chances of a popular disturbance. He adds: "One disquieting feature is the large influx of Bedouins into the outskirts of the town. All the symptoms vividly recall those that heralded the massacres of 1882."

THE POST-MORTEM SHOWING

Prisoners Remanded for Another Week—Against Them the Crown Will Use Their Own Wives' Evidence—Is Harry Hyams a Bigamist?

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—The Hyams were again remanded for a week yesterday, the Crown Attorney stating that the detectives had collected a great deal of evidence, but the import of it he did not wish to disclose until certain points were investigated.

Detective Cuddy has succeeded in finding the carpenters who repaired the hoist both before and after the tragedy, and they will prove the condition of the rope, weight and slide. It will be shown that the slide was removed from the cellar by instruction of the Hyams and after the tragedy they had it put back again so as to guard the weight.

The Crown will endeavor to get Mrs. Dallas Hyams to return to the city and give evidence, and they will also use Mrs. Harry Hyams in the witness box. It will be shown that at the time of the tragedy the Hyams were threatened with the bailiff, and also that Mrs. Harry Hyams, before her marriage gave her prospective husband $10,000 of the insurance she received on account of her brother's death.

In making his post mortem examination Dr. Caven discovered that all along the back of the skull, at the base, the bone was badly fractured, presenting an appearance as if the body had fallen head foremost down the hoist. This, together with the fact that a number of soap boxes in an upper flat were sprinkled over with blood, leads to the theory that Wells met his death upstairs.

County Crown Attorney Curry and Detectives Cuddy and Davis are engaged in reading the business correspondence of the Hyams brothers, and the letters that were written from one to another. Some of the letters show that the brothers were in financial troubles. About a thousand addressed envelopes were seized, these having provided work for the employes when there was nothing else to do, although good salaries were paid.

It was learned from a private source that Chapman Hyams, the New Orleans millionaire, brother of the twin prisoners, was either in the city or would be here to-day or to-morrow. He could not be found at the hotels. This is the man whom New Orleans despatches stated claimed to be no connection whatever of the accused. This would give evidence to the report that $5,000 had been sent here to the prisoners' counsel and that two two private American detectives would reach Toronto by the first of March to assist in getting up the case for the defence.

Information has been received from New York which leads the Crown to believe that Harry Hyams is a bigamist, as it is alleged that he was married ten years ago in Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE LEGISLATURE

Opens With the Usual Pageantry This Afternoon.

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—This afternoon under the usual military escort his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor opened the first session of the eighth Parliament of Ontario. Promptly at three o'clock he walked into the assembly room of the Parliament buildings in Queen's park and found the Speaker's chair vacant. On account of that intentional and customary oversight he walked out again and waited around until a Speaker was chosen. This is the usual custom. W. D. Balfour was then by vote of the members authorized to attach "Hon." to his name and take the chair. When the Lieutenant-Governor was informed of the fact he returned and delivered the speech from the throne.

Senn Unseated.

Switchman Ashby's Death.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Feb. 21.—The coroner held an inquest yesterday afternoon on the body of the switchman Ashby who met his death in the G.T.R. yard at an early hour in the morning. Several witnesses testified that the young man, who was employed to turn switches in the yard, went in between the moving cars to draw the pin on his own suggestion and accord, and evidently got his foot caught in the guard rail of the switch frog, the jury returning a verdict to that effect. On account of the statutes allowing railway companies to remove the blocking in the frogs of switches from Dec. 1st to April 1st each year no blame was attached to either the company or its employes in connection with the young man's death.

Another Counterfeiter Goes Up.

INGERSOLL, Ont., Feb. 21.—Ross, the alleged counterfeiter, was re-arrested on a fresh charge, preferred by Chief Skirving, of having in his possession moulds for the manufacture of counterfeit coin. Palmer, his chum, gave evidence against him. Palmer stated that he had held the moulds at Ross' house while Ross melted the material and poured it into them. Police Magistrate Chadwick committed the prisoner for trial at the Woodstock assizes on March 19.

Car Stables at Halifax Burned.

HALIFAX, N. S. Feb. 21.—Fire completely destroyed the horse car stables at the north end of the city this morning. The horses were all saved, but sixteen cars and everything else in the building was lost. A grocery adjoining, owned by Edward Wright, was badly damaged and a tenement in the rear of the stables destroyed. Insurance on stables, $20,000; but this covered horses as well as other property.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR FOSTER.

The St. Thomas Journal has been propounding some questions to Finance Minister Foster, founded on his own returns, which he will experience some difficulty in answering. Here are a few of them:—

The exports of bacons, hams, pork and lard for the three years, 1874 to 1876, were	$4,269,000
For the years 1889 to 1891	1,895,000
Loss in three years of protection	$2,674,000
Did the N. P. cause this loss?
Butter exports 1874-76 were	$7,498,000
In 1889-91 they were	1,274,000
Decrease under protection	$6,224,000
Is the N. P. responsible?

Products of the forest (except timber) exported in three low tariff years were:—

1873	$8,583,000
1874	7,417,000
1875	8,073,000
	$24,730,000

Average, $8,000,000 per year.

Under protection they were fostered as follows:—

1885	$4,927,000
1886	4,926,000
1887	3,574,000
	$13,427,000

Average, $4,476,000.

Score another record for the N. P.!

We sold of agricultural produce:

In 1874	$19,500,000
In 1875	17,256,000
In 1876	21,150,000
	$57,907,000

Average, $19,300,000 per year.

Protection helped the farmer to export the following values:

1889	$13,414,000
1890	11,906,000
1891	13,686,000
	$38,986,000

Average, $12,996,000, say $13,000,000.

And Manitoba was "developed" meantime.

Dear Mr. Foster, will you accept, as showing the farmers' prosperity, as you asked us to do with your Galt figures, "these two samples, the one of a high protective tariff—the other of what we call free trade on the principle of a revenue tariff?" Don't you really think they are fairer than a snap comparison between 1878 and 1894?

How about mines? Weren't they to be specially encouraged—in Nova Scotia for example?

They exported in 1872-4	$14,113,000
Average per year	4,700,000

When protection was well established the figures were:

In 1891-3	$6,685,000
Average	2,895,000

Was it the N. P. that spoiled their export trade?

Manufacturers—surely the Year Book will catch us out on manufactures! If the N. P. hasn't helped its own nurselings something must be wrong!

Let us try:

Exports in 1873	$24,460,000
" 1874	22,916,000
" 1875	20,025,000
	$67,401,000
Average per year	22,470,000

Then the flies came off the wheel, and it hummed around as follows:

1885	$19,256,000
1886	18,956,000
1887	19,999,000
	$58,214,000

Average, $19,400,000, for a population about three-quarters of a million larger. What sort of insects are on the wheel now?

ZION—OTONABEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The annual tea and entertainment under the auspices of Court Zion, No. 227, C.O.F., took place Tuesday evening and was a most gratifying success in every respect. The ladies of Zion, as in former years, provided an excellent and toothsome supper in the hall during the early part of the evening, which was partaken of by a large number who had attended the affair from all parts of the district. After supper Bro. William Kindred took the chair and after a few humourous remarks, introduced the following programme:—

Vocal duet	Misses T and E Kindred
Vocal solo	Mr T J T Bagley
Recitation	Miss Etta Kindred
Comic Song	Mr Clithero
Recitation	Miss M Hamilton
Selection—Mouthorgan and autoharp	Miss M [and Master B Kindred
Vocal Solo	Mr T J T Bagley
Recitation	Mr. Russel
Vocal duet	Misses T and E Kindred
Comic Song	Mr Clithero
Dialogue	"Taking the Census"
Vocal solo	Miss Jennie Kindred
Selection—Mouthorgan and autoharp	Miss M [Kindred and Mr Bagley
Club swinging	Miss Jennie Kindred
Mouthorgan Duet	Masters B Kindred and [B Hutchinson
Quartette	The Kindred Family

The different numbers on the programme were warmly received, and while all acquitted themselves well in their several numbers, special mention should be made of the dialogue, and also the club swinging and singing of little Jennie Kindred. Miss Tracie Kindred played the accompaniments of the evening very acceptably. At the conclusion of the entertainment an unanimous vote of thanks was tendered those who assisted in making this annual event a success in every way.

An Editor's Romantic Escapade.

THORNBURY, Ont., Feb. 21.—W. J. Fanson, publisher of the Thornbury Herald, left his office on Wednesday, the 13th instant, saying he was going to take a week's holidays. It is now learned that, accompanied by Miss Sadie Myles, daughter of James Myles, one of Euphrasia's most successful farmers, Mr. Fanson drove to Collingwood, where they were quietly married. The young lady had been visiting her sister, Mrs. W. E. Coffey, who supposed she had returned home to wait on her mother, who is ill. Mr. and Mrs. Fanson are supposed to have gone to Chicago. Miss Myles' father objected to the match, which is believed to be the reason of the elopement.

T. H. & B. Contractors Assign.

HAMILTON, Feb. 21.—Bracey Bros. & Co., of Chicago, the contractors who are building the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway, have assigned to Lawyer J. V. Teetzel. The firm has been financially embarrassed for some time and the strike on section 20 of the road precipitated matters. The Dominion Construction Company, which let the contract for building the road from Hamilton to Brantford to Bracey & Co., held 50 per cent. of the contract price until the completion of the work and the Chicago firm were unable to raise the funds to pay wages and complete the work.

THE LINDSAY CHEESE BOARD.

Buyers Throw Cold Water on the Idea of Establishing One.

Lindsay is most anxious for the re-establishment of a cheese board in that town, but the buyers do not see eye to eye with the Board of Trade of that town as to the advantages, which would accrue consequent upon such establishment.

In reference to this matter Mr. W. H Wrighton received the following letter to-day:—

Lindsay, February, 18th, 1895.

W. H. Wrighton, Esq., Peterborough.

DEAR SIR:—With a view of encouraging additional cheese factories in this section, also the establishing of creameries, our Board of Trade have asked those interested to meet here in conference on Saturday the 23rd inst., at 11 a.m. The fact of this conference having been called has already awakened interest in several sections where cheese factories have not been within reach. If the buyers will indicate by their presence at the meeting or correspondence favorable to the establishment of a cheese board in Lindsay the production of cheese in this section of the country will vastly increase.

Will you be able to attend our meeting and encourage the establishment of a cheese board, or, if not convenient to be here in person will you intimate by correspondence that you will patronize it as a buyer if it should be established. Yours truly,

D. RAY, President.

The Lindsay Board of Trade will find difficulty in construing Mr. Wrighton's reply as favourable to the scheme. He does not see how additional cheese factories would be encouraged by the move, and strongly advises against the establishment of creameries, when creamery butter is only bringing 14 and 16c. per pound in Montreal. Not more than a car or a car and a half of cheese would be offered at each meeting of such a Board, and the buyers will think twice about encouraging a venture which was attended with such disastrous results several years ago, since when the conditions have not materially altered.

HAULTAIN.

A Presentation and Address.

The Rev. R. Emberson, pastor of the Methodist mission in South Burleigh, was agreeably surprised on Tuesday evening, Feb. 12th, at the close of his service with the gift of a fur cap, presented by Miss Lander, accompanied by an address read by Miss Church:

DEAR PASTOR,—Some of your friends at this appointment thought they would like to express their gratitude to you for the deep interest you have taken in your work amongst us. It is the earnest desire of every member of your church here that many more may be brought in before you leave, and that God will bless your work all over the mission. May you long be spared to direct wanderers in the narrow way, and may many respond to the call wherever you may be placed. We ask your acceptance of this cap as a slight token of our appreciation of your labours. We earnestly hope that every temporal blessing may be yours in this life, and in the end, life everlasting.

Signed on behalf of your friends,

CHARLES HALES, Steward.

Although Mr. Emberson was completely taken by surprise, he replied feelingly in a few well chosen words.

The ice was in excellent condition and the costumes elegant, altogether presenting a most brilliant aspect. No partiality was shown by the judges in the discharge of their duty. LOCAL NEWS.

The approaching annual Sunday school convention of the county of Peterborough, which is to be held here on Feb. 28th and March 1st, promises to be both entertaining and instructive. It will be held in the Presbyterian church. Many well known Sunday school workers are expected, such as Mr. Duncan, from Toronto, Rev. G. McEwen, the provincial secretary of Normal work, and the ministers and laymen of the county. Addresses will be given on such topics as the following: "How can we Improve the Teaching Power of our Sunday Schools?" by Rev. Jas. McFarlane, of Warkworth, "The Mission of the Young People's Society in Relation to the Spiritual Work of the Sunday School, from the Standpoint of the Pastor," by the Rev. Dr. McClelland, Havelock, and, "The Lay man," Sheriff Hall, Peterborough; "Personal Consecration Needed for Successful Teaching," by the Rev. D. A. Thompson of Hastings. Evangelistic addresses will be given by the following reverend gentlemen: "Remember Now Thy Creator," Rev. M. Weaver, of Norwood, "Come Unto Me and I will give you Rest," Rev. L. Williams, of Havelock; "Whosoever Will May Come," by Rev. A. MacWilliams, of Peterborough; "Her Ways are Ways of Pleasantness," by Rev. J. J. Rae, of Peterborough. Delegates who intend to be present should send their names to Wm. Matheson, Esq., Havelock, chairman of the Billetting Committee. Every effort will be made to make all feel comfortable and at home.

Phillip Bros. are going to begin the construction of their new block, which will include hardware and drug stores.

Railway business here is improving, and great quantities of freight are passing through.

Mr. G. Curtis, Peterborough, is going to start a new harness shop in town in the near future.

Mr. John Armstrong, who lives a few miles south of the town, brought in a load of hay on Monday for Mr. John Maiden. When going into Mr. Maiden's yard the rack caught on the gate post and threw Mr. Armstrong off the load on to the tongue of the sleigh between the horses. He was not hurt badly and recovered from his shock in a few minutes. His injuries might have been more severe, but for the timely assistance of Mr. Maiden, who caught the horses by the head.

Mr. E. Nancarrow and family, Campbellford, were in town over Sunday.

Last week, Mr. Wm. Burk, fireman, fell from his engine, while in motion, at Tweed, and received some very severe injuries and is likely to be confined to his bed for several months. His brother firemen are taking a subscription list around town, and from reports are getting a large amount of assistance.

Mr. Wm. Dineen has purchased the property of Mrs. Clancy opposite the C.P.R. station, on which he intends to build a large and commodious hotel.

Three licenses have been granted to this town at three hundred dollars, each. The hotel keepers will probably go into the boarding house business.

Mr. R. Philips and wife returned from a few days visit to Trenton, last Friday.

Mr. Jas. Laing has been confined to the house with rheumatism for the past week.

The first hockey match of the season was played on the Havelock rink last Saturday night, between the Maple Leafs and the Rosebuds, both town teams. The score was a tie—3 to 3.

THE GRAND CONCERT.

The whole village and surrounding country is excited over the grand concert to be given in Drain's hall on Friday evening, Feb. 22nd. A splendid programme will be presented in which Miss Smith and Mr. Jos. A. Smith will contribute as well as that phenomenal double team of irresistible fun makers, Danny Simons and Johnny Connors, of Peterborough. These two clever performers are a whole show in themselves, their grand specialties being unsurpassed by any combination in any of the cities. These with the other excellent features will make the concert and entertainment on Friday night, Feb. 22, in Drain's Hall well worth attending. Don't miss it. Popular prices of admission.

THE EDITOR'S EXPERIENCE.

A SUFFERER FOR SEVERAL YEARS FROM ACUTE DYSPEPSIA.

Food Distressed Him and it Began to Have a Weakening Effect on the Heart—Many Remedies Failed Before a Cure was Found.

From the Canso, N.S., Breeze.

While newspaper men are called upon in their capacity as pub lishers to print from week to week words of praise spoken in favour of proprietary medicines, it is not often that the editor himself feels it his duty to say a good word on behalf of any of these preparations. And yet if a newspaper man has actually found benefit from the use of a proprietary medicine, why should he not make it known to his readers, and thus perhaps point out to some of them the road to renewed health. The editor of the Breeze believes it his duty to say a few words of praise in favour of a remedy that has proved an inestimable boon to him, and to say them without any solicitation on the part of the proprietors of the medicine, who, as a matter of fact, had no reason to know that he was ailing or was using their medicine. For several years the editor of the Breeze had been subject to that distressing complaint, dyspepsia, and only those who have been similarly troubled can know how much misery this trouble entails. He had but very little appetite, and what he did eat caused an unpleasant feeling of fullness, and made him feel languid and heavy, often causing intense pain in the stomach only relieved by vomiting up the food which he had taken. He was also troubled with palpitation of the heart, brought on no doubt by the dyspepsia. Numerous remedies alleged to cure dyspepsia were tried, but without success, and the trouble was approaching a chronic state. At the suggestion of a friend Dr. William's Pink Pills were tried and relief soon followed their use, and after a few boxes had been taken the editor was able to assert positively that he had been cured of his dyspepsia by this remedy that has proved so great a blessing to mankind. To anyone troubled with this complaint he would strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. To newspaper men particularly they will be found just the thing to impart health and vigor to the whole system and enable them to pursue their work free from that tired, despondent feeling so prevalent among the craft. The editor of the Breeze firmly believes that what they have done for him they will do for others, and he gives them his hearty and unsolicited endorsation.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an unfailing cure for all troubles resulting from poverty of the blood or shattered nerves, and where given a fair trial they never fail in cases like that above related. Sold by all dealers, or sent postpaid at 50 cents a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams, Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schnectady, N. Y. See that the registered trade mark is on all packages.

Summary Treatment.

Old Uncle Gabe's young masters love to mystify him with long words, which he will never own that he does not understand.

One day one of them said to him: "Uncle Gabe, if you and your wife were walking down the street and a man should come up and recognize you, what would you do?"

"I'd knock him down," promptly returned Uncle Gabe.—Harper's Bazar.

To Stop a Trolley Car Instantly.

A Rochester man has devised a plan by which a trolley street car can be stopped almost instantaneously, or within a space of three feet, while the car is going at full speed. His device is operated by a lever in the motorman's cab. It is, generally speaking, a steel shoe, upon which the rear wheels of the car ride, the under side of which is corrugated so as to produce great friction upon the rails of the track. On the top of the shoe is an arrangement which, as soon as the wheel rises upon the shoe, clamps the outer rim of the wheel and at the same time grasps the inner edge of the rail. The simple weight of the car crowds down the shoe upon the rail and at the same time clamps together, as in a vise, the wheel and the rail, and all this by a single movement on the part of the motorman.—New York Telegram.

Simple Words the Best.

The following little story is told of a citizen of Port Chester, N. Y., whose education was somewhat superior to his wife's, a fact regarding which she was very sensitive.

On one occasion the man drove over to White Plains to inquire regarding the health of his sister-in-law, who was dangerously ill. Upon returning he was met by his wife, who asked of her sister's condition.

"She is convalescent," replied the man.

Immediately and in the most emphatic manner the woman cried out: "I want none of your soothing words. I want facts. You tell me this minute, Is my sister dead or alive?"—New York Herald.

The Farmer Was Forgetful.

The Berwick man who took several thousand dollars from the bank, put it in his vest pocket, and then lost the garment was convinced that the banks are yet the best places to keep money. He thought some tramp had stolen the vest, but when later he found vest and money in a grain box where he had foolishly laid it he became more than ever convinced of the security which the Maine banks afford.—Augusta (Me.) Journal.

A "Don't" For Summer.

"Don't," says a writer in the Boston Traveller, and it is a good "don't" to listen to, "have a big Chinese porcelain jar on a veranda only four times as big as the width of the jar."

Waste That Is Now Valuable.

A generation ago there was hardly a mill of any kind that was not troubled with a heap of rubbish or waste material that it did not know what to do with. Silk manufacturers saw the rise of this heap with annoyance, and they took it as a favor if any one would cart it away and use it as a fertilizer. An English inventor guessed at the possibilities in this pile of refuse and set about inventing machinery to utilize it. Today, as a result of his foresight and genius, 5,000 persons are employed in making the finest silk plushes, ribbons and velvets from the refuse piles of silk mills, and the inventor has grown rich.

The cottonseed oil industry is a better known illustration of economizing waste, but the dimensions to which the industry has grown are not so generally known. The annual product in oil, cake, lint and hulls from cotton seed, which a generation ago was allowed to rot, is $27,000,000, and it could be made greater if there was a market for the product.—Philadelphia Press.

The Arab's Donkey.

One sees Arabs coming into Constantinople with a donkey load of wood, which they sell for 3 francs. They have come 25 miles with it, sell it, and next day ride the donkey back. As a meal costs them but 2 cents, the wood nothing, and the donkey does all the work, what seems a small profit is really a good one. And who is it that earns it?

All saddle beasts in the east go what our Anglomaniacs call "artificial" gaits; in fact, three-fourths of all the animals in the world do so. Mules which are ridden always "sidle" or amble, all donkeys running-walk, rack or amble. But nowhere except in our southern states have these gaits been studied as an art, improved on and bred from.—Colonel T. A. Dodge in Harper's.

Passed Over His Last Act.

M. de Semonville was a political utilitarian who neglected nothing and knew how to make capital of everything. When he died, Talleyrand fell into deep thought and then said, "I cannot divine what advantage Semonville gained in doing this."

The fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla, once fairly tried, becomes the favorite spring medicine, speaks volumes for its excellence and merit.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.

The "Monty" Tobogan Club.

The "Monty" toboggan club held its first outing of the season on the Edinburgh street hill last night. About twenty-five or thirty young people were in evidence and a most ajoyable evening was spent. After indulging in the pleasure of tobogganing until 11.30 o'clock the party repaired to the residence of Mr. David Breeze, Fishery Inspector, where they were most hospitably entertained by Mrs. Breeze. After dancing for several hours the tobogganers were invited to partake of a most invitting repast by the host and hostess.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

The first session of the eighth Legislature met in Toronto this afternoon. The Speech from the Throne, embodying the legislative programme for the session, which will be printed in extenso in tomorrow's issue, after referring to the events of the past year, outlines the giving of legislative expression to the agitation for law reform, and for the extension of the registration of voters to towns. Bills will be considered for extending the benefits of the Factory Act and the Children's Protection Act and for consolidating the acts relating to Agricultural societies, Mechanics Institutes and Free Libraries. The announcement is made that an appeal is being prepared to the Privy Council respecting prohibition powers. The fees system will be dealt with presumably on the basis of the commission's report. The question of the maintenance of Government House at the expense of the province will also receive attention. To indicate that the Ontario Government is in the habit of dealing with important interests just after an election that places them in power for another four years instead of just before such an event, the speech promises on behalf of the Government that a pioneer dairy farm shall be established in the Northern districts of Ontario, to attract further attention to these districts and to prove their adaptability to agriculture. Apparently the interests of the great farming community holds an uppermost place in the government programme, and while a local goverment cannot do much to advance prices it can by judicious fostering of the agricultural interests, greatly enable the farmer to achieve the best results and thus neutralize the unsatisfactory conditions that otherwise obtain. On the whole, the government programme shows that all the interests of the province are consulted and that a wise and watchful care is diligently exercised; circumstances that fully justify the renewed pledge of confidence the Government has received at the hands of the people.

Mr. Stratton's seat in the Legislature is directly behind Hon. G. W. Ross and Hon. Mr. Gibson, and alongside Hon. Mr. Bronson. The Toronto Evening News says that Mr. Stratton will occupy the position of Chairman of the Printing Committee.

"The Crucifix—Poems and Songs."

This is the title of a neat little collection of poems by Mr. J. Carlon, issued in brochure form, from the EXAMINER presses. The exigeant attention demanded by the prosaic duties of newspaper work leaves little time and opportunity for the reading of such a little work with the care and attention necessary to deal with it critically. But even a cursory reading reveals scintillations of poetic fire that catch the eye of the mind and compel the admiration of even the passing reader. The title poem "The Crucifix," is a somewhat ambitious theme, boldly conceived, boldly treated and with decided dramatic force. Then follow several poems and songs which have decided merit apart from the rare metrical swing and tuneful phrases that characterize all Mr. Carlon's writings. The mine of poetry has been so long and industriously worked that it is difficult for a worker to bring forth his gems in a new form. But Mr. Carlon has an originality of expression and characteristic absence of hackneyed use of language; and, as before remarked, a bounty of word painting and withal a tuneful metrical gait that enables one, so to speak, to keep step with him and follow him sympathetically and well pleased through his lyrical wanderings in pleasant scenes. Temporis Æstus with its mystical musings and graceful word flow; "The Guillotine" with its dramatic directness; "Idealia" with its striking originality and beautiful fancies; the dainty steps of the "Minuet" and "A Photograph," are all excellent specimens of Mr. Carlon's more serious vein, while "Lines to a Coquette," "Under the Roses," and "The Little Flower Girl," are fine features of the lyrical gems that abound in the little work. Within the limits of this brief notice no attempt can be made at critical analysis, but all who can appreciate poetical work above the magazine average, the graceful use of graceful language, delicate imaginings daintily voiced, should secure a copy of "The Crucifix—Poems and Songs." The work is on sale at the Peterborough Bookstore and at Salisbury Bros. An edition de luxe is being prepared for private distribution and subscription.

CURLIANA.

The Belleville Colts made their appearance at the rink last night to play off in the draw for the Colts trophy, in which series clubs from Campbellford, Peterborough and Belleville were entered at the beginning of the season. Only two games remained to be played and Belleville sent up strong rinks, composed of rather old colts, in the hope that, if successful, the trophy might be won for the City of the Bay. When the match began it appeared as though it would be a tight one. Skip LaRocha, of Belleville, led Skip Hopkins all through the game, but at the close the Peterborough men rallied and won in this rink by two shots.

On Rink No. 2, where Skip Dickson Davidson was holding down Skip Pope, of Belleville, the visitors only scored on four ends out of the eighteen which were played. Early in the match skip Davidson made a phenomenal shot which so demoralized the Belleville men that they were never "in it" afterwards. Belleville lay one shot on the end. It lay near the tee and was well guarded by two stones lying about fourteen inches apart and probably four feet in front of the shot. There seemed no way to take the shot out but skip Davidson announced his intention of trying to "run the port" between the two guards. "Better measure your own stone first," cautioned vice-skip Teddy Clegg, but Davidson was confident that there was room to squeeze through, if the shot was played just right. He was given his ice and played a bullet, which ran the port and took out the Belleville stone in a manner which made even the visitors cheer. It was probably the truest shot which has been played on the rink this season, as there was not a quarter of an inch to spare on either side as the stone sped between the two guards. The rinks were drawn to play as follows :—

Belleville.		Peterborough.
	RINK NO. 1.

W W Pope, skip...	6	D Davidson, skip.... 26
Total	20	Total 41

Majority for Peterborough, 21 shots.

The Peterborough Colts will probably go to Belleville for the return match next week, but even in case they should lose there, the trophy would still come this way, as they have won three draws and lost none, while Campbellford has suffered defeat three times and Belleville twice. At the conclusion of last night's match the visitors were banquetted at the Palace Restaurant.

The following skips are pitted against each other in the second draw for the Edmison medal :

T Rutherford ..... vs. ..... J H Connal
R P Boucher ..... vs. ..... A McNeil
R M Dennistoun ..... vs. ..... W G Ferguson
T P Attrill ..... vs. ..... R H Kells
S Ray ..... vs. ..... Geo Edmison or R S Davidson

The matches scheduled are to be played by March 2nd.

Yesterday was undoubtedly Peterboroughs Tankard rinks day off, as they were beaten both in the first draw and afterwards in the consolation match. The results so far in the series are appended :—

Toronto Granite....	25	North Bay	27

Hamilton Thistle, Lindsay, Brantford and Chesley are the four clubs which went into the semi-final of the Ontario Tankard competition this morning. Chesley was drawn against Hamilton Thistle and Brantford against Lindsay. The chances are that Hamilton Thistle and Lindsay will meet in the final this afternoon.

The feature of the Tankard play was the great game put up by the Hamilton Thistles. They were first pitted against Oshawa, who more than held their own for several ends. The eastern players then lost ground, and the Ambitious City men literally walked away, scoring one or two points on nearly every end. Prospect Park, who drew a bye in the first round, were the Thistles' second victims, and the city club was never able to stand the pace their opponents set. Lindsay enjoyed a bye in the first round, and then defeated Collingwood easily in the second round. Chesley took the North Bay contingent into camp in the first round, and followed this up with a victory over Guelph Union, much to the latter's surprise. Brantford went into the second round after defeating St. Thomas by a small majority, and walloped Chatham badly. The Toronto Granites were beaten in the first round by Guelph Union, after one of the closest games of the day. Skip Mitchell practically won the game for his team on the twenty-first end, when, with his last stone, he deprived the Granites of two shots.

The result of the matches in which the Peterboroughs figured was as follows :

THE LATE REV. E. DEWART LEWIS.

A Prominent Pastor of the Methodist Church Passes Away.

It will be learned with great regret that Rev. E. Dewart Lewis, of Epsom, Ont., died at Clifton Springs Sanitarium, on Wednesday. The reverend gentlemen was a native of Peterborough, born in North Monaghan, near town. He is the son of the late L. P. Lewis, brother of Rev. J. G. Lewis, of Trenton, and nephew of Rev. Dr. Dewart, editor of the Christian Guardian. He was educated at the Norwood High School and Victoria College. He entered the ministry of the, then, Canada Methodist church about eighteen or twenty years ago and has successfully occupied pastorates at Hastings, Shannonville and Epsom. He was of mild and sympathetic character, a well beloved pastor and an earnest temperance advocate. He was united in marriage in 1882, to Miss Hill, daughter of Rev. Jas. Hill, Brigden. His wife alone survives him, their union not having been blessed with children. At the last Conference held here Rev. Mr. Lewis was in ill health. He, however, proceeded to his charge, but was compelled to give up and seek rest in Muskoka during the summer months. He then tried Clifton Springs, and after apparent improvement returned home, but about the middle of December went back to Clifton Springs. But he steadily declined in health, and on Wednesday death gave him release from his sufferings. The remains will be brought to Peterborough for interment, and the funeral will take place on Saturday at 10.30.

Address and Presentation to Mr. T. Blois by Port Hope Friends.

The Port Hope Guide says: Mr. T. Blois, who for a number of years has been in the employ of the G.T.R. here, has been transferred to Peterborough, which necessitates the removal of himself and family to that place. During their residence among the people of Port Hope they have made many friends by their agreeable and social character. It was always a pleasure to meet Mr. and Mrs. Blois.

Between fifty and sixty personal friends made an unceremonious call at their residence last Tuesday night, and after order had been secured, Mr. F. Wood, Principal of our Public School, read the following address and presented them with a handsome cardinal plush easy chair:

ADDRESS.

To Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Blois:

DEAR FRIENDS.—It is with very deep regret we learned a short time ago that circumstances had arisen which would necessitate your removal from amongst us. No matter how much we may desire change in all other details of life, in regard to our friendships and social relationships we are more conservative and would fain keep them unbroken. But events cannot always be controlled. They come, often without our seeking, and we find our relations, social and otherwise, dissolved and new ones thrust upon us. This phase of life now touches you, and we, but a few among your many friends have met to-night to give expression, if only in a feeble way, to our sincere regard for both of you personally and our sorrow that our hitherto pleasant intercourse must now be regarded as at an end.

In conclusion we ask you to accept this chair, as a slight token of our esteem for you, and as a souvenir of the many friends you leave behind.

We earnestly pray that the future may hold nothing in store for yourselves and your little daughter, but outward prosperity and inward brightness, and that God may bless and keep you to the end.

On behalf of your friends.

Mr. Blois being on duty at Peterborough, was unable to be present, and Mr. Thos. Bell, in a pleasant speech, replied on behalf of Mr. Blois and his wife. The remainder of the evening was very pleasantly spent in games of all kinds and social chat. A liberal supply of refreshments was served from the well-filled baskets of the visitors. The gathering broke up in the small hours of the morning. Mr. and Mr. Blois carry with them the best wishes of a very large circle of friends for their future prosperity in their new home at Peterborough."

SESSIONAL NOTES.

The Ontario Legislature meets to-day and the Toronto News has a gossippy column of notes. Among other things it says:

Mr. J. R. Stratton will succeed Speaker Balfour as chairman of the printing committee.

Nicholas Awrey will again grace the head of the table when the public accounts committee meets.

Hon. Mr. Harty has had the galleries of the assembly room draped to improve its accoustic properties. The curtains are also an ornament.

John Senn, the Patron M. P. P. for Haldimand, was unseated, on Wednesday, after a trial at Osgoode Hall which lasted only ten minutes. Evidence was put in merely of the fact that he was an issuer of marriage licenses at the time of the election.

The supplies this year are not so elaborate as in former years. Uncle Dick Tooley or poor John Smith would be disgusted to find, if they only happened to be on hand, that a hard-hearted and economical Government had deprived them of card cases, fancy toothpicks, ornamental portfolios and other necessaries. The wave of retrenchment has caused the Queen's Printer to issue nothing but plain tin trunks filled only with absolute necessaries in the way of stationery.

One Canadian Industry which has a Branch Across the Lines.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 21.—The old-fashioned winter which New York State has enjoyed the past few weeks, has proven to the proprietors of Dodd's Kidney Pills the wisdom of their decision in establishing a branch warehouse in this city. For a week at a time the various railroads from Canada were blockaded, and no freight of any kind reached the city. Had the old practice of forwarding weekly supplies of the pills from the head establishment in Toronto been adhered to, thousands of users of this remarkable specific would have been disappointed and a serious blow effected the trade. Thanks to the foresight in establishing the branch, however, all orders were filled with promptness.

THE LOCAL BRANCH HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING.

George Street Church is Well Filled—The Reports—Last Year the Best in the History of the Local Branch—Election of Officers—Dr. Henderson's Clever Address.

The annual meeting of the local branch of the Upper Canada branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society was held, last evening, in the George street Methodist church, with Sheriff Hall, the President, in the chair.

On the platform were seated Rev. Mr. Young, Rev. Mr. MacWilliams, Rev. Mr. Trotter and Rev. Dr. Torrance.

The meeting was opened with devotional exercises, Rev. Mr. Young leading in prayer and Rev. Dr. Torrance reading a portion the Scripture.

The secretary announced that at a previous meeting all the OFFICERS OF THE SOCIETY

had been re-elected as follows:

President—Sheriff Hall.
Treasurer—C. McGill.
Secretary—Rev. A. MacWilliams.
Depository Custodian—Peter Connal & Co.

A report was submitted from Peter Connal & Co., custodians of the depository showing that during the year 47 Bibles and 26 Testaments had been issued in comparison with 54 Bibles and 24 Testaments last year. The value of the depository at present is $80.73 in books and $26.66 in cash on hand. The value last year was $109.15.

On motion both reports were adopted, the secretary remarking that the local branch of the society did better last year than in any previous twelve months. In 1894 the sum of $250 had been subscribed to the work, while in 1893 the society had only been able to send $160 to headquarters.

REV. DR. HENDERSON,

of Toronto, was present and though suffering from the effects of a severe cold, addressed the large audience assembled to considerable length. The doctor is a clear and lucid speaker and his remarks on the origin of the Bible, and what it had done for humanity were interesting in the extreme and commanded the closest attention.

As the subject of his discourse, Dr. Henderson took "The Bible—the book from God; the book for man." "We have here," he said, "a book which refuses to be placed on a level with the works of such men even as Plato and Cicero—a book which takes hold of the imperishable parts of a being—a book, the light of whose productions could never have been kindled at the altar of any human creature."

If asked regarding the authenticity of the Bible, the Doctor thought the query could be answered by the very fact that its presence was in itself a miracle. Its compilation was in itself

A MOST MYSTIFYING MIRACLE.

Incidents were chronicled occurring in the deserts of Arabia, in sultry India, in the palaces of Babylon and the prisons of Rome. On the banks of the Tiber, in the valley of Jordan, within the walls of Corinth and in Jerusalem. These incidents were related by the minstrels of David, the monarchs of Solomon, the prophets of Daniel. All classes contributed to it from Saul of Tarsish to the ignorant fisherman and boatmen of the Lake of Galilee. All had contributed to this symphony of the ages, which had running through it all a moral coherence, which makes the book the very essence of the science of human redemption.

"If sixty six books of present day authorship were picked up and bound together what known of system of thought or philosophy could possibly be developed?" queried he.

In the older days the most wonderful prophesies were uttered by the tongue of man, but in reality emanated from

THE MIND OF THE ALMIGHTY.

Centuries before their fall the fate of Nineveh, Rome, Babylon, Chaldea, Egypt, Jerusalem and Israel were predicted. The chronicling of these prophecies which afterwards came to pass was a proof that the Book was of supernatural origin. In any and every line of thought it still anticipates all the works in ethics and material philosophy.

The inductive method of reasoning was now being followed by all the great thinkers of the world, yet a perusal of the Book of Job clearly outlined this special line of thought in connection with Jesus and His disciples, and the theory of the dissipation of energy was taught by Peter and John.

Passages of Scripture were quoted to prove that the fact of the moving of storms in circles was not by any means a new theory in connection with meterology, as the thought had been evolved centuries ago, as

CHRONICLED IN THE BIBLE.

"Modern science," continued the speaker, "declares that the world rests upon nothing, that it is held in position by two antagonistic forces, yet this is no new discovery, for is it not written, "He stretcheth the north over emptiness and hangeth the world upon nothing."

The Bible, the doctor thought, could be fittingly termed, "the source of literature." All who had made their names illustrious through the medium of literature, had obtained their grandest thoughts and best conceptions from perusing this book.

When Martin Luther dug down in the dust of ages and resuscitated the Bible, he liberated certain potent influences which created the intellectual giants of the world—when this bald-headed monk appeared on the scene with his unchained Bible in his hand, he unhinged the centuries and shook the foundations of the world. "The Bible to-day," concluded Dr. Henderson, "is the great regenerative power and the regulative principle of all the known nations upon earth."

At the close of the address, a warm vote thanks was tendered Dr. Henderson in appreciation of his remarks, which were of a nature to give subject for much deep thought and Bible study.

OUR WINTER MEET.

The Opening Day—Harry B Wins the 3-Minute Trot—The Colt Race.

The 31st annual winter meet of the Peterborough Trotting Association opened on Little Lake yesterday afternoon, where an excellent half mile track had been laid out and, as a prominent horseman said, the footing could not be better. Several thousands spectators were present, a large number of whom were from Toronto, Brighton, Colborne, Belleville and Port Perry. The races were called promptly at at the time stated on the posters, and this is an especially commendable feature of the meet.

The first race called was the three-minute trot. There were seven starters in this as follows: LeBrun's Harry B, Brown's Elsie Carr, Coughlin's Lapidist Chief, Hewitt's (of Brighton) Lulu B, Lake's (of Brighton) Black Bess, Currie's (of Belleville) Last Chance, Gilmour's of Cavan, Canadian Golddust. The race was an exceedingly good one, the trotting qualities of Harry B surprising the crowd. He only broke once during the entire race. The result was as follows:

Lebrun's Harry B	2	1	1	1
Brown's Elsie Carr	1	7	3	4
Hewitt's Lulu B	6	2	2	2

Time—2.48, 2.45, 2.48, 1.45.

The Colt Race was also very interesting. The race was open to foals of 1891, and there were four entries—R. Croft, of Cobourg, Livery Boy, Nattrass, of Millbrook, Ellie Stanton, Hogg, of Keene, Strideway, S. E. Ferguson, of Cavan, Lucky Star. There was considerable fun in the third heat of this race when Strideway, taking advantage of the two fore horses breaking, came in first. The result of the race was as follows:—

1 Croft's Livery Boy	1	1	2	1
2 Hogg's Strideway	3	3	1	3
3 Natress' Ellie Stanton	2	2	3	2

Time—3.14, 3.10, 3.10, 3.15.

NOTES.

Two fakirs did a rushing business all the afternoon.

The judges were Mr. Wm. Croft, Dr. Beatty.

Joe Daly, of Toronto, was the official time-keeper.

A very large number of ladies were present and witnessed the races.

Mr. Harry LeBrun is very enthusiastic over Harry B's victory. He has had several magnificent offers for the horse.

The races are being continued this afternoon. The Free-For-All promises to be a dandy.

The protest which was entered against Croft's Livery Boy and Hogg's Strideway in the Colt Race has been settled by the parties.

PETERBOROUGH CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

The Directors Hold Their First Meeting—The Entire Exhibition Will Hereafter be Conducted in the Grounds of the Society.

At a recent meeting of the new Board of Directors of the Peterborough Central Exhibition, in the Morgan house, with the President, Mr. Geo. Elliott in the chair, there were present Messrs. Braden, Vance, Rutherford, Hall, Davidson, Garbutt, Kennedy, Hunter and Morgan. It was decided to appoint Mr. C. McGill as treasurer, and Mr. W. J. Green, as secretary for the ensuing year.

Regarding the action of the general meeting in appointing a number of honourary members of the society, Mr. Vance expressed his hearty endorsation of the idea. Mr. Braden was also in favour of the scheme and promised his cordial co-operation with the newly-appointed honourary members.

Mr. J. H. Garbutt, who has just been appointed to serve his first term on the Directorate, expressed the hope that he would never be found wanting when he was in a position to do something in the interests of the society.

The Printing Committee for the year is composed of Messrs. Davidson, Braden and the Secretary.

NEW YEAR
NEW GOODS
NEW LEAF
1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will set off cheap

EYES TO SEE AND SEE NOT.

That is the case with many people. They need spectacles, and the strange part of it is that some folks never know how bad their eyes are until they have them tested. Have been going through life without seeing as much as they ought to see—perhaps suffering from headaches and tired eyes.

If you will call at Sanderson's Jewelry Store, George street, your eyes will be examined free of charge. If you need Glasses they will be supplied at a reasonable price. Do not neglect this matter and so be like those who have EARS TO HEAR AND HEAR NOT.

THE CARE OF PIGEONS.

HOW TO MAKE THE BIRD-COTE ATTRACTIVE.

How to Keep the Birds at Home—An Article That Unlucky Boy Fanciers May Profit By—About Some of the Birds to Keep.

Very likely more than one boy will say, when he reads the heading of this article, that any fellow knows how to take care of pigeons, and that it is needless to tell him anything regarding them. But there are many boys who have had difficulty in keeping their pigeons at home, or found it almost impossible to raise any young ones. It is for the benefit of these unlucky ones that this is written.

Certainly it is a very easy matter to keep pigeons or doves, for they are pets that require comparatively little care. But this care consists in something more than putting them in a box that is nailed to the side of a building and then allowing them to get along as best they can. The pigeon-cote should be placed either on a pole at a height easily reached by a ladder, so that it may be kept clean, or inside a building with the entrance facing south, in order that the inmates may, in a measure, be sheltered from winter storms.

In this cote should be separate apartments for each pair of birds, and at the entrance should be a broad ledge for them to alight on when coming home or to sun themselves on when they do not care to go on a visit. These little houses should be cleaned once every two weeks, and plenty of gravel and old mortar should be spread on the floor. A little salt should be sprinked around once in a while, and every precaution taken to guard against the invasion of rats or mice. Wheat, oats, barley or finely cracked corn should be fed them every morning, with plenty of water and green food, such as lettuce and cabbage leaves, celery tops or pieces of apple. If the birds are confined for any length of time. Care should be taken to have the food fresh and clean, and not to let it decay in the cotes.

If there is any trouble in keeping the birds at home, or if any persist in flying back to their old quarters do not clip the wings or pull the tail feathers out. Both practices are barbarous. Instead, sprinkle the floor of the cote with lavender or any other strong-smelling substance. A sweet, clean house, with good food, will make home-bodies of your pigeons more quickly than anything else, and once they begin to build a nest there will be no further difficulty in persuading them to remain. Doves or pigeons that are cared for properly will produce from ten to twelve pairs of young each year, and at this rapid rate of increase it may readily be seen that the young fancier need not buy a large stock to begin with.

There are so many varieties of these feathered pets that it would be a difficult task to name them all.

Among the high-priced pigeons is the Crowned Gouri, which comes from the Indian Archipelago. It is a beautiful purple brown, with gray breast, and has white bars across the wings, while on its head is a light blue or delicate gray crown. The Nicobar also has a crest. The upper portions of this bird are green, shading to bronze and steel, while the head is slate-colored, with purple shades. Long pointed feathers grow from the neck, showing almost every color in different lights. The Topknot comes from Australia and is a large silver-gray bird, striped with black, having a crest on its forehead and another on the back of its head. The Passenger pigeon is too well known in this country to need any description, since it is to be seen by scores in any bird store.

The Carrier pigeon should be dark blue to possess the color supposed to be the requisite of a good bird, but it is often seen of a dun or cinnamon color. This is the bird that was used to carry messages before the invention of the telegraph. The pigeons are trained to return directly to their home. This may be readily accomplished by beginning with short flights and gradually increasing their length. For long distances the bird's feet must, before starting, be bathed in vinegar to keep them cool; otherwise the pigeon will stop on the way to bathe. The message carried by the bird is written on very thin paper and made fast either under the wing or to the leg. According to one writer Carrier pigeons have been known to travel nearly one-hundred and fifty miles in an hour.

The Pouter is a large bird. It stands particularly erect and seems exceedingly vain of the swollen crop from which its name is derived. The bird is able to inflate this crop with air until the head is almost hidden behind it. This inflation sometimes causes the bird to lose its balance and fall over backward. Of the Pouter there are the ring-headed, swallow-tailed, rose-pinioned and bishoped, nearly all of which varieties boys are familiar with. The Tumbler pigeon is a very little bird and may be of any color. It has a funny habit of falling backward in the air while flying, and turning all sorts of somersaults. There are many varieties of these pigeons, such as the German feather-footed, the baldpate. Shorthead and almond, while according to their colors they are known as rocks, blues, checkers, silvers, duns, kites, reds, yellows, buffs, grahs, mealies, gray-mottled, blue-black, strawberries and so on through every shade and combination of color. The Runt is a common bird and the easiest of all his tribe to keep. The chief varieties are the Roman, Leghorn, Spanish, Friesland and frill-back. The first is the largest and the last the most singular of the species, since the feathers seem to grow from the tail towards the head.

The Nun is a nice little bird, with a tuft of feathers at the back of the head, and it is from the shape and color of this that the varieties are known as the red, black, or yellow-headed Nuns. The Archangel is dark blue and copper color and is a good bird for the pigeon cote. There is also the fan-tail, or broad-tail shaker, with his tail spread out like an angry turkey-gobbler's. The trumpeter is usually a yellowish-white bird, with a crest on its head and what looks very like a mustache.

But though there are so many varieties of beautifully colored and beautifully formed birds, the ordinary dove-house pigeon is by far the most satisfactory to raise, and repays its owner far better both in young and in domestic habits than do those which are not only rare but difficult to rear.

How Did the Dollar Mark Originate?

Below I give five theories of the origin of the dollar mark ($), they being selected from about 20 seemingly plausible solutions:

That it is a combination of the "U. S.," the initials of United States.

That it is a modification of the figure 8, the dollar being formerly called a "piece of eight."

That it is derived from a representation of the Pillars of Hercules, consisting of two needlelike towers or pillars connected with a scroll. The old Spanish coins marked with the pillar device were frequently referred to as "pillar dollars."

That it is a combination of "H. S.," the ancient Roman mark of money unit.

That it is a combination of P. and S. from peso duro, signifying "hard dollar." In Spanish accounts peso is contracted by writing the S. over the P., and placing it over the sum.

According to one writer the symbol of the dollar is a monogram of the letters "U" "S" and "J," the dollar being originally a "thaler" coined in the valley of Sant Joachim, Bohemia, and known as "Joachim thaler," and the monogram the initials of the words, "Valley Sant Joachim."—St. Louis Republic.

Art Instruction.

An artist had sold a picture for an exorbitant price and the purchaser sued to recover. The attorney for the purchaser was making the artist uncomfortable by his questions.

"Now, sir," he said in that pleasant, ingratiating manner of lawyers with a witness, "do you think anybody could see beauty in that picture?"

"Some persons certainly could," replied the artist.

"You think the initiated in technical matters might have no difficulty in understanding your work?"

"I am sure they would not."

"Do you think you could make me see any beauty in that picture?" this most superciliously.

"Probably not now, sir"—and the artist was most humble—"but once I could have done so easily."

"Now, sir, how is that? I don't understand you. Explain, if you please."

"That's quite easy, sir. I could have done it simply by employing you as my counsel in this case."—Detroit Free Press.

Courtesy Among the Swedes.

The Swedes are a quiet, taciturn people. There is no jostling even among the lowest classes. When a train leaves a platform or a steamboat a pier, the lookers on lift their hats to the departing passengers and bow to them, a compliment which is returned by the passengers. You are expected to lift your hat to the shabbiest person you meet in the street, and to enter a shop, office or bank with the hat on is considered a bad breach of good manners. In retiring from a restaurant you are expected to bow to the occupants. Bowing and hat lifting is so common that the people seem to move around more slowly than elsewhere, in order to observe the courtesy.—F. H. Stauffer in Kate Field's Washington.

To those who use South American Nervine

A Lady of 80 Years Permanently Cured by this Wonderful Medicine.

Three Doctors said "Old Age was Her Complaint" and Gave Her Up—Three Bottles of Nervine Gave Relief—Twelve Bottles Cured Absolutely.

MRS. JOHN DINWOODY, Flesherton, Ont.

Wordsworth speaks of "An old age serene and bright, and lovely as a Lapland night." And elsewhere this same writer talks of "An old age, beautiful and free." These are conditions that come to the man or woman, though their years may border close on to a century, when in the enjoyment of good health. In fact it is difficult to think of some of the old men and women on the stage of life to-day as old people, there seems to be such a perennial youthfulness about their every movement and act.

Does someone tell us that cases like this must be the exception and not the rule with those who have approached to or gone beyond the allotted three score years and ten? Not so, if they have become acquainted with the virtues contained in South American Nervine. Before us in this sketch is the picture of Mrs. John Dinwoody, of Flesherton, Ont., a resident of that town for forty years. No person in the town and country side around is perhaps better known than this lady, and none more highly esteemed. Three years ago it was her sad lot to loose a daughter who had been all the world to her. The shock sustained by this event completely broke up the system of Mrs. Dinwoody. She supposed her end had come. She loctored for one year with three doctors, and they gave her case up, saying that it was one of old age and no one, nor any medicine could do her good. Made of the kind of stuff that gives beauty to age at any time she did not despair. She was influenced to try Nervine. She took three bottles, and this was sufficient to show her that her end was not yet. From these she obtained relief. She persevered, and in all took twelve bottles of the medicine, with the result that she is to-day completely cured of that breaking-up of the system that threatened her three years ago.

There is nothing wonderful in the fact that Mrs. Dinwoody would proclaim to the thousands of old people throughout this broad land, that with old age does not necessarily come decline, decrepitude and disease. Why should we not live into the eighties and nineties, and cross the border of the century?

South American Nervine, whether the person be young or old, gets at the nerve centers, and when they are kept in proper condition the system is as well able to withstand disease at eighty as at thirty. With this prospect in view who would not live to an old age and enjoy the pleasures of family, friends and society, and take a part in watching the marvelous progress and developments of these closing days of a wonderful century, which marks as not the least of its wonderful discoveries, the discovery of South American Nervine.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees.
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

Why Grow Old.

I find that if old people are put on a good meat diet in the way of strong soup, beef tea and animal food, and only just sufficient farinaceous food and fats and sugar to maintain the heat of the body, they increase wonderfully in energy and, as they often express it, feel 20 years younger. This is only natural; it is a food of energy—the food that builds up muscle, nerve and constitutional stamina.

The requirements of the system in old age as a rule are not great, and more harm is done by taking too much food than by taking too little. I have known people considerably over 70 to derive the greatest benefit from a thorough change in diet. It seems to rejuvenate them. Of course in old age care should be taken that the body is not subjected to rapid changes of temperature. When the nervous power is decreasing as the result of age and the system is losing its power of combating cold and strain upon its energy, a stimulating diet invigorates and is conducive to maintaining constitutional stamina better than any other.

Any natural death but from old age and general decay is an accidental death—that is, it is due to causes which might, and even perhaps could, have been entirely avoided and remedied in earlier years.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Most Young Men Are Afraid of Babies.

"The average young man," said a traveler, "has no great fondness for young children. I don't know how many times I have heard a mother who was carrying a little child, and who had halted in the aisle of a railroad car say, referring to the vacant seat and addressing the young man by the window, 'Is this seat taken?' And I don't know how many times I have seen the young man's face lengthen as he answered politely, 'No.' The mother takes the seat and the young man begins to grow restless. He reads the paper still, but he keeps his eye on the baby, and you may be sure the baby has its eye on him—a beaming, good natured eye it is, too—and the young man finds it not the easiest thing in the world to appear wholly unconstrained with attention thus drawn to him, but he makes a bluff at it and does pretty well until the infant moistens one chubby fist in its mouth and reaches out to make a print of it on the lapel of the young man's coat. Then the young man rises. 'Madam,' he says, 'let me give you this seat,' and he steps out into the aisle. And he doesn't look for another seat in that car. He makes a bee line for the smoker."—New York Sun.

The Food We Eat.

Hardly a day passes that we do not receive some shock, that we are not asked to give up some favorite dish around which clusters a host of tender early memories, and after eating of which we have for 20 years on end felt ourselves grow fat and childlike and undyspeptic. But the modern hygiene says it must go, and if we retain it on our list we do it in an anxious and guilty mood sure of itself to beget internal trouble.

Seemingly simple things like dry toast, oatmeal and apples we have heard forbidden of late as hard to take care of, and bananas, or, for example, the delicious, but as we supposed deadly, fried bacon cried up as food for babes and sucklings. This is puzzling—it goes against personal experience, it upsets all our dietary plans and pleasures, and it awakens the shrewd suspicion that mere fashion is at the bottom of the change.—Hartford Courant.

Cold Air In Place of Ice.

I predict that 10 years from now the familiar ice wagon will be a novelty upon the streets of a city, so general will have been the adoption of artificial refrigeration. For a long time brewers, pork packers and storage men have been independent of the ice crop, and the introduction of the cold air pipe lines down town has supplanted the use of ice in hotels, restaurants and barrooms except wherein it is desired to make a display of the crystal commodity. In time the distribution of cold air will be as general in cities as is gas or water, and the system will be perfected whereby the refrigerating gas necessary for attachment to a family refrigerator will be delivered in a tank just like carbonated water is to the soda fountains, once a month or as required.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Appreciative.

A housekeeper who has been employing a colored washerwoman for several months was surprised to see her appear last week in a hat trimmed heavily with crape.

"Why, Julia," she asked, "is any of your family dead?"

"No, no," was the reply, "but one of my best customers gave me this hat, and I didn't want her to think I don't 'preciate nothin."—New York Times.

Caution Needed.

A tourist had visited a small historic town. He was shown the massive wall that surrounded it and the immense town gates.

"You need to be very careful," he said gravely to the official who was his escort.

"Why so?"

"Sometime when these gates are open the village may get lost."—Youth's Companion.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you it it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's oldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

DISCIPLINE AND CHARACTER.

A Tribute to the Austere Training Which Produced a Man Like Tryon.

To our minds the charm of Admiral Tryon's bearing in the hour of his fate is the perfection of the system which for centuries has bred men capable of his conduct and his death. They have not had his opportunity of being visible, not his strangely scenic surroundings, not perhaps the temperament which could have inspired them to that farewell in the moment of disappearance, but there have been hundreds of men in the navy, and even in the merchant service, who would have died as bravely as he did.

It is the tradition of both services—not, we think, the order—that the highest in rank on a ship in peril must be the last to quit the vessel; that, as occurred a few years ago, even a stowaway, who is almost a criminal in sailors' eyes, must take precedence of the captain in securing safety. The origin of the rule is, we fancy, policy—that the state or the owner be protected by the captain's authority to the last—but it has become an etiquette and a principle, and in the records of hundreds of wrecks you will find few in which it was ever broken. "The captain was the last to leave the ship" is the end of almost every telegram of marine disaster.

In other words, discipline has continued for centuries under the pressure of the same necessities, and the same ideas, has extinguished in a class by no means devoid either of faults or vices, a most natural and tempting form of selfishness has induced a whole series of men, many of them hardly educated, to face a slow and painful form of death rather than fail in the performance of a professional duty. That is a wonderful result of training, and it is one which makes those who see it clearly doubt whether the modern world is altogether in the right path.

The old ideal for the formation of character was discipline, hardship, pressure, alike from the law and from teachers and from opinion, and it certainly produced many of the virtues, especially that one of obedience, which the world everywhere but on shipboard—where there are few unrealities and men carry their lives in their hands—has taken to despising. The modern idea is that discipline even for children is an oppressive thing; that it turns men into machines, and it quenches individuality—that it is, in short, unpleasant, whereas pleasantness is the end of life.

We see the result of the change in the disappearance of many forms of oppression, and a lighter atmosphere for men to move in, and we see it also in the slow disappearance of many noble elements in character. The old system, working with good material, produces as its perfect result Admiral Tryon. The new, working also on the right material, produces the British agitator.

Admiral Tryon was no doubt a brave man and gentleman without help from the service or its traditions, but the service had annealed his character into what it was, something for a nation to be proud of, which would hardly have been exhibited or have existed amid the indiscipline and softness of civil life. When one hears of such a man so meeting such an end, it is difficult not to doubt whether liberty as now interpreted is such a perfectly good thing; whether instant obedience to command is not better training; whether pressure from all sides, from service rules, opinion and hardship together, does not weld men into something worthier of the aspirations which, while men have consciences, they never quite get rid of.—London Spectator.

Caste In a Bootblack.

The idea of caste and class extends even to the bootblacking fraternity. This is illustrated by a recent occurrence in Broad street.

An Irish shoe polisher has a stand in front of Delmonico's old restaurant. Not long since he entered a broker's office to render professional services. In his absence a dandy young negro seated himself in the chair and awaited his return.

When the bootblack again appeared on the scene, he was horrified. As he approached his stand the negro said, "Shine 'em up, please, and be quick about it."

"Not if I know myself," replied the bootblack, with an oath. "Get out of that chair," he continued. "It's bad enough for me to be shining boots all me life, but I've got this to say—I never shined shoes but for one of my own color."—New York Herald.

Marrying For Pity.

A fair maiden who had weathered the blasts of some 35 summers was informed by a booby that unless she married him he would blow the top of his head off. It's a pity she didn't let him do it. Heads of that kind ought to be blown off every time. That is what they are for. But Desdemona pitied Othello, and this fair maiden pitied her lover and went to the parson's with him. That was only a month ago, and now if he wants to kill himself she will present him with the best silver mounted pistol in the market.

Marriage is a solemn contract, and it is better to think twice before signing it.—New York Telegram.

Will Negotiate Peace Terms—Boycott Off for the Present.

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—There were about 800 at the mass meeting of students in Broadway hall yesterday afternoon, at which the whole difficulty between the students and the authorities was gone over. The net result of the proceedings was to suspend the boycott on the lectures, which will be resumed to-morrow morning. At the start a letter was read from President Loudon, expressing his willingness to meet a committee of the students and discuss the situation.

A committee was appointed to wait on the President and members of the Council of the University to discuss disciplinary matters and also to urge the Council to reinstate Student Tucker, the expelled editor of 'Varsity, and to use its influence to secure the reinstatement by the Government of Mr. Dale, the associate professor of Latin, who was recently dismissed. A resolution was passed urging the senate to use its influence in the same direction. A legal opinion from Messrs. Howland, Arnold & Bristol was read in which the the constitution of the university was referred to at some length and the opinion expressed that the students were not bound to formulate specific charges when they deemed university matters to be improperly managed. On the strength of this opinion the students passed another resolution calling on the Government to appoint a commission to investigate the general charges they have made without waiting the formulation of specific charges. The boycott was then declared off pending the reply of the Government. The students claim they are not making any back down, but the general opinion is expressed that the trouble is virtually over.

A. O. U. W. IN SESSION.

A Proposal to Issue $1,000 Certificates—Order Progressing.

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—The Ontario Grand Lodge of the A. O. U. W. commenced its session to-day in the hall of the Confederation Life building.

Grand Master Workman MacWatt, who still shows signs of his recent illness, is presiding, and about 400 delegates are present, each lodge in the province being represented by one delegate.

Besides the question of forming a supreme jurisdiction for Canada another question of great interest may come up. That is the proposal that the Supreme Lodge grant the privilege of issuing $1,000 certificates. At present a man entering the order can take no less or no more than a $2,000 policy.

There is a general desire for the option of $1,000 policies. Once before the Ontario Grand Lodge made this recommendation, but it was rejected. Now the recommendation may go up again.

The order has had a good year. In Ontario alone 1,700 new members came in.

DAIRYMEN IN SESSION.

Two Large and Well Attended Meetings Held—The Addresses.

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 21.—The Ontario Dairymen's Association held a meeting at the city hall here yesterday afternoon and evening. President Andrew Pattullo, of Woodstock, occupied the chair. There was a large number of representative farmers present.

Addresses were made by Mr. Pattullo, Prof. Harcourt, Prof. Dean, of the Guelph Agricultural College, C. C. Shearer, a practical and successful dairyman, of Bright, Ont., and J. H. Moward, of Illinois. The subjects were the silo and winter dairying.

In the evening Prof. Dean talked on the dollar and the cow and Mr. Wheaton and other speakers also made addresses. A number of local cheese makers who were present also gave some practical advice.

Reasons for Success

The success of Norway Pine Syrup as a cure for coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles is due to the fact that it is the best and pleasantest remedy ever discovered, and because its action is prompt and certain.

RAILWAY RATES.

American Roads After the Grand Trunk—Alleged Excessive Commissions.

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—The meeting of the immigrant clearing house, which was to be held on Monday to consider the attitude of the Grand Trunk in paying excessive commissions, was postponed until to-day on account of the absence of Chairman Caldwell. Inquiry among the roads interested shows the situation to be very bad. The Soo line claims that the situation is even worse on eastbound business than in the west. It asserts that the roads running east from Chicago are paying commissions of $4.25 on tickets to New York, contrary to their agreement of January 1 last, and to meet this the Soo line has been paying a commission of $5 on immigrant tickets from St. Paul to New York. The agreed commission for the lines between St. Paul and Chicago on New York immigrant business is 75 cents a ticket. The Soo line is adding this 75 cents to the alleged $4.25 commission made by roads out of Chicago.

It is thought that the eastern lines cannot much longer keep from making reduced rates to meet those from the south. There is a meeting of coal lines in Pittsburg this week and it is believed that some action will be taken, otherwise the southern rate war may be soon expected to extend to the east. Of late eastern soft coal has not been able to compete with that from the Illinois and Indiana beds. Such coal is now selling at $2 per ton and may go still lower. Rate clerks to-day began getting out the sheets showing the tariff St. Paul to Pacific coast points. The Omaha road has given notice that it will put in a first-class limited rate of $50 and a second-class limited rate of $40 for St. Paul to California points, via Sioux City.

UNCLE SAM'S NAVY.

The Naval Appropriations Bill Passes the House—Battleships and Torpedo Boats

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—So far as the House is concerned the navy will be further increased by the construction of three battleships and nine torpedo boats. At the close of four days deliberation on the bill making appropriation for the navy and naval establishment for the year ending June 30, 1896, the House passed the measure practically as it was reported by the committee, after having refused by a vote of 199 to 66 to recommit the bill, with instructions to strike out the provision for the battleship. An amendment offered by Mr. Sayres, (Dem., Texas), was agreed to, providing that the secretary of the navy should not contract to pay a higher price for armor plate or gun-steel than is paid for the same articles by private parties or foreign Governments.

It was also provided that the two of the nine torpedo boats should be constructed on the Mississippi river.

INTERNATIONAL POSTAGE STAMPS

An Interesting Proposal to the Postal Union from Germany.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Negotiations have been opened by the German government with the other members of the International Postal Union relative to the issue of an international postage stamp. According to a consular report received by the State Department from Ghent, it appears that almost all the countries concerned except the United States have agreed to the project. An official conference of the powers interested will soon be called to discuss the details of the scheme. Among the advantages expected from such a postage stamp are the facility with which small bills and accounts in foreign countries could be settled and postage for reply could always be enclosed when information from abroad was sought.

Lincoln's Monument.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 21.—In the House yesterday a bill was read a first time and placed on the calendar to provide for the transfer of the Lincoln monument from the Association to the State, the purchase of nine acres of ground surrounding the burial place and the appropriation of $30,000 to carry out the transfer and $50,000 to repair the structure. The sale of relics is to be prohibited and the state commission is to appoint a union veteran as custodian. The abolition of admission fees is also provided for.

Blizzard in Michigan.

MUSKEGON, Mich., Feb. 21.—The most severe blizzard of the winter struck here yesterday, accompanied by snow, and the wind is blowing at 50 miles an hour. The Chicago and West Michigan road is tied up.

Miners Resuming Work.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 21.—A special from Selinville, Ohio, says that every coal mine in that vicinity is in full operation for the first time in ten years. These mines furnish employment for about 600 men. Indications point to an early resumption of work at the plant at the Selinville Furnace Company, which has been idle six months.

Died at His Work.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—H. G. Osgood, Chief Clerk to Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General Maxwell, was stricken with apoplexy and died while at work at the Department yesterday. Osgood came here from Lockport, N. Y., and was a grandson of a former Postmaster-General.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Feb. 21, 1895.

No wheat came in on the street to-day. It was nominally quoted at the same as yesterday, 63 1-2 to 64 1-2c. for white, 61 to 62c. for red and 60 to 61c. for goose. On the Northern white is worth 58c. and west red is quoted at 57 to 57 1-2c. Some 1,500 bushels of barley on the street brought 47 to 50c., while 800 of oats sold at 35 to 35c.

The great success of the Belmont-Morgan syndicate both in New York and London created quite a little bullish feeling in stocks on Wall street, but unfortunately for the commission houses it did not bring with it any material increase in business. The dullness, in face of the enormous subscriptions and the virtual defeat of the free silver coinage bill in the Senate was disappointing, but the best opinion is that when the importance of the efforts of the syndicate to keep the gold reserve intact is better understood it will be reflected in a broader and higher market for securities generally.

A Greek Patriot's Death.

SALEM, Mass., Feb. 21.—Frank Constantine Victoriato died at his home in this city yesterday aged 98 years. He was born in the Ionian Islands and as a young man took part in the Greek rebellion which resulted in the independence of that country, fighting under the leadership of Marco Bozzaris, and was in the famous battle of August 20, 1823, when by a night attack the Greek army of 1,200 destroyed the Turkish force of over 4,000. He always maintained that the accepted histories of that event were incorrect and that Bozzaris fell at the hands of his own men. Later Frank enlisted in a privateer and was captured by the Turks and sentenced to life in the galleys but by pretending to be a British subject he enlisted the interest of the Consul and made his escape. He came to this country in 1841.

Butts Wanted to Die.

BUFFALO, Feb. 21.—John W. Butts attempted suicide in the village of East Aurora last evening by shooting. The first bullet went wide and before he could fire again he was disarmed. Butts had become notorious by reason of the purchase of Mrs. George Kirseler-Olheiser from Olheiser for the consideration of $50 and a fresh milch cow, the latter being a bonus over the sum Olheiser had paid to Kirseler, the woman's first husband. Olheiser and the woman later got hold of Butts, and the trio had a conference with a lawyer, the result of which is not known. It is denied that a marriage ceremony was performed on each of the transfers of the woman, and it is said that such ceremony was only performed when she married Kirseler, the other two transfers being by mutual consent of the parties.

THE TWO EXTREMES!

HATS and BOOTS

Early Styles for Spring Trade.

25 cases of New Goods for the coming spring have already been opened out, consisting of 10 cases of the latest styles of English and American Spring Hats, and 15 cases of Solid Comfort Boots, Shoes and Slippers, from the best makers in the world.

At the HEAD to Stay!

Words are weak in attempting to describe our range in everything that goes to make up the smartest HAT STOCK to be found. We aim to get every first-class idea for the "up" extreme, and we are sure to please, as we we are always—"AT THE HEAD TO STAY."

WIVES, SISTERS, MOTHERS, do you like that Hat your Husband, Brother or Son wears? Send him to a Hat Store where they fit Hats to THE STYLE OF THE MAN. What looks well on some folks may not look well on him. We have a happy knack for head dressing. Don't spoil your credit by a seedy top-piece—look like prosperity. We have the pick of the styles from such famous English makers as Stanley & Co, Jackson & Co and Wilkinson & Co; and we have the celebrated American EAGLE brand of Fur Hats, union made. The prices won't scare you, either. If you buy your Hats at GOUGH'S you'll soon find out that you save just 20 per cent.

At the FOOT to Lead!

People who wear our Shoes say they enjoy as much solid comfort as the old-timers who wore sandals. But ours are handsome as well as comfortable. We sell easy fitting, durable Shoes, with all the style put on to them that such artistic makers as Slater & Son, of Montreal, can invent. We have all intermediate makes, as well as the cheaper grades from Lower Canada, where they don't pay much for making—sometimes nothing at all.

LADIES are reminded that all the best Boots marked at other stores to sell at $3.00 and $4.00 we mark at $2.00 and $3.00. Cheaper lines run from 75c to $1.50.

GENTLEMEN are reminded that all the best Boots marked at other stores to sell at $3.50 and $5.00 we mark at $2.50 and $3.90. Cheaper lines run from 90c. to $1.75.

It's the same way with Misses, Boys and Children's Boots and Shoes—the goods and prices will do the talking better than anything we can say.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Mr. Marter and His Followers Will Wait for the Public Accounts.

PATRONS SEE THE MINISTRY

A Committee Has an Interview With the Government—Remarkable Feature of the Public Accounts—How the Members Are Arranged in the House.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Nearly all the members of the new legislature have arrived in the city, and the twenty-eighth session of the eighth Parliament of Ontario is ready for business. The Public Accounts report will be laid on the table next week. The remarkable feature about it is the amount realized from succession duties. It was estimated that these would realize $50,000, but they have reached $150,000.

Yesterday a committee of the Patrons, consisting of Leader Haycock and Messrs. McPherson, McNichol, Caven and Gamey, waited on the Government. The Patrons, however, did not divulge the nature of the business discussed. The party will hold a caucus shortly and appoint a whip.

Among the Conservatives it is generally understood that there will be no strong opposition to the address, but that the fight will commence in earnest when the public accounts come up for discussion.

Mr. Balfour, the new Speaker of the House, received many congratulations from both sides on his appointment.

The seats have been apportioned to the members, and the different parties will sit in groups. The side of the chamber on the Speaker's right is occupied entirely by followers of Sir Oliver Mowat. Five Reformers have to find seats on the opposite side of the House between the Conservative and Patron parties, the former of whom sit in the group of seats nearest to the speaker, and the latter to the right of entrance.

LEADER OF THE PATRONS.

There are two seats in the House vacant at present, namely: West Welland and Haldimand. In the new Legislature are forty-six new members, of which the Patrons form a considerable number. Of the Conservatives there are eleven, and of the Liberals thirty-one, who sat in the last House.

The decorations of the chamber have added considerably to its appearance.

Speech from the Throne.

The following is the Speech from the Throne read by His Honor the Lieut-Governor at the opening of the House yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:—

In opening this, the first session of the eighth Parliament of the Province, I am glad to welcome you as the representatives of the people assembled for the despatch of business.

While the past year was unfavorable to the agricultural interests in some respects, the prices of many products, especially grain and stock, remaining unusually low, it is very gratifying to know that increased interest has been taken in improved methods of farming and in the reports and publications of the Department of Agriculture. Various agricultural associations and organizations have been making increased demands for instructors. The special dairy work in connection with the Agricultural College at Guelph has been prosecuted with very satisfactory results, and I am pleased to learn that last year proved to be the most successful year in the history of the College.

From time to time public attention has been directed to our northern districts as suitable for settlement by an agricultural population. At the present time considerable interest is being manifested in this direction, and it is proposed to establish, with your approval, at a moderate expense a pioneer dairy farm to attract further attention to these new districts, and also to prove their adaptability to agriculture.

During the past year the Rainy Lake region has come into notice as a gold field. Many explorers have been attracted to it, a number of promising locations have been taken up and partially developed, and it is expected that several mills for treating ore will be in operation this year. The prospect of gold mining in this district will no doubt promote settlement of the rich agricultural lands in the Rainy River valley.

A bill will be laid before you containing some supplementary provisions which the experience of the last general election has indicated to be desirable in the election laws. The Registration of Voters' Act of last session with respect to cities, having worked satisfactorily, you will be asked to consider the propriety of extending its operations to towns.

Your attention will be invited to a measure designed to lessen the number of appeals in the courts of the Province and otherwise to simplify the proceedings of the High and Superior Courts; a measure to provide, in matters of Provincial jurisdiction, that where jurors are not unanimous, ten jurors may give a verdict, and some other measures of law reform.

You will further be asked to consider bills for extending the benefit of the Factory Act and the Children's Protection Act; for revising and consolidating the Acts relating to agriculture, and the Acts relating to Mechanics' Institutes and Free Libraries.

The Supreme Court of Canada having held that the Province has no power to pass a prohibitory liquor law, my Government is taking the necessary proceedings for an appeal to Her Majesty's Privy Council upon this question, and the appeal is expected to be heard and disposed of before the end of the present year.

In accordance with the promise made to the House last session, I appointed a commission to collect and report the facts bearing on the views which have been expressed with respect to the mode of remunerating and appointing certain provincial officials now paid by fees and with respect to the extent of the remuneration they should receive, including in regard to the said matters respectively the practice and experience of other countries. The commissioners have pursued their task with diligence and have made full inquiry into the matters referred to them. The report is about completed and will soon be placed in your hands for your consideration, with a view to such legislation as may appear to be proper.

The question of the maintenance of Government House at the expense of the Province will no doubt receive your earnest attention; and I trust that the policy which may be adopted will be such as may prove to be generally satisfactory.

Since the last session the main building of the Brockville Asylum has been completed, and patients were admitted before the end of the year, relieving thereby the crowded condition of some of the other institutions.

I am pleased to be able to inform you that considerable progress has been made during the past year by the arbitrators to whom were submitted all questions relating to the unsettled accounts between the Dominion and the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, and between the two provinces, and that all the parties interested have shown their sincere desire to have the differences between them settled speedily and amicably.

The Public Accounts for the year just closed will be placed in your hands at a very early day. You will be glad to know that the total expenditures of the Province were kept well within the appropriations, and that the actual receipts were considerably in excess of the estimate.

The estimates for the current year will, without delay, be submitted for your approval. They will be found to have been prepared with a due regard to economy and the necessities of the public service.

The session will, I trust, be noted for the wisdom and prudence of your deliberations, and for measures calculated to promote the best interests of the province.

On the assembling of the House this after noon the address will be moved by Mr. Craig and seconded by Mr. McNeish.

LITTLE DOUBT OF IT NOW.

Evidences That Dissolution May Soon be Announced.

OTTAWA, Feb. 22.—Each day brings additional evidence that dissolution is fast approaching and just as soon as a date can be fixed by the Government it will be announced.

The difficulty and the only one now is as to the voters' lists. Very soon that obstacle will disappear. Judging from the way in which the work of printing is being distributed and pushed forward, almost every nook and corner of the printing bureau which can possibly be used for the purpose is utilized in setting up the lists. Not only is this the case, but preparations are being made outside to get some of the lists printed. To relieve the stress on the bureau and to facilitate the printing of them the lists of Montreal and Toronto will be printed in these cities. Yesterday officials of the printing bureau left for these cities to supervise the printing of the lists.

"Some Months Yet," Says Mr. Ives.

COLLINGWOOD, Feb. 22.—Hons. N. C. Wallace and W. B. Ives addressed two meetings in the opera house here yesterday. Mr. Ives surprised the audience by announcing that a general election would not take place for some months to come and when it does come off the people will not need their overcoats. The addresses at both meetings were almost wholly devoted to the National Policy.

Jules D'Estimauville Clement writes from Montreal: "I was suffering from skin disease, and after all drugs failed tried Burdock Blood Bitters, of which three bottles restored me to good health. I recommend it also for dyspepsia."

CARNEGIE MAKES A HIT

His Armor Plate Under Test Proves Almost Invulnerable.

IT RESISTS IMMENSE FORCE

Under a New Process a 17-inch Plate is Reduced to 14 Inches and Proves Equal in Resistance to the Former—Important Discovery to the U. S. Navy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Andrew Carnegie's armor furnished a surprise to ordnance experts at Indian Head yesterday and it is possible that a distinct advance in warships' protection has been made by the Pittsburg concern, whose managers conceived the idea that the resistance of a Harveyized plate might be increased by reheating and mashing it under rollers subsequent to the completion of the American surface carbonization process, and after thus toughening its texture and minimising its internal strains, spraying its face with ice water to secure the advantages of chilled hardening. A 17-inch plate, similar to those made for the barbettes of the battleships, was treated in this manner and reduced to a thickness of 14 inches. It had the usual wooden backing and was attacked with a 10-inch gun under all the conditions attending the trial of a 14-inch plate. The shot had a striking velocity of 1,859 feet per second. Its point went in about 7 inches and it "upset" completely, the great projectile scattering in small bits. Not the slightest crack was developed in any part of the armor.

Although struck point blank by a shell having the highest penetrating velocity required under service conditions practically no damage was done and in the opinion of the Chief of Ordnance, Commodore Sampson, the plate, although but 14 inches thick, could not be considered in the 14-inch class. So he gave the orders to treat it as 15-inch armor and the gunners put enough additional explosive behind another 500 pound projectile in his big rifle to give a striking velocity of 1,940 feet per second, which is the maximum power that can be exerted by the American 10-inch gun and considerably more than could be expected of any foreign weapon of the same size. Altogether there was 241 pounds of brown hexagonal powder behind this shot, which struck close to its predecessor in the same vertical line. It crumbled to pieces, leaving a disfiguring hole and a lot of fused metal when it hit, but the plate showed no crack and even where it had been presumably weakened by the first attack.

The surprised naval officers then resorted to heroic measures. The huge 12-inch gun was wheeled into line and trained upon the plate and enough powder was crammed in behind its projectile to give it a velocity of 1,858 feet per second. It bored a clean hole through the plate, but its tremendous blow failed to develop even a radial fracture. No further tests were deemed necessary, as this was the ordeal to which 17-inch armor is subjected. The 14-inch plate was evidently unequal in resisting powder to the barbettes of the Oregon, Indiana and Massachusetts. It resisted cracking better than they have done, however, and it is now an open question whether a practical discovery has not been made by which hundreds of tons weight may be saved without sacrificing efficiency on the battleships provided in the naval appropriation. Apparently two inches in armor thickness may be saved by the improved treatment and the weight of that two inches saved from the exposed surface of modern fighting vessels means tons upon tons of added guns, machinery and coal.

American Trade Report.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say: "General trade during this, a short week, has been more irregular. The success of the latest emergency bond issue has revived confidence somewhat in the general financial situation. Prices have not reacted materially, concessions in quotations for cattle, lard and oats being the only losses of note. Milder, brighter weather has stimulated sales by retailers and jobbers somewhat. The success of the bond issue here and abroad has given a strong undertone to the New York speculative stock market, in spite of the fact that the public here and abroad continue to stand aloof from any participation. The approaching adjournment of Congress and the evident fact that the bond syndicate is in a position to control the exchange market and prevent gold shipments for some months has a considerable effect on sentiment."

Railways Blocked in Michigan.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 22.—Up to noon yesterday no trains had arrived or departed on the north division of the Chicago and West Michigan road. The Pentwater division is entirely tied up and the raising of the blockade is uncertain. The Detroit and Lansing and Northern road reports its eastern lines clear, but a train from Lansing was stalled eight miles out of the city. The Muskegon branch of the Grand Rapids and Indiana is still blockaded and reports from along the Northern line say that the blizzard still continues. Telegraph lines generally have been carried down.

Brutally Murdered His Wife.

DECATUR, Ind., Feb. 22.—Samuel Young, a well-known farmer of this county, followed his young wife to the home of a neighbor of whom he was insanely jealous. During the fierce quarrel which arose, the infuriated husband grabbed his wife about the waist and plunged a butcher knife several times into her back. The wounded woman lived but a few minutes. The murderer then went to his own house and committed suicide by hanging.

THE FORTNIGHTLY CLUB.

In compliance with a request decided upon at the last meeting of the Fortnightly Club, the EXAMINER has readily granted space for a Fortnightly Club Column in the Saturday issue of this journal. It is the design of the Club to furnish the matter for this column, under the supervision of a capable gentleman; in this case, one whose ripe scholarship and habit of exhaustive thought, well fit him for the duties of editor of, and chief contributor to, the Fortnightly Club Column. This space will be devoted to the discussion of literary, philosophical and ethical — socio-political—subjects, which closely touch the interests of the citizens of the town. Obviously, the editor of the column in question, who, it is understood, will have sole direction of it, is alone responsible for the opinions expressed therein. The EXAMINER is pleased to be able to hope for great practical benefit to its more thoughtful readers by giving space to the "Fortnightly Club Column."

THE CRUCIFIX—POEMS AND SONGS.

Lovers of poetry make a mistake, if, by reason of the number of great poets, they throw aside as unworthy of perusal the modest verses of those who sing in a minor key or, indeed, those verses which every now and then come from the pen of writers hardly entitled to even an humble place in the choir of true poets. Taking Tennyson as representing the great poet, and our own Prof. Roberts or Wm. W. Campbell as representing the vast choir of minor poets, we have around these in descending tiers a multitude of pretty choristers, from some of whom there comes occasionally a strain which touches the popular heart. I will not attempt to find Mr. Carlon's place among these choristers; but I am glad, in response to a request, to offer my "little meed of praise" to his dainty book of verse which he has entitled

"THE CRUCIFIX—POEMS AND SONGS."

It is doubtless some consolation to a minor poet to know that the greatest poetry is not appreciated by the greatest number, and that it often falls to him to attune our hearts to what is lovely, tender and noble in life.

"Read from some humbler poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart,
As showers from the clouds of summer,
Or tears from the eyelids start," said Longfellow; and how often we turn from the master-mind with that cry! Yes, though we are ravished by the glorious strains of the lark and nightingale, our hearts are ever open to all the trills, and chirpings and cheeps of the least songster in the wood, and we bend a loving ear even to the "bee-like murmurings," when all other songs are still.

So let no one put aside this little volume of twenty-nine pages simply because "of making poetry there is no end." To all sympathetic people the real merit it possesses will be enhanced by the fact that the author is resident among us.

I am afraid I have "a sow's ear," and cannot appreciate at its true value the melody of the graceful little songs which make up the bulk of the volume; but, even I, find much in them. The fact that many have been set to music by that well-known composer, De Koven, speaks for itself.

Poetry is so much a matter of taste, and depends so much on present temperament and mood, that one estimate of the relative merits of poems has little value. At first reading I prefer "Idealia," "The Sleeping City," "An Adieu," and "The Little Flower Girl," though I doubt if my preference would be constant. "The Minuet" has, I think, the most literary merit; it is perfect in its way. But that is not a very modest lover in "Under the Roses."—

THE APPRECIATION OF IT

"Sweetly my love lies sleeping, Dreaming of heaven and me!"

"Desolation" is a dainty bit; but even a lover's passion hardly justifies the word italicised in the lines:

"I would have given my soul to be
The rose she kissed so tenderly."

The sentiment throughout these songs is delicate, and tender, and, I might add, true, while Mr. Carlon's fine musical ear has made them models of rhythm. An air of melancholy—sometimes real, sometimes sentimental—pervades nearly all; and, if I read aright, a vague regret. There is some evidence here of the storm and stress of life, its mingled sorrow and joy—or is the author only conscious that

"The songs that are the sweetest tell of saddest thought."

"Who criticises the words of a song!" I once heard a gentlemen ask. He was entirely wrong. A song is worthless unless it rings true; unless it expresses, nobly, noble emotion. Did not somebody say "let me make a nation's songs, and I care not who makes their laws"! Many of the popular songs to-day, sentimental and humorous, are altogether contemptible. Mr. Carlon has evidently considerable talent as a song writer, and his influence cannot be other than good.

THE MOST AMBITIOUS PRODUCTION is the "The Crucifix," which I have seen in a lady's scrap book, it having been first printed some years ago. The poet pictures a vision which might well have come in similar form to many a cloistered saint as he kept long vigil before the Crucifix. There is much dramatic power in the poem; but the greatest might find the subject too difficult. Though it is full of good lines and its spirit is reverent, I find fault with the treatment both from a dramatic and spiritual standpoint. The picture of the coming of life to the Divine Figure on the cross is too minute and realistic, and the dismay of the sorrowing man, to whom the vision appears, is not in spiritual harmony with the scene. There should have been no impulse to "rise and flee." Wonder, awe, amazement, shame, we expect, but not terror as at sight of a ghost.

Taking them all in all, these verses "read wonderfully well"—so said the ladies, with an accent which it baffles me to describe when I read aloud some lines at the tea-table. You see, people are surprised to find a poet in their midst; they can hardly realise it.

There is one feature of the book which puzzles me. In many poems we have between the stanzas a line of

Do these mean that something is really left out? or do they stand for the thoughts unutterable? does Mr. Carlon here mean to frankly confess, without wasting words what Tennyson sang sweetly

"O! that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me"!

Or what does he mean? Let us [illegible] it a mystery, for I should like to close this comment after the same fashion, and for what I further might, could, should, or can't say, set—

CALLED HOME.

Mrs. R. M. Wood Departs this Life—A Good Woman Gone to her Great Reward.

St. Ignace News.

DIED: Monday morning, Feb. 11th, 1895, Mrs. Eleanor Wood, wife of Mr. R. M. Wood, a prominent citizen and business man of this city. The deceased was born in Peterborough, Ontario, in 1843. Her maiden name was Eleanor Savage. She was united in marriage to Mr. Wood in 18[illegible]. In 1870 the young couple removed to Bay City, and in 1882 to St. Ignace. She was the mother of twelve children, ten of whom are living and to-day mourn her loss as that of their dearest and kindest earthly friend. Of the surviving children, Mrs. Fred Heake, Mrs. M. H. O'Brien, Mrs. Colonel Scott, of St. Ignace, and John T. Wood, of Grand Rapids, are well known throughout the city.

The deceased has a sister in Peterborough, Mrs. P. Meagher, who could not be present at the funeral owing to the stormy weather prevailing. Another sister, Mrs. P. Bird, of Bay City, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Wackerly, came up to attend the last sad rites. Mrs. Wood also left four brothers, whose homes are in Bay City. All of her surviving children were at home at the time of her departure. Her death was caused by paralysis or from a brain trouble superinduced by that malady. She was ill a long time, and frequently her sufferings were severe, but she bore them with all the fortitude of a devout Christian woman. She was a member of the Catholic church at St. Ignace, and her life was that of a gentle, loving, Christian wife and mother.

The affliction falls with crushing weight on the husband and father, and to him and her children the sympathy of the entire community goes out. Her funeral was held on Wednesday morning, the priest from Mackinaw Island officiating, Rev. Fr. Keul not being able to attend on account of his illness. It was perhaps the largest funeral cortege ever seen in St. Ignace, showing the high esteem in which the family is held by all our people.

THE FROZEN BIRD.

Poor birdling!
Have we found thee thus, all chill and stark?
Didst thou forget in by-gone summer hours
When nesting with thy eager mate, to choose
A safely harbour'd perch, secluded
From such rigorous time as this?
Why didst thou not ensconce thyself, thrice welcome
In a corner of our southern eaves? where snows
Nor blasts could overwhelm, and where the wintry sun
Could cheer the long bleak days.

This happy heart can never swell again
With gladsome life! These dainty wings no more
Shall bear thee upward to the skies!
These curtain'd eyes may open nevermore
Upon the changing beauties of the year;
Nor may we hear this tuneful throat
Warble to us its springtime song of joy,
To thank us for winter dole of crumbs.

Yet it were better—if the tale be true
That death thus takes the breath with pleasant dreams
That thou should'st peaceful die unmarr'd;
Than that some ruthless one should maim thy wings,
Or tear thee limb from limb, or torture out
Thy simple life.

Here, 'neath this guarl'd old apple tree we make
The snow thy winding sheet, till freshly green
The clover sod springs up to hide thee, hapless thing,
Here, quiet lie, thy artless days are o'er.

THE WINNIPEG BRANCH.

It Will not be Opened Until Spring, but Meantime the Trade Will be Supplied.

TORONTO, February 22nd.—Enquiry from the proprietors of Dodd's Kidney Pills, of this city, with reference to the proposed establishment of a branch warehouse in Manitoba corroborated the despatch wired from Winnipeg in so far as the location of the new warehouse is concerned. The demand for Dodd's Kidney Pills in the Northwest provinces has shown so phenomenal development during the past six months that such an establishment has been found an absolute necessity. Early in March a representative will be sent to Winnipeg to choose a suitable warehouse, and it is probable that by April the new branch will be in full operation. Meantime daily consignments of Dodd's Kidney Pills are being forwarded to the Northwest in an effort to meet the demands.

INDIAN COTTON DUTIES

Sir Henry James' Motion Swamped in the Imperial House.

THIS CRISIS WAS NOT SERIOUS

The Government's Policy in Regard to India and Her Tariffs Called Into Question and Supported on Division by a Very Large Majority.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—In the House of Commons yesterday Sir Henry James moved the adjournment of the House to direct attention to the Indian cotton duties.

Sir Henry James said that since 1882, when the Indian import duties were abolished, her markets had remained open. Under the free markets India's trade had gone on increasing, driving Lancashire out and into the markets of Japan and China. The new duty which had been levied upon cotton would further embarrass Lancashire. The Government, he said, had been influenced by the agitation of Anglo-Indian officials not so much in favor of India as against Lancashire. It was an agitation against a trade which had lost more through the fall in the price of the rupees than any other interest in the country. These officials had misled the Secretary of State for India, who, no doubt, had the best intentions, but had not consulted the practical merchants and manufacturers. The result was that the home trade had been ignored. The duties imposed in India had dislocated the Lancashire trade. The counteracting duty which had been imposed in India had proved to be really no protection to British producers, while it had created intense dissatisfaction in India.

Mr. Henry H. Fowler, Secretary of State for India, said that before Sir Henry James charged him with having sacrificed the interests of England to India he ought to have obtained better proof of the correctness of anything he had mentioned in his speech. The censure of India in regard to the excise duty was equally severe with the censure of Lancashire. Both had been accused of sacrificing their interests—India's to Lancashire and the latter's to India. Both could not be accurate. He had done what he thought was justice to both. A serious financial difficulty existed in India and a large deficit must be faced. Therefore, when the import duty was proposed in fairness to both countries, it was met with an offsetting excise duty.

Mr. Goschen, Chancellor of the Exchequer in the last Salisbury Cabinet, advised the House to think twice what effect the decision about to be made would have in India. He felt, he said, that there had not been sufficient co-operation between India and the home government. The debate ought to be followed by an earnest and persistent effort to bring Lancashire and Indian opinions closer. If the difference were only one of tariffs, a compromise certainly could be obtained.

Sir William Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said the Government would not hesitate for a moment to support the decision required by the best interests of India, regardless of the effect upon the Liberal party. He could only regret that the House had been forced in this matter to consider a motion rendering necessary what must assume the character of a party vote. The Government were ready to meet the issue fairly and squarely without delay. If defeated, they would feel that there was no cause for which they could fall more worthily. It would be a pity, however, if the vote should leave on the minds of the people of India the lasting impression that they could not hope for justice from England.

A division was taken and Sir Henry James' motion was defeated by a vote of 204 to 109.

Another Strike Imminent.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 21.—In a number of sanitary potteries yesterday notice was posted of another reduction in wages varying from 25 to 50 per cent. The pressers, whom the cut affects, will hold a meeting to-night to discuss the matter and a strike is not improbable. The manufacturers declare the cut is necessary owing to the depression of business.

The Ladies Disorderly.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Stormy scenes were frequent at yesterday's session of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who are holding a convention here in connection with the triennial of the Womens' National Council. One scene of disorder occurred over the adoption of some reports and in the confusion a penetrating voice sent up the inquiry: "I would like to inquire if this is a congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution or of the Tower of Babel?" Another woman shouted: "It is not either of them; it's just a mob." This brought laughter and restored order.

CHILD-SAVING IN BRIGHTON.

Cases Where Children, Reared in Vice and Ignorance, Become Criminals.

BRIGHTON, Feb. 23.—The quiet little village of Brighton, in the county of Northumberland and ninety miles east of Toronto, has been giving a lot of attention lately to the subject of neglected children. This has not been so much on account of any superfine wave of benevolence and philanthropy striking the district, but rather owing to the fact that these neglected children have been so much in evidence lately as to make it impossible to further ignore their existence. Several families have lived around here for a number of years who have been a standing disgrace to the community. The parents being low, vicious people, utterly improvident and spending what little money they could obtain in drink have entirely neglected to give their children the least inkling of moral training or ordinary school education, and the corporation and charitable people have at the same time been largely maintaining them in this course under the head of "charity." In one of these families eight children were brought up much the same as a litter of pigs, with the exception that the pigs were always sure to be fed while the children were not. These youngsters, although now growing up to manhood and womanhood, have never been to school and know nothing of reading or writing. In another family a widow with a large family has within recent years had two additions to her household and no acknowledged father for them. None of the children go to school; their training is neglected, while the example constantly before them is calculated to prevent any growth in grace, or habits of decency in them.

But the worst case of all, and the one that awakened the slumbering conscience of the community, was a family of nine persons, all of whom, but one and a half, are now a public charge. This family has been a trouble to the entire county for years. They were always "on the rates" and they were shipped by the economical local authorities from place to place until they could hardly tell where their "home" was. Brighton paid $32 in one month trying to load the crowd off on some other municipality, but, like the cat, they always came back, and Brighton had to maintain them. This happy family consisted of father, mother, four girls and three boys. Luckily a kind-hearted woman stepped in and adopted one of the little girls some time ago, thus saving her from a wasted and vicious life. At the beginning of the winter the father was committed to the county jail as a vagrant. Then, shortly after, a boy of ten was sent to the Industrial School at Mimico. Next the neighbors got so disgusted they burned down the house in which the family lived; next, the mother was brought up as a vagrant and sent to jail for six months. Finally, the eldest girl, being slightly over the age of childhood (14), could not be dealt with in the usual way. She was homeless and friendless. She had only been in a school three months in her entire life; left to her own resources, she became the prey of vicious men.

These matters were going so far that a public agitation was entered upon by Samuel Nesbitt, a prominent business man and deputy reeve, and Rev. C. W. Watch, Methodist minister, and also Dominion Superintendent of social purity work in the order of Good Templars. At the urgent request of Dr. Wade, reeve of the village, Mr. J. J. Kelso, provincial guardian of neglected children, visited the village and gave an address on child-saving work. It was made quite evident by the attendance that the question was a live one. Nearly five hundred persons were present, including the poorest as well as the more prominent citizens. Mr. Kelso warmly advocated the rights of the children and showed clearly that the ranks of the criminals and the paupers were made up entirely of those who in early life had been denied a fair chance. It was impossible, he said, for a child reared in vicious surroundings to become a good citizen and the laws were now being made adequate to protect children by removing them from the control of improper guardians or parents. Many thousands of dollars would be saved to the country if child-saving work were taken up earnestly and zealously. A strong public sentiment against child neglect would also have a great preventative influence, as many parents would do better if they knew they were being watched and were liable to lose their children.

At the conclusion of the meeting about fifty of the leading citizens remained and resolved to organize a Children's Aid Society at once. Mr. Sam Nesbitt was elected president; Mr. W. Davidson, vice-President; Mr. W. R. Harris, Sec.-Treasurer; and a committee made up of the following: Mrs. Richard Hewitt, Mrs. Westmacott, Mrs. Walters, Edwin Bibby, Peter Covell and Rev. C. W. Watch.

While in Brighton Mr. Kelso enquired into the case of the fifteen year old girl, brought her before the county judge at Cobourg and had her committed to the refuge for girls. She was quite willing to go, however, as she had no desire to lead an evil life, but wished to be trained for usefulness. The two younger children—all that is now left of this family with the exception of a shiftless youth of nineteen—will be cared for by the Children's Aid Society.

Three Rivers Liberals.

THREE RIVERS, Que., Feb. 21.—A mass meeting was held here last night in the interests of the Liberal party. Messrs. Laurier, Joly, Tarte, Hon. J. R. Ward, Devlin, Bruneau, Sorel, Legris, Mackinnon, Leduc, and Nicolet were met at the C. P. R. station at noon on the arrival of the train from Montreal and accompanied to their hotel by a procession of about 200 sleighs. At a caucus in the afternoon Dr. Fiset, of Shawenegan, was chosen the Liberal candidate for the county of Champlain. At 7.30 p.m. a procession, preceded by the band, marched to the city hall, where about 5,000 people assembled. The galleries were filled with ladies. About 100 of the leading Liberals of the district were seated on the platform. The chair was occupied by John Ryan, president of the Laurier Club. The first speaker was the Hon. H. G. Joly, who spoke briefly, followed by Mr. Bruneau, M.P., of Sorel, after whom Mr. Laurier spoke for an hour. Some further addresses were made by members of the district and the meeting adjourned at 11 o'clock.

Hasn't Decided Yet.

FINALS.

Hamilton Thistles 40 Lindsay 39

A great crowd of curling enthusiasts gathered at the Victoria Rink for the final match, and they saw a game as close as once could possibly be. Flavelle was pitted against Kerner, both skips of long experience and great skill. The Hamilton men soon had a lead, which they increased to 16 by the finish of the 22 ends. The Thistles needed every one of this majority too before the game closed. On the other rink the skips were of the younger generation and Lindsay had the best of it. Three ends remained to be played on this rink when the Kerner-Flavelle men had closed. Lindsay was seven down all round, and McLennan was set to get these seven in three ends to tie the score, or eight to win the Tankard. And a brave struggle, indeed, he made for them, getting almost within reach of victory. He put on six, and by the finish of the match brought out the Lindsay combination only one behind in the whole game.

The eager spectators crowded on the ice and almost on the stones, so great was the excitement while the last end was being played. When white-haired William Needler came to play his last stones the Thistles lay shot, with a Lindsay stone just in front. "Raise me that a foot," called the skip, "and you'll be the shot," as he laid his broom on the front stone. Down the ice came the stone from Needler's hand, fair on the stone he sought. Crack it struck the face of the other, drove it against the Thistle stone and sent the Hamilton Granite off the rings. The rink rang till the roof seemed to shake with the cheers for the veteran's clear eye and steady hand. Lindsay lay shot, but could not get another, and when Skip Hamilton came to play the last stone of the great match he just dropped it over the hog line, leavin. Lindsay one shot for the end, but one behind on the total. And so closed what was probably the most exciting match that the Tankard final ever brought out, reflecting the greatest credit alike on victors and vanquished.

HOCKEY.

Through the efforts of Mr. J. P. Hurley and the courtesy of Mr. D.O. Pease, G.T.R. It is expected that two or three hundred Peterboroughnians will take in the trip. The fare is only $2 30 with the privilege of remaing over in Toronto for six days.

All lovers of Laughter, Music and Song, remember the Social and just come along. To-night is the time, George Street Church is the spot, and only fifteen cents for the lot. Positively no gentlemen allowed on the platform.

MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT AT THE CONVENT.

A Delighted Company of Auditors Enjoy a Delightful Programme—Remarks of Approval.

The first musical entertainment given by the pupils of the Convent, Congregation de Notre Dame, since Sister St. Mary took charge of the musical department was given last night and the highly creditable manner in which the pupils acquitted themselves, indicates that the good Sister St. Aubert has a worthy successor. Whilst not being able to give space to a detailed reference to the several members it may be remarked that the following numbers deserve special mention : The vocal solos of Mrs. Cochrane, Miss Annie Simons and Miss Lily Jackson, and the piano solo by Miss M. Pollock and the piano solos, (in unison) by Misses D. Dolan, B. Pollock, N. Lewis and A. Doris and that of Mrs K. G. Lech, Misses M. Pollock, F. Nimmo and S. Staunton. The hall was decorated as usual, and a large company was in attendance including His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, Ven. Father Casey and Rev. At the conclusion of the programme, several brief commendatory speeches were made.

His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, (addressed the pupils, referring to the pleasure it gave him of again being present and note the marked progress made by the pupils in their music. They all, he continued, regretted the absence of Sister St. Aubert, the former music teacher, and stated that her successor in this department was well qualified, and the good name the Convent had acquired would still be kept up. The vocal music, His Lordship said, was the best he had heard in the Convent, and he congratulated Miss Lily Jackson, especially, upon the manner in which she rendered her solo. He urged the pupils to practice diligently at their music.

Mr. Jas. Stevenson, M.P., also expressed his delight at being present, and congratulated the pupils on their proficiency.

Mr. J. Hampden Burnham, in a well-worded address, stated he was under great obligations to the teachers for the pleasure of being present at such a musical treat. He referred to the effect music had in the home, and closed by congratulating the different performers.

Mr. L. M. Hayes also thanked the sisters for the opportunity of attending the review and urged the pupils to be studious and diligent in their studies.

Dr. Brennan also added a few remarks, referring to the absence of the former music teacher, whose place, he said, had been well filled by the present head of the musical department of the Convent. He expressed himself as delighted with the evening's entertainment.

Ven. Archdeacon Casey was also pleased to be present on the occasion, and hoped the pupils who had acquitted themselves admirably would still make greater progress.

The proceedings closed with the National Anthem.

THE RACE MEET.

To the Editor of the Examiner :

DEAR SIR,—Much adverse criticism is rife on the streets to-day, regarding the action of the judges in placing "Lulu B" back to third place in the 2:40 trot yesterday and giving second place to "Last Chance." Not only visiting horsemen, but many of the citizens, are incensed over the matter, and it is rumored that Mr. Joe Daly, one of the judges, left the stand on account of the decision. In the past, Peterborough has been avoided by horsemen in general, as it was not considered that "a fair field and no favour" was one of the adjuncts of a Peterborough race track. It will be lamentable, indeed, if the report goes abroad that this state of affairs is once more in existence.

Yours truly,
FAIR PLAY.

The following letter is from a well-known merchant tailor of St. George, N. B.:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen—I am glad to say that Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills have done me a great deal of good. I had a severe attack of the grip in the winter, and after getting over the fever I did not seem to gather strength, and had no ambition. Hood's Sarsaparilla proved to be just what I needed. The results were very satisfactory, and I recommend this medicine to all who are afflicted with rheumatism or other

THE ICE-RACES.

Harry B. Again Covers Himself With Glory—The Meet a Success.

After a most successful two day meet the races were finished yesterday. As the weather was bad the attendance at the track was not as large as the day before, but the excitement of the spectators ran high at times. The track was very heavy and fast time could not be made as the snow drifted on as fast as it was cleared away, consequently it was hard to keep the horse from "going up into the air."

"Harry B" owned by Mr. H. LeBrun proved conclusively during the meet that he possessed plenty of speed and stamina and without doubt Mr. LeBrun possesses in him a most valuable race horse. Several bids it is understood have been made for him.

The results yesterday were as follows :

Odd Insurance.

There is in existence a legitimate "graveyard" company. It is a company operating entirely among the very poor and insures a man against pauper burial. The agents of the company put it in less disagreeable terms and offer simply to guarantee decent burial.

The company engages to furnish a grave in a cemetery and see that the insured is respectfully interred therein. If any member of his family dies before him, he is given a deed to a lot in which he may bury his dead.

Some of the large companies issue a policy covering losses from defective title, defalcations by partner, agent or other employee for which a firm may be liable, damage by storm, losses caused by accident to or by steam boilers, engines, lifts, steam pipes, automatic sprinklers or other specified machinery, including all kinds of machinery in use.—Boston Globe.

A Mean Trick.

Patrick was one of those witty sons of the Celtic Isle whose amusing sayings had entertained many transatlantic travelers.

One day, when the steamer was about leaving port, Patrick received the order to haul in a long cable that dragged astern. Patrick jumped to the task cheerfully enough, and hauled away contentedly. But the excessive length of the cable taxed his patience.

"I wonder what's become of the end of this ould cable, anyhow?" And finally, growing impatient, he growled out: "Faith, it's no use hauling away at the baste uv a cable. Some divil's cut the end off uv it."

DALTON McCARTHY AND HIS COLLEAGUES

ARE GREETED WITH A GRAND GATHERING.

Addresses by Mr. McCarthy, Col. O'Brien and Messrs. Godfrey and Hunter—The Government and its Protective Policy Severely Scored—Mr. McCarthy Deals at Length With the Manitoba School Case—Mr. McCarthy "Calls" the Mayor's "Bluff."

Fully a thousand people assembled in the Opera House, last night, to hear Mr. Dalton McCarthy, Q.C., and his colleagues debate upon the question of the preservation of the "little school" and incidentally to ascertain what were the views of his party concerning the revision of the tariff. The hall was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting. Across the rear end of the hall hung a huge placard bearing the legend "God Save the Queen." There were no other mottoes displayed, but what was perhaps as significant, a large green flag with the union jack in one corner and the

in the other was draped across the rear of the platform.

Special interest was lent to the meeting as it was the first opportunity Mr. McCarthy and his colleagues had taken to meet the electorate since the decision of the Privy Council concerning the Manitoba School question.

The chair was occupied by Mr. William Graham, of Smith, who after a few brief remarks, during which he took occasion to thank the ladies for their attendance, as well as a number of the clergy who occupied seats on the platform, introduced the first speaker—Mr. Godfrey, of Toronto. Mr. Godfrey devoted his time to a scathing denunciation of the Protective policy of the present government and by reference proved conclusively that the policy was beneficial solely to the classes and not the masses—that Canadians as a whole were heavily taxed to provide support for certain favoured industries which were so strengthened thereby as to be enabled to actually supply the Canadian demand and also enter into competition with the world in foreign markets. These spoonfed industries, he thought, were able to stand alone and should be now cast adrift to shift for themselves.

Col. O'Brien was the next speaker. His criticism of the effect of the National Policy was interesting in the extreme. Under its baneful influence, the population of Canada had increased less in the last ten years than it had done in the previous decade. In speaking of protection, the Colonel explained that as only eight per cent. of the population was composed of manufacturers, it was therefore, that the entire population was taxed—92 out of every hundred,—taxed to support eight, the majority of them in affluence.

Mr. Hunter, or as he is better known, "Young Mr. Hunter," of Toronto, made a capital speech. He was not well received when he first appeared upon the platform as the audience was impatient to hear Mr. McCarthy, but he soon won his way into popular favour by his sarcastic witticisms and ironic references to the failure of both political parties to meet the issues at question squarely.

When Mr. McCarthy took the platform he was greeted with prolonged cheers. He devoted the major portion of his time to discussing the various phases of the Manitoba school question, and only touched lightly upon the tariff question and the trade issue.

The Speeches.

As Mr. McCarthy and party came upon the platform, they were received with hearty cheers.

Mr. Wm. Graham, of Smith, took the chair, and in a few opening remarks said he was proud of the welcome that had been given the great patriot, Dalton McCarthy and his compatriot, Col. O'Brien. (Cheers.) In the time past God had raised up the man for the occasion, and such a man was Dalton McCarthy, whose appearance in our Canadian affairs was most opportune. He was glad to welcome Mr. McCarthy and Mr. O'Brien, who were the only men in the country who had a backbone. (Cheers and laughter.)

The first speaker was Mr. Godfrey, of Toronto, who began by saying that in common with the other parties the modest third party claimed the right to address the electors. He said that the ministers had visited Peterborough, and told the people that that they were prosperous. He went on to say that the administration at Ottawa was honey-combed with corruption. Hon. Mr. Haggart had told them what the government proposed to do with the Trent Valley Canal (laughter), but he did not tell what had been done in reference to the Tay Canal, which was built largely in Mr. Haggart's interest, whose contract price was $132,000, and actual cost $470,000, which cost for maintenance $2,000 a year, and yielded a revenue of $137. Reference was also made to the gross peculation and mismanagement that had characterized the construction of the Curran Bridges, which has been carried on under the direct supervision of Mr. Haggart's department. The speaker went on to show how the high protective tariff had failed to keep its promises of improving the condition of the country, and make our protected industries self supporting. He also showed that there had been under a revenue tariff far greater than under the protection period. It was shown that of the seventeen millions worth of cotton consumed in Canada thirteen millions were produced in this country and four millions imported. On the imported article the duty paid went into the public chest for public purposes and on the thirteen millions a tax equal to the amount of duty, 28 per cent., went into the pockets of the manufacturers—a sum representing $3,600,000 and that the combine was able to declare a dividend of 20 per cent. Certainly an industry that could make money at that rate (though taken out of the pockets of the people) did not need protection and privilege any longer. The immense profits of the sugar combine were also dealt with and the audience called upon to oppose the present regime of governmental corruption at Ottawa.

THE FAIRY TALE

AN INCREASE OF POPULATION

Col. O'Brien was received with loud cheers. He also paid his respects to the ministers who visited Peterborough, who, he said mainly devoted themselves to telling the people that they were prosperous and ignored that prevailed in the country, and which was symbolized by the presence of immense audiences to hear Mr. McCarthy and his policy's enunciation. The third party was quite unconcerned whether Hon. Mr. Bowell or Hon. Mr. Laurier succeeded in the coming elections, but it wished to bring about the greatest good to the country. (Cheers). Col. O'Brien, said that he had been a supporter of the National Policy, in 1878, and that he had been led into that position by several considerations—that it would stop the exodus and increase the population of the country, and thus produce that best of markets for the farmer, the home market. Manufacturers were to be protected, and combines to be guarded against. Protection was all right, he said, to begin with, but instead of being a temporary expedient it had become a settled policy, and at length manufacturers combined, and the speaker asserted that there was not a single protected industry that was not the subject of a combine. The speaker justified his support of the initial stages of the National Policy in relation to his present attitude by declaring that protected manufacturers having, by forming combines,

VIOLATED THE CONDITIONS

under which they were given assistance, had no further right to protection. (Cheers.) It had been hoped that protection would keep and increase our population, and prevent the exodus which "we Tories" were fond of throwing into the teeth of Mr. Mackenzie and Sir Richard Cartwright. But the fact was that under the protective policy the population had increased less than under a revenue tariff. Where was the compensation to the farmer for the 35 per cent. of tax he paid upon nearly everything he used? The census showed that the home market was a myth. The protectionist claimed that their policy benefitted the farmer in the matter of pork and beef, but the benefit was more apparent than real. Naturally the farmer would ask what benefit he got for paying taxes to make manufacturers rich while he himself got no benefit. And the farmers as shown by the Patron movement and other indications of this lop-sided condition of affairs. Who benefitted by all this protection? Only 19 per cent. of the population according to the figures of the last census, were engaged in manufactures and, of these a large proportion, such as butchers, tailors, blacksmiths, shoemakers, etc., classed as manufacturers, were not benefitted by the National Policy. A close analysis showed that only 8 per cent. derived direct benefit from taxation—which meant that ninety-two out of every hundred paid taxes to benefit the remaining eight, which was not the original intention of protection. In regard to Dr. Montague's statement that the people had no higher taxes under protection, the speaker instanced the one matter of cottons as a sample. He quoted dyed silesia, which was 6 cents at the Canadian mills and 4½ cents at the English mills, the difference representing the amount of duty, a circumstance showing that the 1½ cents on every yard of this article went into the pocket of the manufacturer and not one cent into the government coffers for public purposes. Col. O'Brien also instanced other articles, including woollens, and said his figures were absolutely correct and could not be disputed, and he would stand by them.

WERE BECOMING TIRED

At this point Mayor Kendry made

AN UNSEEMLY INTERRUPTION.

He advanced from his place in the audience, mounted the platform and removing his coat, proceeded amidst great uproar to challenge Col. O'Brien's statement and offered the bluff of putting up $100 to be given to charity and leave it to three or four men to decide whether or not he or Col. O'Brien was correct. After considerable uproar the official guardian of the town ceased his interruptions and left the platform and Col. O'Brien to continue his address. Referring again to the sheet of figures he had quoted Col. O'Brien said they were correct and he "would stand by them."

Someone shouted, "put up your $100!"

Col. O'Brien—I will confess I am not prepared to put up $1.00. I am a farmer and there are few farmers with wheat at 50 cents a bushel that can get hold of that much money. It is only protected manufacturers like Mr. Mayor who take their profits out of the people's pockets, that can find $100 so easily. (Cheers and laughter.)

Proceeding with another subject Col. O'Brien asked, where is your home market?

A voice—It is here! (Cheers).

Col. O'Brien—Anyone can get a home market by bonusing manufacturers to stay in a town. (Loud cheers). Continuing his remarks Col. O'Brien asked why tariff reduction was attempted if it did not increase the price of goods and protect the manufacturer? If the Government was honest, there was a necessity of reducing the duty, and when they proposed a reduction who was it prevented it? Why the very class represented by the Mayor, who had interrupted the meeting. (Cheers.)

THEY BUTTON-HOLED THE GOVERNMENT, and the duty was put back by the dictation of just such men as interrupted the meeting to night. (Cheers.) The members for East and West Peterborough were not consulted, but the woollen, cotton and other manufacturers dictated privately the terms upon which the business of the country should be conducted, and their demands were met, not from mere dictation, but from substantial considerations that had had powerful influences in elections in the past. (Cheers.) The speaker, in conclusion, said that the mission of his party was to destroy the system of organized corruption and maladministration. (Loud cheers.)

"YOUNG MR. HUNTER" SPEAKS.

Mr. —. Hunter, of Toronto, in a most humorous way detailed the origin of the McCarthy party. In referring to the death of Sir John Thompson, as the loss of a distinguished Canadian, the speaker said it was a greater loss to the Conservative party. Mr. McCarthy had no personal quarrel with Sir John Thompson. His quarrel was with the conditions that produced danger of race domination. The speaker said that the premiership of Sir Mackenzie Bowell brought no increase of confidence to the McCarthy party, and in a most clever and amusing way he laughed at the conditions that led to the formation of the present cabinet "that sprawled over the council table of Canada." His remarks were full of telling hits, and as he sat down the clever young spouter was enthusiastically applauded.

MR. MCCARTHY'S ADDRESS.

On taking the platform Mr. McCarthy was warmly greeted. He stated that he did not propose to deal with the tariff question or trade issue at any length as his time was limited. He was glad to hear that Peterborough had enjoyed such prosperity as was not enjoyed by other towns in the Dominion. Peterborough was happy in the possession of a splendid water power, and in men who were not afraid to invest their money to develop the town. He supposed that, as the town was essentially a manufacturing one, it was in favour of protection, but it should be remembered that the interests of the one town alone were not at stake but the interests of the people at large had to be looked to and the larger interests must in the end prevail.

Mr. McCarthy was surprised at the Mayor's indignant protest of Colonel O'Brien, regarding the figures which had been quoted. These figures had been been read by himself in Parliament and in every part of the country, and the tables had been repeatedly published in the newspapers. Never before had they been questioned or challenged. Owing to the tyranny which prevailed in the customs departments, the wholesale men from whom he had obtained his figures dare not allow their names to be used in connection with them in verification. Therefore he was not free to divulge their origin, and yet it was claimed that this was a free country—a free country forsooth, where the laws were used and abused to such an extent that a citizen was afraid to sign his name to a document knowing full well it was in the power of the customs department to make him pay dear for his temerity.

Mr. McCarthy ventured to say that if Mayor Kendry was still desirous of giving one hundred dollars to charity, and if he would place his cheque in the hands of the chairman he would show him from which the figures was compiled, when he was sure the Mayor would apologize to Col. O'Brien for his ill-timed interruption. As the Mayor was so sure of carrying his point Mr. McCarthy thought that it would make no difference to Mr. Kendry even if there was no hundred dollars placed against it, as of course there was no risk involved.

At this juncture the Mayor jumped up and challenged Mr. McCarthy to take up the bet himself.

This was the opportunity for which Mr. McCarthy was waiting and he closed promptly with the offer, remarking that as it was high time to stop this bluffing, he was willing to stoop and meet the Mayor on his own ground. He believed it was the usual way the manufacturer settled questions concerning the tariff issue.

The Mayor thanked Mr. McCarthy for the $100, which he was sure would be left in Peterborough, but he exercised his wit at the expense of the wrong man and found he had hold of the hot end of the poker when Mr. McCarthy quietly remarked that it pained him to know that the Mayor's town was in such straits that $100 was looked upon

AS SUCH A GODSEND.

It was curious, the speaker continued, to hear this argument concerning protection re-opened. He thought it was settled by all thinkers long ago. If Canadian manufacturers were able, as Mayor Kendry stated, to sell as cheaply as the manufacturers of other countries, why, in the name of common sense, was a duty placed on a commodity? The object, he thought, of protection was to enable the home manufacturer to charge more for his goods and at the same time to keep out the products of foreign markets, and preserve the home market for Canadians. If this was not the object of protection, he hoped and saw no reason why the Mayor could not join with him in cutting down the tariff. Mayor Kendry was, he believed, a manufacturer of woollens. The duty on woollens was 35 per cent. It had been reduced by 2½ per cent. Why was this? Why had the duty on agricultural implements been reduced from 35 to 20 per cent.? What was the use of doing it? What was the object of

THE SO CALLED REDUCTION,

if the goods were as cheap in this protected country as where free trade was in vogue?

After dealing thus briefly but lucidly with the tariff question, the speaker arraigned the government for the most reprehensible dilatory methods pursued in announcing its intentions concerning dissolution. Canadians prided themselves upon being free people, but such was not the case or the members of the Dominion House would never dare to humbug their constituents in such a matter. All had the right to know the intentions of, the government concerning a matter so important. It had now become apparent that the government dare not face another session. Why? Because another argument in favour of the National Policy has fallen to the ground. Last year's deficit of $1,250,000 was appalling, but the indications show conclusively that this year's deficit will be the largest in the history of Canada. "It is then," queried he, "that they daren't come forward and announce this deficit and explain that to meet the expenses! Is this the reason why no session is called, or is there some other? Is it the Manitoba school question which has made such arrant cowards of them? Let us see how the latter stands. It is an important one and one upon which the people have to pronounce at the next election. Amongst the matters committed to the charge of the provincial legislatures is that of education and it was wise and prudent that such should be the case. Unfortunately owing to the union which existed between Upper and Lower Canada, which was dissolved by the British North American Act, Ontario had not the same privilege as the other provinces of deciding with regard to educational matters. In the other provinces absolute and unlimited power was given to deal with education.

MORE TAXES MUST BE IMPOSED

When Manitoba was made a province, it was provided that while it should have exclusive jurisdiction, there should be a limitation to their authority in regard to education. No right or privilege, which the people had enjoyed before, should be taken from them by act of the new legislature, which was brought into existence. In 1890 the Manitoba Legislature thought best to

DO AWAY WITH THE SEPARATE SCHOOLS.

It was charged that they had overstepped the limits, and the matter was taken to court. In the end the Privy Council of England announced its decision to the effect that Manitoba was within her rights in the action she had taken. This did not end the case. Before the Privy Council had the matter brought to its attention, the Dominion Government had promised the Quebec church that if the decision was adverse to them, that remedial legislation would be granted. This promise was made just before the holding of the last general election, and through it the Government received the solid vote of the Quebec Church, and was returned to power. On the decision of the Privy Council being announced, the petitioners for remedial legislation called upon the Government to redeem its pledge.

Mr. McCarthy then reviewed the entire question, explaining how Manitoba had been but refused to obey the mandate. Mr. Ewart appeared for the Church and began his pleading, Manitoba being unrepresented. By tokens and signs the Government at Ottawa became aware that it was going a step too far. Ontario, whose sons and daughters had peopled Manitoba, was waking up and taking an interest in the case. Awed by the strife which seemed imminent the Government astutely announced that doubt existed as to whether the Governor-General-in-Council had the authority to deal with the question and the matter was referred to the Supreme Court of Canada.

SUMMONED TO OTTAWA,

Needless to say, remarked Mr. McCarthy, the Government fervently hoped that they had not the power to deal with the question and that before a decision was reached another election would be over and a new term begun, but last month their hopes were blasted, when the court announced that the Government had the power to enact remedial legislation, if it saw fit—had the power to cause trouble which may even tend to break up Confederation. Next Tuesday has been set for the day of hearing the argument when it will be for the Dominion Government to say whether it will and her school question.

Some may think, continued the speaker, that the courts have decided the question, but such is not the case. All the courts have done is to state that the government has the power to grant remedial legislation. Whether it is wise to do so is beyond the jurisdiction of a court to announce.

The government says the question is not a political one, but to be decided according to the law and constitution and by that they propose to determine it. "But," queried Mr. McCarthy, 'who constituted the cabinet a court? Once you admit that the cabinet is a court, not a council, not placed there to determine what is best for the country but to decide the law, the system under which we live so happily will be utterly destroyed."

"No blame can be attached to a judge for his decision if he is not acting dishonestly or corruptly, but if the ministers attempt to do anything out of the way they are held answerable to the people of this country. This is what constitutes RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT."

Both the Opposition and the government, he claimed, refused to face the issue. Mr. Laurier declared that it was simply a question of fact, while Sir Mackenzie Bowell stated that it was a question of constitutional law. In spite of these declarations Mr. McCarthy held that the question to be answered in the interests of Canada was whether it was wise and expedient to reintroduce the dual system of schools. To say it is a question of law is to insult the common sense of the Canadian public. It is a matter which the people of the country must determine by their experience as must their representatives.

After nineteen years the Manitoba people thought it best to make a change. Now under an unfortunate interpretation of the constitution the question comes before Canada as a great issue in the coming contest. If the Governor-General-in-Council was ever advised by the government to order the restablishment of Separate Schools in Manitoba, it required no the speaker was sure, to say that Manitoba would bow to no such mandate. Once before Manitoba had been almost driven to the verge of rebellion when all the laws passed conflicting with the C. P. R. had been vetoed by the governor. The crisis in a similar state of affairs was fast approaching.

The government was cornered and must make its decision on Tuesday. The church of Quebec had placed the pistol to its head and declared, no excuses; no subterfuges; summon your court and record the verdict before our franchise is asked. The church would be fooled no longer. The question had to be settled now. And how is it to be settled? What do the speeches of the Minister of Justice foreshadow when he says he cannot speak of the question on political platforms, but that it is a judicial question? It means that the government is trying to persuade the people that they (the government) are not to be regarded as politicians responsible to the people, but as judges responsible to no one.

The petitioners

PRESENTED A SOLID FRONT,

while the rest of Canada was divided, and therefore weighed as nothing in the scale which the politician considers. The government could make no mistake in letting Manitoba alone. All free-minded people could see that it was expedient and in the best interests of Canada not to interfere. If an injustice were committed, those who had a grievance should appeal to the Manitoba people who are the most concerned. The introduction of the Quebec system of schools would do incalculable harm in the western province. Quebec at present had the poorest system of schools in Canada, whilst Manitoba stood second on the list. It would be a shame, he thought, to drag Manitoba's educational system down to the level of Quebec's.

In conclusion Mr. McCarthy cautioned his audience against allowing a man to go from this constituency who was unpledged on this question. He hoped none would be deceived by the statement that the matter was merely a question of law. It was not, it was a question to be decided for the best interests of Canada as a whole.

The meeting broke up with cheers for the Queen and Mr. McCarthy.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

The Entertainment at St. John's in Aid of the Rector's Poor Fund.

A large and very select audience gathered at the School House of St. John's last night to listen to the entertainment which had been got up by the Rev. J. C. Davidson in aid of his Poor Fund. The arrangement of the chairs and the decoration of the platform were very neat. The programme was an excellent one, due regard having been given to variation. The concert opened with a very fine selection from Butcher's orchestra. Miss Clara Clark rendered a vocal solo, "Jerusalem," in a very sweet voice. Mrs. Hibbard and Mrs. Smith gave a very fine instrumental duet, which met with loud applause. The recitation of Dollie Comstock was also very good. The vocal solo, "London Bridge," by Miss Barlee, of Lakefield, was very good, meeting with loud and long applause. Rev. Mr. Andrews, assistant-curate of St. John's church, sang two songs in fine voice. The solo of Mrs. Stapleton, as is usually the case, was much appreciated.

During the programme the rector took advantage of the occasion to introduce Rev. Mr. Andrews to the congregation and to welcome him to the parish. Mr. Andrews made a very fitting reply. He stated that he had met with the most hearty welcome on every side since he had arrived in town a week ago. Mr. Andrews is a young gentlemen and has laboured for the church in South Africa. He is a nephew of Bishop Sweatman, of Toronto.

The proceeds of the evening, which amounted to $16.00, will be devoted to the Rector's poor fund. The concert closed by singing "Sun of My Soul."

A PETERBOROUGHNIAN ROBBED OF HIS MONEY.

He is Now Apparently Safe Back Home Again.

(Uxbridge Times.)

On Friday evening an old Scotchman, giving the name of Thompson, struck town. He was apparently about eighty years of age, well dressed and quite respectable looking. He said his home was about ten miles northwest of Peterborough, and that he had been visiting friends in Guelph. On his return he reached Toronto safely, but while walking along York street in that city, his arms were suddenly pinioned by two young men, who took his pocket book, containing about $25, and then threw him heavily on the walk.

He notified the police, but the theives could not be found. He then, being destitute of means with which to reach his home, applied to two prominent Presbyterian ministers in the city, but they refused to give him aid. Not wishing to alarm his relatives by sending for money, he started to walk home. On Friday morning he reached Roseville, some four miles west of here. Mr. T. Forsyth, proprietor of the hotel there, treated him him kindly, giving him what ministers of the Gospel had refused—food and a small amount of money.

The old gentleman on reaching Uxbridge was cared for by some members of the order of the Sons of Scotland, and by them sent to Peterborough. He first appealed to one of our local divines, but was refused aid, the reverend gentleman thinking, no doubt, that the applicant was undeserving.

MEN WHO HAD LUCK.

STORIES CIRCULATED IN A GROUP OF TACOMA SPORTS.

Most of Them Were Told by Professional Gamblers and May or May Not Be True, but an Affidavit Is Required For the Yarn About the Gold Seeker.

"Well, that was luck."

The speaker was one of a group of half a dozen men who were standing on Pacific avenue puffing away at Havanas and talking just to pass time away and to clear their throats. The conversation had been about the livery stable man, Martin, of this city, who had fallen heir to $350,000 three years ago and didn't find it out until a few days ago.

"Talk about luck," said one of the group, who was a gambler, "we see plenty of it. Do you know that one day last week a man entered one of our gambling houses with a nickel and won out $400 in three hours? He had gone clean busted the night before and found the nickel in an out of the way corner in his room the next morning.

"That blokie went to the gambling house with the intention of placing his 5 cent piece on the number 5. He got into the room when the roulette ball was whizzing around on its tour of numbers. He rushed to the table and got down his nickel on the five just as the game runner shouted 'All down!' In a few seconds the ball started on its 'rear end' bouncing, and in a few seconds more the man shouted 'Five!' That gave the man with the nickel $1.75 for his 5 cents. Then he put $1 on No. 17, and that number came up, giving him $35 more. He continued to play with varying luck until in three hours he had won $400. And the next day he was broke again. He borrowed a nickel and tried the game again, but it didn't go."

"I can tell a story of a man who was lucky," said a business man. "In the early days of the gold excitement in California, there came into San Diego a man who was ragged and sick almost to death. He was taken in hand and fed and fixed up. Then he told a story of a wonderful find of gold he had made. It was only a few days off, he said, and he would take a party to the place if they would outfit.

"Several men who heard the story of the great gold in the mountains that was theirs to go after got up a party of 50. The start was made with that man as leader. After a few days' travel it became evident that the man had forgotten the way. They traveled on, trusting to luck, however. Indians were hostile at the time, and they started in to mow the gold hunters. They picked off one after another with their bullets. A score were thus taken off. Then a fever struck the party, and 11 more went the way of death.

"By this time the 19 survivors were crazy with rage. They had been 14 days out and were traveling in the most arid country. Food was growing less and less, and death faced everybody. On the afternoon of the fourteenth day the leader, who had caused so much misery, was given three days more to find his gold 'find.' If he was not successful by that time, he was to hang.

"Well, the three days had almost passed, and still there was no sign of the find. The last hour was almost up. It seemed that the man must hang. There were only five minutes more, now two minutes, now one minute, now a half minute—then came his luck. Just as the time was up for the hanging that man dropped dead."

"I don't see how he was lucky," put in the gambler who had told the first story.

"Why," said the business man, "he was lucky because if he hadn't died he would have been hanged."

Another gambler told how a few days ago a green Swede who knew nothing about the game, but determined to try his luck, had won nearly $1,000. He had been an onlooker once or twice and seen big winnings. He went to the roulette wheel with $20, and in a few hours he had won out $800. It seemed that no matter what number he put chips on—and he played recklessly, as all new players do—it came up every time. That was pure luck. The man played no combinations or "arrangements," because he was as green as grass and knew nothing about the game.

"I have a friend," spoke up one of the group, who is connected with the city government, "who by the merest luck made a discovery that is netting him millions. His name is Perkins, and a few years ago back in Minnesota he made his discovery. He was a traveling man for a grocery firm, and while walking to a train to go from one country town to another one day he whittled a stick.

"He had whittled the stick in a triangular shape. On the train the idea struck him that the shape would be just what was wanted for railroad spikes. The square spikes in vogue were not the right thing because they split the grain of the green ties when driven into them, and when dry the wood shrank away from them. The triangle shaped spike would not split the grain, and subsequent shrinkage would be done away with. Perkins submitted his discovery to Pullman, and now the spikes are being made by millions at Pullman, Ills., making millions for Perkins and Pullman."

Another gambler here chimed in with the statement that during the past week a gambler from Seattle had won $2,300 at faro in Tacoma rooms in two sittings. Both sittings occupied 18 hours, and the first sitting resulted in the winning of $1,300 and the second $1,000. During the latter game the man was out nearly the whole $1,300 he had won at sitting No. 1, but he picked up and won big money. "I suppose he has gone back to Seattle with his dough," said the gambler, "as I have not seen him for some days."—Tacoma News.

Kind Indeed.

Collector (angrily)—Do you intend to pay this bill next week or never, sir?

Trotter—Well, since you offer me a choice, I say never. Really very kind of you. Good day.—Truth.

They Only Knew Agassiz.

In 1858 a party consisting of Lowell, Emerson, Agassiz, Judge Hoar, W. J. Stillman and several others spent a few weeks of the summer in the Adirondacks.

The journey of the company gave rise to an incident which has often been incorrectly told, and which, as a curious comment upon human fame, deserves to be told again. The coming of the party was of course made known along the track it would follow, and at Keeseville, where the common roads then ended, the town was agog to see the "philosophers," as they were at once collectively called. But neither Emerson nor Lowell was known, Agassiz being the only celebrity to that world, owing to his having recently refused the offer by the emperor of France of the keepership of the Jardin des Plantes at Paris and a senatorship with a large salary, he preferring to devote himself to science and America.

The selectmen of the town waited on the visitors early in the morning after their arrival to pay their respects, they said, but really to see a man who had no regard for money and distinction. They were received formally, the spokesman bringing a copy of a periodical which contained a portrait of Agassiz, which he produced and carefully compared with the lineaments of the professor until he had satisfied himself of the authenticity of the individual, when he addressed his followers with, "Yes, it's him!" And they then proceeded to shake hands with him, the rest of the party being ignored.—W. J. Stillman in Century.

A Sharp Passage.

The English marriage service was the subject of conversation. Lowe said in his dashing way that it was full of nonsense. "Why," he exclaimed, turning to his wife, "it made me say 'with all my worldly goods I thee endow,' when I had no worldly goods wherewith to endow you."

"Ah, Robert," she replied, "but there were your brains!"

"Well," he said, "all the world knows that I did not endow you with them."—"Life and Letters of Viscount Sherbrooke."

A Monster Sundial.

A large promontory in the Ægean sea, known as Hayon Horoo, extends 3,000 feet above the level of the water. As the sun swings around the shadow of this mountain touches one by one a circle of islands separated by regular intervals, which act as hour marks. It is the largest sundial in the world.—St. Louis Republic.

NO SUCH THING AS OLD AGE

To those who use South American Nervine

A Lady of 80 Years Permanently Cured by this Wonderful Medicine.

Three Doctors said "Old Age was Her Complaint" and Gave Her Up—Three Bottles of Nervine Gave Relief—Twelve Bottles Cured Absolutely.

MRS. JOHN DINWOODY, Flesherton, Ont.

Wordsworth speaks of "An old age serene and bright, and lovely as a Lapland night." And elsewhere this same writer talks of "An old age, beautiful and free." These are conditions that come to the man or woman, though their years may border close on to a century, when in the enjoyment of good health. In fact it is difficult to think of some of the old men and women on the stage of life to-day as old people, there seems to be such a perennial youthfulness about their every movement and act.

Does someone tell us that cases like this must be the exception and not the rule with those who have approached to or gone beyond the allotted three score years and ten? Not so, if they have become acquainted with the virtues contained in South American Nervine. Before us in this sketch is the picture of Mrs. John Dinwoody, of Flesherton, Ont., a resident of that town for forty years. No person in the town and country side around is perhaps better known than this lady, and none more highly esteemed. Three years ago it was her sad lot to loose a daughter who had been all the world to her. The shock sustained by this event completely broke up the system of Mrs. Dinwoody. She supposed her end had come. She lectured for one year with three doctors, and they gave her case up, saying that it was one of old age and no one, nor any medicine could do her good. Made of the kind of stuff that gives beauty to age at any time she did not despair. She was influenced to try Nervine. She took three bottles, and this was sufficient to show her that her end was not yet. From these she obtained relief. She persevered, and in all took twelve bottles of the medicine, with the result that she is to-day completely cured of that breaking-up of the system that threatened her three years ago.

There is nothing wonderful in the fact that Mrs. Dinwoody would proclaim to the thousands of old people throughout this broad land, that with old age does not necessarily come decline, decrepitude and disease. Why should we not live into the eighties and nineties, and cross the border of the century?

South American Nervine, whether the person be young or old, gets at the nerve centers, and when they are kept in proper condition the system is as well able to withstand disease at eighty as at thirty. With this prospect in view who would not live to an old age and enjoy the pleasures of family, friends and society, and take a part in watching the marvelous progress and developments of these closing days of a wonderful century, which marks as not the least of its wonderful discoveries, the discovery of South American Nervine.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, 'be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

COAL TAR PRODUCTS.

REMEDIES THAT HAVE BECOME FAVORITE MEDICINES.

During the Past Ten Years Many New Drugs Have Been Brought Into Service For Diseases and Complaints Which, Though Common, Were Hard to Treat.

Only a few years ago coal tar was looked upon as a "waste product." At the present day, however, it is no longer treated as such, for through the almost ceaseless activity of the German chemists enough new remedies have already been obtained from coal tar to fill a good sized pharmacopoeia.

About the first one of these products to attract any considerable attention was antipyrine, which made its appearance some 10 years ago and became popularly known during the epidemic of la grippe of several years ago. This was soon followed by antifebrin, which, although it had a new name, was an older drug than antipyrine, having been known for several years as acetanilid, a name derived from the substances from which it was made. It is prepared by the action of acetic acid on aniline oil.

The acetanilid is now used by many doctors in preference to antipyrine. The principal features in its favor are smallness of dose, less danger of a depressing effect on the heart and cheapness. The price of acetanilid is hardly one-tenth that of antipyrine.

Phenacetine is another drug of this class which has met with much success and apparently deservedly so. It has been used with excellent results in the treatment of influenza, the hyperesthesia or soreness of la grippe and rheumatism, both muscular and articular.

The drug is often combined with salol and quinine in the treatment of the above mentioned affections, and the results reported are invariably of a very satisfactory nature.

One of the most interesting of the coal tar derivatives is saccharin, a substance that is 280 times sweeter than sugar. The medicinal properties of this drug are antiseptic and sweetening. As a substitute for sugar it is used in the dietary of gout, diabetes and all diseases in which saccharine foods are contraindicated. It has also been used to disguise the taste of medicines for children. To give one an idea of the sweetening power of saccharin it is only necessary to say that one grain of the drug will sweeten an ordinary cup of coffee. If sugar were used at least a half ounce or a tablespoonful, would be necessary.

In the treatment of mental disease sulphonal is considered a very valuable agent. The drug could hardly have achieved success had it been introduced under its chemical name, which contains just two letters more than the entire alphabet. Diethylsulphondimethylmethan is the "jawbreaker" by which it is known technically.

The value of sulphonal as a hypnotic seems to be pretty well established. It has been used with marked success in the treatment of sleeplessness caused by fatigue and worry. It is also said to be of equal service in cases of acute mania, imbecility, melancholia, dementia, epilepsy, hallucinations and acute alcoholism. One observer stated that in every case treated "the slumber was accompanied by no disturbances of circulation or respiration and lasted from two to five hours or longer." From 15 to 30 grains are usually given as a dose. Even in very large doses the digestive functions are not disordered, and there are no disagreeable after effects beyond a slight drowsiness and a feeling of lassitude the next day.

In combination with hyoscine hydrobromate, sulphonal is said to form a very good treatment for the insomnia and restlessness of opium habitues. When a coal tar product is introduced, it can almost be taken for granted that one of the four medicinal properties is claimed for it. The four properties are antipyretic, analgesic, antiseptic and hypnotic.

Trional, which hails from Elberfeld, Germany, is brought forward as a candidate for therapeutic favor. It possesses the last named property. Brie of Bonn has found trional of value in treating insomnia or hysteria and neurasthenia in cases of great obstinacy and which had failed to respond to any other treatment. In maniacal excitement and paralytic mania, he reports excellent results in 90 per cent of the cases treated.

Salophen, although not distinctly a "coal tar derivative," is partly so, as one of its component parts, carbolic acid, is derived from coal tar. It is said to be a valuable remedy in the treatment of articular rheumatism. The dose is from 15 to 20 grains three or four times a day.

The very latest in the long line of coal tar products is gallanol. It is prepared by boiling tannin with aniline. It is introduced as a substitute for pyrogallic acid, having the advantage of being nontoxic and nonirritant. In the treatment of skin affections it has been used with success.

Cazeneuve, the introducer of the drug, reports great success in treating psoriasis by painting the spots with gallanol suspended in chloroform and covering them with a solution of gutta purcha in chloroform, called traumaticin.—New York World.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you it it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's oldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

THE MAGNETIC GIRL.

ONE WAY OF OVERCOMING HER STRENGTH.

Get Behind Her and Push, Says One Who Claims to Know—She Has Neither Superhuman Strength Nor Occult Power, but She Knows a Thing or Two.

There are many tricks in the repertory of the so-called electric or magnetic girl, all of which seem, at first sight, to involve either the possession of superhuman strength or else some occult power. As a matter of fact, however, they involve neither, says a writer in Cassier's Magazine. The strangest part of them is that they are all within the ability of any one to perform. Furthermore, it will be found that the very mechanical laws which these tricks appear to set at defiance are the ones upon which they depend for their success, and the chief reason why they have remained mysterious to those who have witnessed them is that they have not tried to repeat them themselves upon the first opportunity afforded. Let us take the first trick mentioned, namely, that of lifting a heavy person in the chair. Tell him to sit down and hold the chair against all your efforts. He will plant his feet firmly upon the floor, thus throwing his weight chiefly on his feet instead of on the chair, as he thinks he is doing. If you are in doubt of this try it yourself and you will realize that it is a fact. To move the person all that the girl has to do is to get behind and push. In the stooping position which she assumes she will obtain a considerable purchase by bracing her arms on her knees, and will thus have no difficulty in raising the chair slightly. As the sitter assumes a new position so as to more successfully resist this effort on the part of the girl she suddenly relaxes her push, directing the chair off to one side or the other. Before the sitter has recovered himself she has raised the chair again, and so on; the stronger he is or the more he opposes or strives to oppose her the worse he is off and the more successful she will be. The trick is more effective if three men try to hold the chair down, because of their divided effort and the tendency, where more than one is opposing her, for them really to oppose each other rather than her. She will be perfectly powerless, however, should even a single person sit listlessly in the chair, with no thought of opposition.

While in Chicago I saw the announcement of an electric girl, who included in her repertory a new trick, or at least one that I had not yet seen. A stick about four feet long and as thick as a broomstick was produced and I and another gentleman were requested to hold it in a vertical position before us while grasping it firmly in both hands. The girl, standing in front of us and facing us, placed the palm of her open hand against the lower portion of the stick, resting it on the side nearest us and furthest from herself.

After rubbing her open hand up and down for a few moments, in order "to make better electric contact," as we were informed, and after enjoining us to hold the stick perfectly vertical, we were told to press down on it as hard as we could. This we did until the veins seemed to stand out on our foreheads; but, exert ourselves as hard as we could, we two strong men were unable to press down hard enough to make the stick slip past the open palm of her hand. Had the girl grasped the stick with her two hands I am sure she could not have withstood my downward pressure alone. I would have borne her, stick and all, to the floor. But there she stood, with but one open hand bearing against the side of the stick, and both of us could not, by our united efforts, force the stick past that wonderful hand. Surely there seemed something uncanny about this. But it is very simply explained.

The whole secret consists in insisting upon the men holding the stick in a vertical position. When the girl's open hand is first placed against the lower portion of the stick she moves it two or three times up and down, pulling gradually more and more against it. As this tends to pull the stick away from the vertical, she insists that the men kept it straight. Thus cautioned, they will exert more and more effort until, when she feels that the pressure against her hand is sufficient, she instructs them to push down with all their might. They do so, and imagine they are exerting a tremendous vertical thrust, whereas their vertical effort is actually very slight—insufficient even to overcome the friction of the stick against her moist hand. The men are, really, exerting a tremendous effort, but are deceived as to its direction. With their hands tightly grasping the upper end of the stick, they are really trying to force the other end of the stick against the palm of her hand.

Boadicea's Undiscovered Tomb.

Boadicea's tomb still remains undiscovered. Mr. Read, of the British Museum, has had the trench dug several feet beyond the centre of the tumulus on Parliament Hill without having found anything to show for whom that particular burying mound was raised. So far the net result of the County Council's quest has been a leaden musket ball and some chips of china, but both of these are modern jetsam. There are indications, though, that a portion of the ground was disturbed about a century ago.

For the rest the soil remains as it was in the beginning, heaped up—as there is no doubt was the case—for the purpose of interring some distinguished personage. It is not uncommon, it seems, even in undisturbed "barrows" to draw a blank, for the rain and the slow processes of nature completely destroy all vestiges of human remains that may have been buried in them. The work, however, is not quite at an end at Parliament Hill, for a trench is being dug to right and left so as to thoroughly explore the ground.—London Telegraph.

The only blood purifier admitted on exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair was Ayer's Sarsaparilla, all others being excluded as secret preparations and patent medicines. With doctors and pharmacists, it has always been considered a standard remedy.

To save life from the ravages of disease is nobler than to win a kingdom. Burdock Blood Bitters cures all blood diseases scrofula, blotches, pimples, skin diseases, etc., by its cleansing power over the entire system.

Ayer's Pills

"I was troubled a long time with sick headache. It was usually accompanied with severe pains in the temples, a sense of fullness and tenderness in one eye, a bad taste in my mouth, tongue coated, hands and feet cold, and sickness at the stomach. I tried a good many remedies recommended for this complaint; but it was not until I

A Mark of Respect to Fred Douglas.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 22.—A great sensation was created here by the adoption in the House of a resolution introduced by a negro that the general assembly adjourn in honor of Frederick Douglas. The resolution was passed by a vote of 34 to 20, all the Democrats voting against it. A resolution to adjourn to-day in honor of Washington's birthday, which is a legal holiday in the state, was voted down.

Schoolboys Beat Their Teacher.

IONIA, Mich., Feb. 22.—During the session of a school located a mile east of this city, three pupils, aged about 18 years, attacked George Barr, the teacher, and gave him a terrible beating with sticks and pokers. The boys have been arrested and locked up.

Strike of the Electrical Workers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The strike of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers against the nine-hour day has resulted in a general strike, which will probably take out 1,000 men and stop work on at least thirty large buildings.

The T., H. and B. Trouble.

HAMILTON, Feb. 22.—There is no change in the situation of affairs on the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway. A few men are working under the protection of special constables, but several hundred laborers are walking around refusing to start until their wages are paid and trying to prevent others from starting. Ex-Chief McKinnon was rolled in the snow by a crowd of strikers, who guyed him about occurrences that led to his dismissal. But no effort was made to hurt him.

Agitating the McGee Monument.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Rev. Father Hayden, speaking at the St. Alphousus Club, said that he hoped to live to see a splendid statue, erected by the Catholics of Toronto, in memory of D'Arcy McGee. The suggestion is being talked of by many men prominent in Catholicism, and it is proposed, if sufficient funds can be raised, to have a statue made of bronze and placed in the Queen's park near that of the late Sir John Macdonald.

Dr. McLeod Declines the Nomination.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Feb. 22.—Hampton, Kings County, prohibitionists met in convention here yesterday again. A letter was read from Rev. Dr. McLeod declining the nomination. Then S. H. Flewelling, a young man 23 years of age, was tendered the nomination and accepted it, after several clergymen stated that they would go into the field and work for him.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Feb. 22, 1895.

There is nothing doing in local grain circles. The trade seems to be quite dead. Wheat prices are unchanged, with a limited demand. Wheat is quoted at 57 to 58c west and white at the same price. Manitoba wheat No. 1 hard, 79 to 81c west and 83c east. Barley market is slow. No. 1 is quoted at 48 to 50c, and No. 2, 45 to 46c, and feed at 37 to 39c. Oats are quoted west: White 31c and mixed 30c.

Wheat was irregular in Chicago and closed a shade higher. Corn was strong and active. Oats were weak and a shade lower.

Buffalo maltsters are still out of the barley market at current prices, but there is a fair outside demand and stocks of free barley here are becoming very low, which accounts for the firmness of sellers. Of the visible supply here a very large amount has been disposed of, and is held simply waiting the consequence of purchasers.

At East Buffalo in sheep and lambs the total offerings were 43 cars; closed quiet but steady. Extra lambs, $5.60 to $5.65; choice export sheep, wethers, $4.60 to $4.75. All the good stock sold, but some medium and poor stock which has been on the market since Monday are still held over, not wanted at any price.

A cheerful feeling characterized the dealings at the New York stock exchange, but the volume of trade was small, the industrials monopolizing the bulk of the business. Some wide changes were noted, especially in tobacco.

WESTERN ONTARIO DAIRYMEN.

Important Subjects Discussed at a Successful Convention at Simcoe.

SIMCOE, Feb. 22.—The Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario held a very successful district convention here yesterday afternoon and evening. Mayor Atkinson, of Simcoe, occupied the chair. There was large attendance of representative farmers from the counties of Norfolk and Haldimand. Prominent among those present were Prof. Dean, Agricultural College, Guelph; J. H. Monrad, Illinois; Prof. Harcourt, representing the Farmers' Institute Work of Ontario; W. C. Shearer, Bright; J. S. Pearce, London; Harold Eagle, Attercliffe Station; J. Wheaton, London, Secretary of the Association; H. B. Donley, D. B. Palmerton, J. T. Murphy, Simcoe. A number of ladies were present.

Addresses were delivered by J. W. Wheaton, Prof. Harcourt, W. C. Shearer, J. H. Monrad and Prof. Dean at the afternoon session. The principal topics discussed were, "Fodder corn and the silo," "Winter dairying," "Butter-making on the farm," "Practical dairy farming," and "The composition of milk and its relation to cheese-making." Valuable discussions took place on all these subject.

At the evening session addresses were delivered by J. S. Pearce, London; Profs. Dean and Harcourt and Messrs. Monrad and Wheaton, on topics relating more particularly to cheese-making. Great interest was manifested in the meetings by the dairymen of the district, which will do much to stimulate and develop dairying in Norfolk and Haldimand counties. The citizens of Simcoe, who arranged for and advertised the convention, are to be congratulated on the success of their efforts.

EVIDENCES OF A FOUL CRIME.

The Body of an Old Man in Goderich Found in His House.

GODERICH, Ont., Feb. 22.—Considerable excitement was created here the last two days on account of the death of Hugh McKay, an old resident, who was found dead in his home, a wretched hovel in the south-west part of the town, where the old man lived alone. The last seen of him was on Saturday, when he came up town to procure some provisions. On Tuesday some one called at his place, and, seeing no one around, the neighbors were notified. On entering the house the old man was found lying stiff and cold beside the stove. The body was almost naked and presented a sickening appearance. The head was bruised and marked in several places. Frightful bruises were found on the right side of the head, extending down to the nose, the face being covered with blood, his legs were also bruised and cut. The corpse and surroundings presented a deplorable scene.

As suspicions of foul play existed, in in order to clear up the matter it was thought advisable to hold an inquest. The enquiry opened yesterday before Coroner Holmes. A great many witnesses were examined and a post-mortem examination made on the body by Drs. Shannon and Hunter. The inquest concluded last evening, the jury bringing in a verdict that the deceased died from a clot of blood on the brain, produced by unnatural causes.

WILL STAND BY THE ACT.

The Manitoba Government Will Not Grant Remedial Legislation.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 22.—Hon. J. D. Cameron, Provincial Secretary, was interviewed in regard to the position the Manitoba Government will take on the resolution introduced by James Fisher, M.P.P.

Hon. Mr. Cameron sympathized with Mr. Fisher's object, but plainly intimated that the Government couldn't accept his resolution. Mr. Cameron understood the proposed resolution to ask the House to investigate grievances, but the Government was not prepared to admit that any injustice has been done, and it had not been stated by the Privy Council that such had been done.

"The minority would not," Mr. Cameron said, "accept an investigation by the Legislature that had passed the Act, nor would any legislation based on the system in force in Ontario be acceptable. The Government is determined to stand by its School Act and will resist to the utmost any interference from outside. To resist any such political action would not be attacking the constitution. There is just one way to put an end to the agitation, and that is for the Dominion Parliament to say once for all that it has no intention of interfering with the legislation of the Province. If it endeavors to enforce remedial legislation trouble is imminent."

A. O. U. W. Officers Elected.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 22.—At yesterday's session of Ontario Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the following officers were elected: Past G.M. W., F.G. Inwood; grand M.W., D. F. Macwatt; grand foreman, F. W. Unitt; grand overseer, G. P. Graham; grand recorder, M. D. Carder; grand receiver, Jas. Rushton; grand guide, John Wilson; G. I. watchman, John R. Taylor; G. O. watchman, J. P. Brown; grand solicitor, Warren Totten; G. medical examiner, J. M. Cotton.

Trade in the Dominion.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Bradstreet's to-morrow will say: County orders received at the principle centres in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec are of moderate volume only. Results of last year's business are unfavorable in many instances. The outlook thus far is not particularly favorable. In Nova Scotia trade is quite dull in all lines. New Brunswick advices are that the heavy snow fall in the woods checks lumbering operations.

On the Trail of Mayor Kennedy.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Before the Master-in-Chambers yesterday new quo warranto proceedings were taken by William Britnell, Somerhill avenue, against the election of Mayor Kennedy. An application for a trial was made and granted and the proceedings will be pressed at once. Mr. Britnell alleges many acts of corruption in connection with the election.

A Kingston Man's Sad Death.

KINGSTON, Feb. 22.—A sad and sudden death occurred here. Wm. Ford has for several weeks past been dangerously ill. His brother Robert, who was in his usual good health, called in to see him, and on reaching the bedside of his sick brother dropped dead.

REDUCTION IN BINDER TWINE.

Lower Rates on Raw Material Will Produce This Result.

MONTREAL, Feb. 22.—The Canadian Hardware and Metal Merchant says: "Binder twine manufacturers have decided upon considerable reduction in prices, owing to the reduction in raw material, but refuse to make any announcement yet as to what new figures will be. They claim no business has been done yet on the new basis, and will not be for months.

Efforts are being made to induce the Government to close the factory at Kingston penitentiary and probably they will succeed, as the works were established by the late Sir John Thompson for special reasons and were not popular with all the other members of the Government.

Lewiston Has a Scandal.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Feb. 22.—The little town of Lewiston, opposite Queenston, Ont., has provided a morsel of scandal for the gossips of Niagara county. Mrs. Mary Claffiin is a handsome widow of 30 years, who resides in Lewiston, and has been entertaining her bachelor cousin from Flint, Mich. His name is Wilber Sheldon and Mrs. Claffiin, who is the mother of several children, alleges that her cousin entered her room early on the morning of January 22 and assaulted her. Sheldon claims that the charge against him is without foundation.

MR. DAVIE'S APPOINTMENT.

Awaits Only Lord Aberdeen's Signature—Dewdney May be Premier.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—At a meeting of the Cabinet, Premier Davie, of British Columbia, was appointed chief justice of the province, in place of the late Sir M. Begbie. The order-in-council has not yet been signed by Lord Aberdeen. Hon. Theodore Davie was born at Brixton, Surrey, England, in 1852. His father, John C. Davie, was a member of the Legislative Assembly of British Columbia at the time of his death in 1869. Theodore Davie was admitted to practice as an attorney in 1873 and called to the bar in 1877. For several years he was a bencher of the Law Society of British Columbia. He was first returned to the legislature in 1882 for Victoria city and afterwards in 1886. He succeeded his brother, the late A. E. B. Davie, as attorney-general in 1889. On the death of the Hon. Mr. Robson he became Premier. Mr. Davie is a Conservative in politics and a Roman Catholic in religion, although brought up a Protestant.

Lieutenant-Governor Dewdney, of British Columbia, will likely resign his position and enter the legislature as Premier. It is also said here that Hon. T. M. Daly will be the next lieutenant-governor.

The Government informed the delegation from Michigan, which waited on some of the ministers, that the question of assisting the settlers who wanted to come to the Nipissing district from Michigan lay more with the Ontario Government than with the Dominion. The conference between delegates and the Ontario Government and the Dominion and C. P. R. will likely be held about the matter shortly.

German Lloyds Agents on Their Defence.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The agents of the German Lloyds have a letter in to-day's Times repudiating the implied and expressed accusations that their alleged arrogance as to the rule of the roads is due to an overstrong desire to make fast passages. The company's instructions to their commanders, they say, is to place safety absolutely before speed. They add: "The proof that these instructions are observed is the fact that during thirty-eight years of the company's existence, its lines have been remarkably free from serious accidents in the North Sea and even the crowded roadstead of the channel, while on the route from Southampton to New York and other tracks it has never lost a single passenger or mail bag."

Had Their Trouble For Nothing.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Feb. 28.—The eastbound train on the 'Frisco road, due here at 10 o'clock last night, was held up by robbers near Aurora, thirty miles west of this city. Three men got on the engine when the train was five miles from Aurora and compelled the engineer and fireman at the point of revolvers to go back to the express car and open it. The robbers found to their disgust that the car was empty, the safe locked and the messenger not in sight. He had disappeared in time and the robbers left empty handed. Much excitement was caused at Aurora and this city by the news. A posse of officers was organized and started in pursuit of the robbers.

American Publishers' Convention.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Yesterday was the last day of the convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. The morning was spent in discussing business affairs of the organization behind closed doors. At the afternoon session the existing libel laws of the several states were discussed. No formal action on the matter was taken as there are pending before the legislatures of many states bills providing for needed revision of libel laws. C. W. Knapp, of the St. Louis Republic, was elected President, and J. A. Butler, of the Buffalo News, Vice-President. The convention closed with a banquet at the Brunswick hotel.

A DEMENTED FAMILY.

Three Brothers and Two Sisters Crazed Over a Strange Belief.

THE MOTHER'S LIFE IN DANGER

Under a Belief That the End of the World is at Hand the Brothers and Sisters Devoted Night and Day to Prayer—A Strange Case Near Brampton.

BRAMPTON, Feb. 28.—On the 2nd concession west in the township of Chinguacousy, distant from this place about three miles, in a little roughcast house lived David J. McLure, his mother, two brothers and two sisters, all adults. The father died some ten years ago. They were steady, industrious and rather intelligent people, were doing well and were highly spoken of by their neighbors. About six weeks ago they were thought to be acting strangely, being seized with some religious craze. The eldest son had a revelation that the end of the world was to come on April 1, and preparations began to be made for the great day. Prayer and singing were going on all the time, night and day, until the whole family seemed to be under the hypnotic influence of David. Just before the big storm several hogs were killed and cast to the dogs.

The Rev. Mr. Clark, pastor of the Presbyterian church here, of which the family were members, has been doing what he could to correct the strange belief of the family and drove Dr. Moore out to investigate. He unhesitatingly said they were insane. It is reported that the three brothers and sisters had arranged to kill their mother and it is a fact that Dave did grab his mother and choke her, but she managed to escape, and hastening to a neighbor's reported the matter to them, and upon returning they found the whole family in bed together and David stark naked. Blood was found on everything around and it was at first thought a double murder had been committed, but the blood came from Dave's hand, which he had used in demolishing the windows and crockery.

Constable Hurst was summoned and he brought the three brothers to the town and lodged them in jail. They occupy the same corridor as Walker, who is to be tried again at the spring assizes for the murder of Mrs. Williams. The trio can be heard outside the jail singing and praying with great fervor. It is thought by many that a most atrocious murder would have been committed if the matter had been allowed to rest, but happily such an ending has been averted.

The two young women will be sent to the Toronto asylum. Close intermarrying of cousins is thought to have something to do with this lamentable state of affairs.

THE LOCAL LEGISLATURE.

Prospects for a Short Session—Mr. Whitney's Queries.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—Hon. Wm. Harty, Thos. Hobbs and James Connee were introduced to the Legislature yesterday. Their appearance was greeted with applause from the Government benches.

The adoption of the Speech from the Throne was moved by Mr. Craig and seconded by Mr. McNeish. Mr. Marter criticized the address and was followed by Mr. Haycock in his maiden speech.

On Monday next Mr. Whitney will ask whether it is the intention of the Government to introduce legislation in the direction of lessening the number of appeals from courts of first instance, increasing the jurisdiction of the County and Division Courts, or either of them, cheapening the procedure and providing for the speedy decision in matters of legislation, and whether it is the intention of the Government to take steps during the present session to reduce the amount of Surrogate fees on probates and letters of administration.

Mr. Whitney on Monday will also ask the Minister of Education whether it is proposed to have an immediate and thorough investigation of the present serious condition of affairs in the University. Whip Willoughby will move that a special committee be appointed to look into the matter, with instructions to prepare and report to the House a bill for the purpose of providing for an investigation into the question.

The question of dairying and encouragement to a butter industry will soon be discussed.

All opinion seems to agree that the session will be a short one, as there is no great amount of work in sight, unless the Patrons may have something they intend bringing up, which has not yet been made public.

T. H. & B. Trouble Settled.

HAMILTON, Feb. 28.—The strike on Sect. 20 of the T. H. & B. road is at an end. The county constables have been withdrawn from the scene and a large force of men are at work. The construction of the road will be pushed on till the line between Hamilton and Brantford is completed. Bracey Bros. & Co., who assigned to Lawyer Teetzel, say there will be $60,000 coming to them when the work is finished, and this will more than pay all indebtedness, leaving a good surplus.

Settled it by Marriage.

NIAGARA FALLS, Feb. 28.—The case of criminal assault preferred by Widow Claflin, of Lewiston, against her cousin, Wilber Sheldon, came up before Judge Robinson, and was suddenly terminated. Sheldon, who was very nervous, got up before the first witness left the stand and startled the villagers by saying: "Clear the court and I'll marry her." The judge had the room cleared and married the pretty widow and Michigan bachelor.

THREE WOMEN PERISH

Hot Springs, Ark., Visited by a Disasterous Holocaust.

MANY BUILDINGS DESTROYED

One of the Unfortunate Women Met Her Death While Endeavoring to Save Her Jewellery—Property to the Amount of $100,000 Destroyed.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 28.—Fire broke out in the Ledgerwood bakery on Ouachita avenue yesterday. It is in the southern part of the city, where boarding houses abound, and in an hour three women had been burned to death, six boarding houses, several store houses and fifteen cottages, in all worth $100,000, had been swept away. The dead are: Mrs. Laura Scammon, Mrs. Henry J. McLeod and Augustine Stivetto (colored). Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Brownson, of Macon, Mo., Mrs. Peacock and others were injured, but none dangerously. A strong wind fanned the flames, but prevented them from moving in the direction of the big hotels and bath houses.

The Ledgerwood bakery was a frame building, in the second storey of which Mrs. Scammon had furnished apartments. Charles Ledgerwood first saw the flames, and in his efforts to extinguish them neglected to warn people in the neighborhood. Nothing was heard of Mrs. Scammon until the fire was over, when her bones were found in the ashes of her house.

Mrs. McLeod was a guest of the Laclede boarding house. She was aroused and with her husband started out of the house, but before reaching the door remembered some jewellery and returned for it against the advice of her husband. When she started back she found her way blocked by the flames. Her husband tried to reach her and almost lost his life in the effort. She endeavored to rush through the flames but fell down and perished. The remains of the colored woman were found in a partly saved room in the same house.

Mr. and Mrs. Brownson, of Missouri, had a thrilling escape. They lived on the third floor of the Ouachita boarding house and when aroused found the house wrapped in fire. Escape by the stairway was cut off. They rushed to the windows and cried to the people below for help but none could be given them. Mrs. Brownson tied several sheets and blankets together, making a rope long enough to reach down to the window below. She went down first and entered the second floor window and escaped by a back stairway. When her husband reached the second floorway the stairway was blocked by flames and he had to jump. He received severe bruises and the woman was badly lacerated sliding down the rope.

Twenty-eight buildings were burned, including fifteen cottages. Three hundred men, women and children were driven to other quarters for lodging and most of them to stall their clothing.

BISHOP FALLOW'S BEER.

Non-Alcoholic, But a Good Drink—A New Experiment.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Bishop Fallows, of the Reformed Episcopal church, has opened his "place." It is called "The People's Institute Home Saloon," and it is designed to give men all the accommodations of a saloon, without the alcoholic accompaniments. There was a fine lunch, and four pretty waiter girls were in attendance. Many old-time friends came in and greeted the bishop warmly, as he told them of the nutritive properties of the non-alcoholic beer, which would flow from the spigots as soon as the pumps were properly fitted and connected. "It's a pure brewed extract of hops and malt," he explained, "and while there is no alcohol in it, any beer drinker will declare it to be a good, bitter drink, and a close counterfeit of beer, without any of the bad effects of alcoholic beer. I am satisfied that it is going to be the drink of the place." He grew so enthusiastic that "Billy" Bradley, the colored porter, was sent down below to tap a keg, and bring up a sample pitcher of the foaming beverage. It is called the "Bishop's drink." There was a great rush all day, and the lunch suffered severely.

Celebrating Washington's Birthday.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Washington's birthday was observed here as generally and with as much spirit as usual in this city. The city bore a holiday appearance in the display of flags and bunting. Along the river front the display was general, and effect beautiful. At sunrise yesterday Christopher R. Forbes, great grandson of Sergeant Van Arsdale, of Revolutionary fame, raised "Old Glory" at the Battery park, as he has done for many years. He was assisted by the Anderson Zouaves of the 22nd regiment, New York volunteers. Great enthusiasm prevailed while the flag was being raised, cheer after cheer being given for the father of our country and "Old Glory," by those who were present.

Fell Into Boiling Water.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 28.—Peter Fitzpatrick fell into a vat of boiling water at Dwyer's Tannery, No. 76 Ferguson street, yesterday. He splashed about wildly in his awful bath and when fellow workmen came to his aid he was still conscious and screaming in his agony. His body was literally boiled. It was difficult to handle him as at every touch his flesh dropped off in large fragments. At length he was got into an ambulance and taken to the city hospital. Last night he was at the point of death.

Pretty.

A bedroom suite of native white maple with birdseye maple panels, now in A. Clegg's window, attracted considerable notice on Saturday; and especially during the evening large numbers stopped to admire. It is almost white, of neat design, just the thing for a young ladies room. Though pretty and dainty, it is not expensive. dw

FORTNIGHTLY CLUB COLUMN.

INTRODUCTION.

[EXPLANATORY NOTE—At the last meeting of the Fortnightly Club it was determined that the newspapers should be asked to grant the Club a Saturday Column, in which might be discussed such matters, literary, philosophical and ethical, as would be of interest and profit to the citizens of Peterborough. A member of the club, whose learning, judgment and literary skill all appreciate, was appointed editor. In his hands the Club confidently expects that the Column will become of vital interest to all readers, and especially to the so-called workingmen. He has the sole direction of it, and is alone responsible for the views expressed. As announced editorially, the newspapers have kindly acceded to the Club's request.

LETTERS TO THE CITIZENS OF PETERBOROUGH.

I.

It is a stale observation that our 19th century, now drawing to a close, has been an extraordinary one. The seven wonders of the world have in our hands become seventy times seven. In the advance of physical science and mechanical inventions, in the progress of education—in all lines of human activity, our age is without a parallel in the history of the world. Many problems, philosophical, moral and spiritual, have been faced and settled; for amid all the ambition, greed and license, characteristic of the times, there have always been a multitude of earnest spirits and we can fairly call our century an intensely earnest one. Yet, after counting all our gains, we must confess that never was life—physical, mental and spiritual life—harder to live; never had the world more moral and social problems to settle; never was each individual man so imperatively called upon to think for himself, and to shape his life with earnest regard for the welfare of others; never was he so plainly called upon to be his "brother's keeper," and never before has the better mind of the world so clearly recognized this.

WORKING IN SELF-FORGETFULNESS;

A feature of the age is the education and intelligence of the so-called WORKINGMAN. He is often a reader and a thinker, and a leader of men. His voice is heard everywhere, and his wants and demands are known; and when he is addressed from the press, platform, or pulpit, he is addressed as a brother. In this spirit his attention to our column is asked; for we intend, from time to time, to discuss many matters of vital interest to him as well as to the citizens at large.

We are all agreed that we live in a stage of advanced civilization. But what do we mean by civilization? The word is one that calls up before our minds more or less vague ideals of social order, education, national and municipal government, of manners, of material comforts, of literature, art and religion. The proportions in which these are mingled depends upon our particular tasks.

Civilization is thus seen to be a very complex thing. In short, everything that interests man has to do with his civilization. But it will help us to gain a more distinct idea of civilization to observe that man's interests fall into two great classes: (1) individual interests, and (2) social interests. If I converse with a man on the street, or in a railway car, I soon find that he has certain individual aims in life, he has bought a farm, or he is building a house, or he is studying art or literature. But further, I find that he has certain social aims. He is a Conservative or Liberal, because he thinks this or that policy best for the country; he is interested in the churches, the schools, the libraries, the parks, in the whole range of municipal affairs. He loves his country above all other countries. He loves his town about all other towns. He is prepared to sacrifice something of his individual interests for the promotion of those of the whole community.

Civilization, then, is a process of development, which has for its goal the absolute perfection of all the varied capacities of the individual man, and the yet more varied capacities of the commonwealth. It is usual to summarise man's powers under the four heads of his physical, mental, moral, and spiritual faculties. The perfectly civilized individual would be not only perfectly healthy in body, sane in mind, righteous in actions, and elevated in spirit, but would harmoniously blend in in due proportions the claims of body, mind and spirit; whilst the perfectly civilised society would be that wherein all the members duly performed their various functions in the family, in the municipality, and in the state.

THE PERFECT MAN IN THE PERFECT STATE; that is the goal of civilization.

From these heights of idealism the descent to the region of actual facts is apt to be discouraging. Individual perfection of body or mind, of morality, or spirituality, is nowhere to be found. The social coach rattles and creaks as with infinite discord of its various parts; and with many a false turning, and many a breakdown, it crawls along its appointed road. Like Pharoah's wheel-less chariots it drives heavily.

The traveller crossing a mountain range, as he nears the summit of the first hill, thinks joyfully that he approaches his journey's end, but when he gains its peak he sees yet another, hitherto concealed from view, whose heights must be scaled; and beyond this there is another and yet another before he at last enter the promised land. So the progress of our progressive age is revealing to us long vistas of the road

"O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent," that lies before us. Yet we stand upon a summit, and like Moses from Mount Pisgah, though it be in the far distance, can catch glorious glimpses of a land flowing with milk and honey, wherein

"Mercy and truth meet together, Righteousness and peace kiss each other."

One of the bright hopeful features of our age is its earnestness. In an almost grim earnestness (because the foes are grim) we are

WRESTLING WITH THE PROBLEMS OF LIFE.

The great writers of our country, both of poetry and prose, have set this key note. Carlyle, Emerson, Ruskin, Browning, and Tennyson, the five greatest authors, are likewise the five most earnest. We may with justice find some fault with one and all. Carlyle is too bombastic, Emerson too transcendental, Ruskin too dogmatic, Browning too obscure, Tennyson too aristocratic; but all their voices blend together into one great trumpet call—"BE EARNEST." What of our own town? What of its individual citizens? All have some gifts, some privileges. We have churches, schools, parks, a public press, benevolent societies. That these all contribute more or less largely to the general well-being few will deny. It seems, however, to the present writer that there is both a need and room for the conscientious expression of careful opinion upon matters which can only be indirectly dealt with by any existing organization. True, the press, through newspapers and magazines, supplies a vast amount of information of the most varied and most useful kind, but the especial need this letter contemplates, is the focussing of rays of truth, and warm beams of moral impulse, upon the particular needs of our own community. Some centre of unity is required, which shall seek to collect and diffuse the truth we all need, so as to produce a unity and fraternity of sentiment amongst that shall rise above the discord of conflicting interests and unequal culture, and hold us all together in the recognition of the truth that we are all, in the performance of our duty, working for the common good, the man who breaks stones for the road as well as the Mayor of the town.

ALL CLASSES OF THE COMMUNITY,

The Fortnightly Club, by the courtesy of the editors of the Review and Examiner, has at its disposal a weekly column. It desires (doubtless in a very limited and tentative way) in some degree to fulfil the above named object. It seeks, from no heights of superiority, with no desire to dictate, to address a weekly letter on various subjects to all its fellow citizens, and it earnestly requests that its letter will be received by all and read by all in the spirit in which it is given, viz.: in an earnest desire in a variety of ways to advance the true progress, that is the civilization, of our town by aiding (though in never so slight a measure) the progress of the individual to perfection, and the development of society into a harmonious and happy unity.

A MOST PECULIAR CASE.

IT BAFFLED THE SKILL OF PHYSICIANS FOR YEARS.

A Sprained Ankle in Childhood Followed by Years of Pain—The Means of Relief Discovered by Accident.

From the Vancouver World.

"Another miracle, I suppose," was the remark made by a World reporter, rather skeptically, the other day when he was detailed to interview Miss Alice Adams at 420 Princess Street. If he was a doubter when he went he is free to confess that he was not a doubter when he came away, nor could any one doubt who listened to Miss Adams' straightforward story of her case, and he is quite convinced that through the medium of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills she has been released from much suffering. When the reporter called and made known his errand Miss Adams smiled and said.—"Yes, I have been cured by Pink Pills." "When I was a little girl," "I had the misfortune to fall and sprain my ankle. It was cared for but it never seemed to get thoroughly better and all the rest of my life, until a year ago, I suffered pain in it. Sometimes this pain was simply excruciating. I tried all kinds of remedies and took whole courses of high class professional treatment for local rheumatism, constitutional rheumatism, displacement of the cords and I do not remember what all. Physicians gave me new names for the trouble but that is about all I got from them. None of them cured me. The amount of medicine I had taken deranged my stomach and I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the hope that they would cure my indigestion. I had no thought of their affecting the chronic rheumatism in my ankle and leg but to my surprise I had hardly got started taking them before the pain began to disappear. It seemed too good to be true, but I kept on taking the pills and after I had taken six boxes the pain was entirely gone. This was over a year ago and as it has not come back I think the cure can be called permanent. The pills also corrected the irregularity in my stomach and I am now in better health than I ever remember of having been in before. If I feel at all dispirited or ill from a cold or anything of the sort a few of the pills now set me right. I have not hesitated to recommend the pills to my friends and I know others who have been benefitted."

Miss Adams certainly does look in the pink of health and she told her story in a manner that chased away any shadow of doubt. She is a living example of the power to do good that lies in a few boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

A Whole Town Swallowed Up.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—A despatch from Odessa to the Standard says the town of Koutchat, near Astrabad, Persia, has been swallowed by an earthquake, and several thousand persons have perished. This seems to be another version of the report conveyed in a Teheran despatch to the Times on January 26 of the destruction of the town of Kuchan, whereby about 2,000 persons were killed.

Fear of Smallpox Killed Him.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 23.—Henry Quinn, colored, was suffering from intermittent fever when a case of smallpox was found near his home. The doctors of the health department called to examine him, which convinced Quinn he had taken the disease. He became delirious and died last night of fright. A burial certificate was issued giving the cause of his death as shock from fear of smallpox.

Chicago Evidently Means Business.

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—The police raided another prize fight here last night and took the principals, together with about 75 spectators, to a police station. The fight was to be between Joe Brownly and Danny McBride, and the men are said to have been backed for $500 a side.

Emigration Was a Failure.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The Lord Mayor of London has issued an appeal for funds for the relief of the unemployed. Seeing the failure of the Mansion House emigrants at Montreal last year, emigration to Canada and all the colonies is expressly excluded from the remedies to be adopted.

POVERTY IN HOCKING VALLEY.

A Commission Reports Much Destitution Among the Miners.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 23.—The commission appointed at the instance of Gov. McKinley by the Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce of Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, and Toledo to make an investigation of the destitution of the miners in the Hocking Valley and Sunday Creek Valley have discovered some startling facts.

In the localities so far visited the commission has discovered that each miner last year earned only from $75 to $125, largely because of the great national strike. Of the 10,000 or 12,000 miners in the two valleys fully one-third, representing with their families nearly 15,000 persons, are in greater or less distress. With reference to future prospects all the miners declare they are not encouraging. They are almost a unit in declaring that there are at least fifty per cent too many miners in the two valleys for the amount of work that can be supplied and many of them are making preparations to locate on farms or seek other employment.

SENDING OUT THE SEALERS.

A Profitable Season Will Work Good Results for Newfoundland.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Feb. 23.—Preparations for sending out the fleet which will engage in the seal fishery are now in active progress. About twenty steamers are going this year. The sealing prospects are good. There was a sharp advance in the price of seal oil a few days ago. Good results from the fishery will help much to relieve the distress prevalent in the colony. The number of destitute people is increasing daily. About 7,000 are now receiving relief.

Right Rev. Michael Howley was yesterday installed as Roman Catholic bishop of St. John's, being the first Newfoundlander to attain that dignity in this diocese.

Scraped With a Rasp.

SIRS,—I had such a severe cough that my throat felt as if scraped with a rasp. On taking Norway Pine Syrup I found the first dose gave relief, and the second bottle completely cured me.

BRIBED BY THE PORTE

Turkey Said to be Endeavoring to Suppress the Truth.

HER OFFER TO THE ARMENIANS

She Will Return the Booty Taken by the Kurds, Pay an Indemnity, and Relieve Them From Taxes if They Keep the Facts From the Commission.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Prof. Minas Tcherase, editor of Armenia, is informed by a correspondent in Armenia that the Turkish authorities are making every effort to bribe the families who suffered most keenly from the outrages last fall. They are said to have promised the Armenians in Sasoun to return the booty taken by the Kurds, to pay them £800 indemnity and to relieve them of taxes for several years in case the Armenians keep from the commission of inquiry all revelations concerning the abuses of Turkish rule. At Amasia, Prof. Tcherase is informed, the jailors scourge the Armenian political prisoners daily.

M. A. Jewett, the Consul of the United States at Sivas, Turkey, has written a letter to the London agency of the United Press denying the statement made by a United States Senator on January 4, that the reason of the Porte's refusal to allow Mr. Jewett to make an independent investigation of the alleged Armenian atrocities was that Mr. Jewett's wife was an Armenian. Mr. Jewett says: "There is no foundation for the statement that I married an Armenian woman, and a better reason ought to be found for the Porte's objection to my serving in an independent capacity on the atrocities commission. I regard the statement as injurious and as tending to weaken my official position. To say that I would report the facts as I found them, whether they hurt the Turks or the Armenians, would be nearer the truth."

KRUPP'S ARMOR PLATES.

The German Firm Has Discovered a New Process of Hardening.

BERLIN, Feb. 23.—Vice Admiral Hollmann, secretary of the Admiralty, was in the budget committee of the Reichstag yesterday during the discussion of the naval estimates. He told the deputies that the Krupps had discovered a new hardening process which materially increased the resisting power of armor plates. The tests of armor prepared by the new process had shown remarkable results. He spoke also of the information gained by the Admiralty from the naval operations in the war in the east. Of all the foreign officers applying for permission to accompany the Chinese fleet he said the Germans alone were allowed to inspect the war vessels minutely.

The budget committee of the Reichstag voted the second instalment of 2,500,000 marks for the first-class ironclad which will replace the Preussen.

The tobacco tax bill passed its first reading in the Reichstag and was referred to a special committee of twenty-eight.

THEIR RELATIONS QUITE FRIENDLY.

Dufferin Does Not Credit the Ill-Feeling in France Towards England.

PARIS, Feb. 23.—The Marquis of Dufferin, British Ambassador to France, made the principal speech at the annual banquet of the British Chamber of Commerce last evening. He said that despite certain current criticisms, from which it may be inferred that France and England were taking an antagonistic course in politics, there had never been a time since his arrival in Paris when the relations of the two countries were more friendly and more obviously conciliatory on both sides. He cited as an illustration the recent convention as to Sierra Leone, which, he remarked, showed clearly the reciprocal desire to discuss international questions in a just and generous spirit. The convention should be regarded, he thought, as a most favourable omen of the settlement of other stubborn questions which were awaiting international treatment in Africa.

WANT THE TROOPS RETAINED.

Cairo Protests Against the Withdrawal of the Lancashire Battalion.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The Daily News correspondent in Cairo says: The local press is opposed to the impending withdrawal of the Second South Lancashire battalion. A feeling of insecurity undoubtedly exists and the departure of every British soldier will strengthen the position of the Anglophobist party.

CAIRO, Feb. 23.—The Cabinet met yesterday with the Khedive presiding and passed a decree forming a new tribunal empowered to deal summarily with native offences against British officers, soldiers and sailors. The aim is to prevent a repetition of the recent assaults upon marines in Alexandria and elsewhere.

A Long Underground Canal.

The canal between Worsley and St. Helens in north England is probably the longest and most remarkable canal of the kind in the world. It is 16 miles long and is underground from one end to the other. Many years ago the managers of the Duke of Bridgewater's estate filled its old mines with water that they might transport the coal under ground instead of on the surface. Ordinary canalboats are used, the power being furnished by the men. The tunnel arch over the canal is provided with cross pieces, and the men propel the boats along as they lie on their backs on the loads of coal.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Reasons for Success

The success of Norway Pine Syrup as a cure for coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles is due to the fact that it is the best and pleasantest remedy ever discovered, and because its action is prompt and certain.

Consumption follows neglected colds. Norway Pine Syrup cures coughs, asthma, sore throat, bronchitis and lung troubles.

FIFTY HOURS WITHOUT SLEEP.

Weary Nights of Suffering.

NERVOUSNESS AND SLEEPLESSNESS THE CAUSE.

Paine's Celery Compound Brings Sweet Rest and Sleep.

MISS ANNA DAWSON.

Modern civilization and life are marred and saddened owing to the great prevalence of nervousness, sleeplessness, irritability, depression of spirits and nervous headache.

Women are the chief sufferers. The constant cares and crosses of daily life in the home, and the worries and exactions of society, all tend to disturb and break up the nervous organism.

Medical science has given to the world Paine's Celery Compound, a true nerve food, vitalizer and builder; the only medicine that can restore health and bring sweet rest and natural sleep. Mrs. Dawson, of Wilkesport, Ont., who was once a great sufferer, testifies as follows:

I consider it a pleasure and a duty to put on record what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. I have been afflicted with nervousness and sleeplessness, and at times have been without sleep for fifty hours. All ordinary medicines failed, and nothing met my case until I used Paine's Celery Compound. Now I never miss a night's sleep. I strongly recommend your medicine to all nervous sufferers."

PROCURED CITIZENSHIP BY FRAUD.

A Canadian Under Arrest in Buffalo—Another Canadian the Informer.

BUFFALO, Feb. 23.—Albert H. Knowles was arrested at Warsaw, N. Y., and brought to this city where he was arraigned before the United States Commissioner on a charge of illegally obtaining naturalisation papers. Knowles came to Canada from England in 1885 and lived in the Dominion until 1891. In February of that year he came with his family from Dunnville, Ont., and took up his residence in Tonawanda, N. Y. On October 15th of that year he acquired citizenship by falsely swearing to a five-year's continuous residence in the United States and by the false supporting testimony of witnesses. The prisoner being asked to plead said he did not know what the penalty was, but the commissioner put down a plea of not guilty and remanded Knowles to jail in default of $1,000 bail for examination on Monday. An ex-fellow countryman named James Walton is responsible for Knowles' prosecution.

Knowles also lived in Thorold, Ont., and for a time in eastern Ontario.

A Clergyman's Fall.

BUFFALO, Feb. 23.—Henry Koehler, aged 62, a clergyman, was sentenced to 30 days for vagrancy. He says he has lectured in Toronto, Port Elgin, Paisley and other Canadian towns. He was married in Port Elgin to a lady who is there now with her parents. He says while in Canada he yielded to his old inclination to drink, but has not indulged any since he left Toronto last Saturday. He claims he was unjustly arrested and committed.

Shipping Their Paupers to Montreal.

MONTREAL, Feb. 23.—Mayor Villeneuve has complained that paupers were being sent from the States to this city. Two women called on him yesterday and said they had come from Tewkesbury. The authorities there had paid their fares to Montreal and given them fifty cents each. One has a young child and said her husband had deserted her. The Mayor says these cases are becoming frequent.

A Big Livery Bill.

A Bangor man who sent his office boy to return a hired team to a stable received several days after a bill for the board of the horse and another bill for the hire of the team for the time intervening. The stupid boy took the team to the wrong stable. The man said he wouldn't mind so much, but there seemed to be no limit to the number of cigars he is compelled to pay for at the instance of jeering friends.—Exchange.

The Best Advertisements.

Many thousands of unsolicited letters have reached the manufacturers of Scott's Emulsion from those cured through its use, of Consumption and Scrofulous diseases. None can speak so confidently of its merits as those who have tested it.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Points About Needles.

The great sail needle, which has to be pushed with a steel palm, would puzzle most people; so, too, the broommaker's needle, which must also be pushed with a steel palm. The curious knitting machine needle, with its latchet; the arrasene and crewel needles, and the needle for shirring machines; the weaver's pin for picking up broken threads, with an open eye in the hook. The needle, as we see it today, is the evolved product of centuries of invention. In its primitive form it was made of bone, ivory or wood. The making of Spanish needles was introduced into England during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Point by point the manufacture has improved.—L. G. Vance in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Christian Name.

The term "Christian name" is used in England and America only. "Baptismal name" is used in other countries. The terms seems to have been used first after the reformation, when Biblical names were used as a reaction against the use of the saints' names in the calendar. It is evident that all Biblical names are not Christian, but the reaction went so far as to consider everything in the Bible as Christian and everything not in the Bible as pagan or certainly nonchristian.—New York Evening Sun.

Pushing Trade.

Pete Simons & Co. in to-day's EXAMINER announce the arrival of a large stock of new goods of the latest patterns. This house seems determined to push trade this spring, and with this end in view quote prices which will enable parties requiring them to secure ordered suits at ready-made figures. This fact ought to bring in a host of orders as it undoubtedly will. Go and see the goods, and satisfy yourself.

Better be Early Than Late.

Ladies may rest assured of this fact that Miss Delaney's clearing sale will positively close on the 1st of March. The store must be vacated on that date without fail. For a few days there will be a special sale of gloves, flowers and veilings—but other bargains will still go on. PERSONAL.

Mr. Lechleft for New York this morning on a business trip.

Mr. H. H. Dewart, Crown Attorney, Toronto, was in town this afternoon.

Rev. S. J. Shorey, of Lindsay, is in town to-day attending the funeral of the late Rev. Mr. Lewis.

Mr. W. J. Edmanson, of the firm of Edmanson, Fates & Co., called on us to-day. He reports the sales of Dr. Chase's pills and ointment increasing rapidly.

Mr. A. B. Lambe, of Toronto, formerly associated with the Electric Works here, has received the appointment of superintendent of the Peterborough and Ashburnham Street Railway. Mr. Lambe's steadiness of character and experience as an electrician, fit him especially well for the efficient discharge of the duties of his new position.

Mr. W. J. Murray, superintendent of agencies for the Mutual Reserve of New York, is in town. He has just returned from a visit to the home office, and, as a result of that visit, has been appointed to the position of general manager of the district comprising Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Cape Breton, with head office at Halifax, N.S. Mr. Murray will, within a short time, leave for his new field of activity in the interests of the Mutual Reserve, with which association he has been connected about four and a half years. During this time Mr. Murray has done excellent work for the company, having written large risks on the leading professional and business citizens of this province, including a large number in the vicinity of Peterborough. The good work he is known to have done, in our opinion amply justifies the company's good judgment in selecting Mr. Murray to operate in a larger and more responsible field. We have no doubt that he will, down by the sea, more than duplicate the work he has done in Ontario. He has not only served the company well in a business sense, but has done so in a manner to win for him a host of personal friends, who, while they rejoice in his promotion, greatly regret the necessary severance of these pleasant friendly relations.

REV. MR. GILMOUR'S LECTURE.

The Catacombs of Rome Forms the Subject of His Instructive Address.

The Murray street Baptist church was crowded to the doors last night with an audience, anxious to hear Rev. Mr. Gilmour, of Brockville, lecture on his trip to the "Catacombs of Rome."

The lecturer proved himself to be the master of a most excellent delivery and his powers of description were exceptionally fine and greatly appreciated. The special points upon which Mr. Gilmour enlarged were the origin of the Catacombs being excavated for purposes of interment by the ancient Romans. Afterwards they were used as places of refuge by the persecuted Christians and at present, the refuse of accumulated ages having been removed, they were objects of curiosity to the sightseers and visitors to Rome, those who wished being conducted through the intricate passages by guides with lighted torches.

At the conclusion of the instructive address a vote of thanks was unanimously and most cordially tendered the speaker for his interesting remarks through motion of Mr. E. A. Stanley and Mr. Wm. Aldridge.

REGARDING "LULU B."

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—In your issue of yesterday "Fairplay" find fault with the decision of the judges in placing Lulu B., Mr. R. J. Hewitt's Brighton mare in third place in the 2.40 trot. In regard to the communication I wish to say that every sporting man on the track could see that Lulu B. only came under the wire through running, while Last Chance trotted the distance honestly. Mr. Joe. Daly did not leave the judge's stand on account of the decision but because he had to catch a train in order to get home that evening.

Yours truly,
RACE GOER.

On Sunday evening a service in memoriam of the late Rev. E. Dewart Lewis will be conducted in the George street Methodist church by Rev. W. R. Young.

C.P.R. Employees.

The annual pic-nic report of the C.P.R. employees has been audited and it shows a most satisfactory credit balance of $500 available for the funds of the C.P.R. sick benefit society and also for the annual pic-nic expenses. It is probable that the annual pic-nic this year will be held in Peterborough, and if it is not, it will not be the fault of the local representatives.

"Ceramic Art."

Mr. D. A. Shaw, a citizen of the town, and here to stay, is now prepared to give instruction in China Painting, and will make a specialty of teaching this branch of art. He painted on China and taught it years ago, and to make himself thoroughly conversant with every feature of the art with a view to teaching it, while in Chicago made a thorough study of it under the best teachers from Dresden, (The Home of the Art of Ceramic Decoration) including Prof. Hans, the recognized highest authority on the subject. Mr. Shaw feels confident that a trial will convince his clients that he can paint on China and other similar materials, and many of the misleading statements that are being so freely propagated with the evident intention of injuring him, will ultimately result in profit to him. Terms moderate, and a kiln for firing at home in connection with Mr. Shaw's studio, a circumstance that reduces the expense (and the danger of breakage by shipment to the city) to a nominal figure. Rooms open to the public for reign to ten days. The public are cordially invited. Corner of Hunter and George streets. Main entrance on George street, side entrance on Hunter street.

THE ADDRESS.

In the Ontario Legislature on Friday, the address in reply to the speech from the Throne was moved by Mr. John Craig, M.P.P., West Wellington, and seconded by Mr. Donald McNish, West Elgin. Special interest attaches to the effort of Mr. Craig because of it being his maiden speech in the House, and because of his being an old Peterborough boy, and a newspaper man. Mr. Craig, in a speech which was well received, referred to the several subjects apparently ripe for legislative action, and to a number of matters touched upon in the speech. Mr. McNish dealt largely with the P.P.A., and commended the position the Patrons assumed to secure beneficial reforms. Mr. Marter, the leader of the Opposition, made his maiden effort in that capacity mildly criticising the government's policy and practice. Sir Oliver made a bright and vigorous contribution to the debate, and Mr. Haycock, leader of the Patrons, spoke well and maintained a judicial balance between the two parties. His speech closed the debate on the address, which was passed.

ASTHMA PREVALENT.

MANY CASES IN PETERBOROUGH

A Noted Physician's Views on the Subject.

Asthma has hitherto baffled the skill of our best physicians. Within a comparatively recent period Dr. R. Schiffman, of St. Paul, Minn., who has devoted many years of study to the treatment of asthma, bronchitis, and croup, has prepared a remedy for these affections which is meeting with great success wherever introduced. With this remedy there is no waiting for results. It is not a nauseating compound to be swallowed, but is used by inhalation, thus reaching the seat of disease direct. Its action is immediate and certain. Acting directly on the mucous membrane of the air passages, it relieves the spasm and constriction instantaneously, facilitates free and easy expectoration, and insures comfortable rest to those otherwise unable to sleep except in a chair. All druggists have this remedy in stock, but in order that every sufferer who has in vain tried every other means of relief may test its efficacy, the doctor's representative will give away a free trial package, solely as an advertisement, to every one who applies to-day or to-morrow, at J. D. Tully's Drug Store, Peterborough, thus convincing the most skeptical. Persons living at a distance who wish to try a free sample package should address Lyman, Knox & Co., Wholesale Agents for Canada, 374 St. Paul Street, Montreal.

A MINISTER'S LIBERALITY ABUSED.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I noticed in yesterday's EXAMINER reference made to an old Scotchman named Thompson, who had been robbed of his money in Toronto, etc. There is evidently something wrong. This same Scotchman called upon me on Wednesday afternoon of this week, and told me quite a different story. He said he had been robbed in Port Hope, that he had walked all the way to Peterborough, that his home was at Keswick, near Lake Simcoe, that he had no money, and was making his way home. He asked from me $2.75, which, he said, would pay his fare. I gave it to him and he appeared quite thankful, and promised to return the money in a few days, as he said he was quite well-to-do, having 275 acres of land. It is quite evident from your article, copied from the Uxbridge Times, that this fellow is a miserable deceiver, going around telling a pitiful tale, and imposing upon Scotch people, and especially Presbyterian ministers. It is to be hoped that soon he may receive his deserts.

After the Grip

No Strength, No Ambition

Hood's Sarsaparilla Gave Perfect Health.

The following letter is from a well-known merchant tailor of St. George, N. B.:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen—I am glad to say that Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills have done me a great deal of good. I had a severe attack of the grip in the winter, and after getting over the fever I did not seem to gather strength, and had no ambition. Hood's Sarsaparilla proved to be just what I needed. The results were very satisfactory, and I recommend this medicine to all who are afflicted with rheumatism or other afflictions caused by poison and poor blood. I always keep Hood's Sarsaparilla in my house and use it when I need a tonic. We also keep Hood's Pills on hand and think highly of them." J. W. DYKEMAN, St. George, New Brunswick.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. Sold by all druggists.

MR. D. A. SHAW'S NEW STUDIO

An Art Home Worthy of the Artist and the Town.

Mr. D. A. Shaw, artist in oils, and teacher of China painting, has removed his studio from Charlotte street to the Cluxton-Cox block, corner George and Hunter streets. He has secured a splendid suite of rooms on the second floor of the western portion of the building. It has the advantage of two entrances—one the general entrance on George street, one door south of Hunter street, and the other—the ladies entrance—on Hunter street, nearly opposite Chambers street. This entrance is through a wide, well-lighted hall, and up a broad easy flight of stairs. A wide hall separates the suite of rooms. On the north side are an ante chamber, reception parlour, and large students' work room. The walls of these rooms, as of the entire suite, are handsomely papered, in neutral tones, beautifully harmonizing. On the other side of the hall are a large airy work room and another large, well-lighted preparing room to be used chiefly for stetching canvasses and other similar mechanical processes. The chief feature of this fine studio is the excellent light. There are in all ten large windows, six in the northern range of rooms, every one of which can be used if required for painting purposes. As a north light is the ideal light for artistic uses, the superiority of the rooms in this respect can be estimated.

The northern range of rooms is beautifully furnished and the walls of all are covered with splendid canvasses bearing testimony to the artistic skill of Mr. Shaw and his pupils.

In the reception parlour is a large display of China painting, exquisitely executed by Mr. Shaw and his pupils. Mr. Shaw, while ranking with the leading Canadian artists in oils, has made a specialty of China painting and ceramic decorative work generally. He has studied under first-class artists in this line from Dresden, which is recognized as the home of the art of ceramic decoration. He will receive pupils in China painting, and from his experienced knowledge of the art, and his cultured artistic temperament, can give the best of satisfaction. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday (as he will also do on Tuesday) Mr. Shaw held an "art at home" to inaugurate his new studio, and he was favoured with the visit of hundreds of our best citizens, who were greatly pleased, not only with the beautiful pictures and ceramic paintings—evidences of Mr. Shaw's artistic skill—but with the beautiful art home he has created for the future prosecution of his artistic work. Mr. Shaw can without exaggeration, boast of having one of the best, if indeed not the best, most commodious and best-lighted studios in the country.

DODD'S PILLS IN NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax Wants a Branch Establishment Located in that City.

Halifax, N. S., Feb. 23.—The announcement that the Dodd's Medicine Co., Ltd., of Toronto, had decided to establish branch houses in each province of the Dominion as distributing points, was received with much satisfaction here, and correspondence has been opened with the head office in Toronto with a view of securing the location of the factory here. The recent remarkable cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills in cases which had been pronounced beyond hope has caused an enormous demand for the specific, and in consequence druggists here frequently run out of supplies. With the location of the branch establishment this annoyance will be avoided, and perhaps several lives saved.

DOES RING RULE RUN THE COUNCIL?

Counollior Sawers Says he Hears it Does.

THE MAYOR ACCUSED.

Councillor Sawers Introduces a Motion Calling for the Report of the Committee on Appointments to be Dealt With, Clause by Clause, but the Councillors Were Not Inclined to Face the Issue—Other Matters Dealt With—A Peculiar Session.

A telegram was received from Councillor Stone, stating his inability to be present on account of having missed the train at Hastings.

The following communications were received:

From J. Hampden Burnham, Honorary Secretary Children's Aid Society, enclosing one from Dr. Barnardo, acceding to a request to be allowed to utilise the Peterborough branch of the Barnardo Home as a temporary shelter for children taken in charge under the provision of the Children's Aid enactment.

Referred to the Charity Committee.

From the Ratepayers Association stating that at at a recent meeting the following resolution was passed: "Whereas the value of immovable property largely depends upon the deniclty of the population residing thereon or adjacent thereto, and and whereas it is desirable in the interests of the ratepayers of Peterborough that its population should be increased, and whereas such increase can only be brought about by its becoming more and more a manufacturing centre:—Be it therefore resolved that to this end the town council be respectfully requested to pass a bylaw providing for the exemption from taxation of all machinery, patterns and plants used for manufacturing purposes, such exemptions to be to the largest extent and for the largest period authorised by the Act.

Referred to a committee of the whole council.

THE LICENSE COMMITTEE

recommended that David Evans be given a refund of $5 on his buther's license, on his giving back the license. In reference to the complaint of the carters, it is the opinion of this committee that the licensed carters of the town should be protected against infringements on their rights by persons who do not conform to the bylaw, and we recommend that the police be instructed to take proceedings against persons so anfringing when complained of.

Councillors Sproule and Dawson moved the adoption of the report which was carried.

THE MARKET COMMITTEE

recommended that it be authorized to sell the market tolls for the year, commencing April 1st, by auction, and to take such action as may be necessary to carry out the sale.

2. The committee recognizing that if any changes were to be made in the tolls and weighing charges they should be made at once. They considered the matter of the tolls and charges with reference to the recommendations received from the County Council. They carefully considered the matter and after comparing the charges with those of a number of other towns and cities they found that the charges on the local market are on the average as low if not lower than on other markets and are fair and reasonable and the committee recommended that no change be made.

Councillors Denne and Sproule moved the adoption of the report.

Councillor Cahill advised that a small concession be made the farmers by reducing the toll on hay or straw. He wished to make no amendment, but thought it would be a good thing all round to give way in this particular matter.

The report was adopted.

THE FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT

Committee reported having ordered a pair of sleighs for drawing the hose and recommended that the old sleighs be sold.

The adoption of the report was moved by Councillors Brady and Dawson.

Carried.

THE PRINTING COMMITTEE

reported that they were unable to recommend a grant to F. Smily for advertising the Midland District lakes in his tourists' guide.

Councillors Mills and Denne moved the adoption of the report.—Carried.

At a meeting of the COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

on Saturday last, at which Messrs. Riddell and Morrison, of South Monaghan, addressed the committee in regard to the proposed bridge across the Otonabee, near the site of the old Ross's bridge, the committee recommended that the council give its assistance in pressing upon the Government the desirabily of prompt and substantial aid towards its construction. Pecuniary aid was also recommended if necessary.

The report was carried, on motion of Councillors Best and Phelan.

Councillor Denne stated that Mr. Morrison had seen him during the week and stated that the estimates of the bridge were now ready, and South Monaghan proposed sending a delegation to Ottawa immediately before the general election, in order to get a pledge if possible in reference to the matter.

Councillor Phelan, Cahill and Best briefly bore testimony as to the benefit the bridge would be to the town.

The report was then put and carried.

THE CHARITY COMMITTEE reported having decided to purchase what wood was required from Peter Hamilton at the following rates: Dry cedar, $1.50 per cord; dry hemlock and black ash, $2.25 per cord; dry tamarac, $2.50 per cord; dry hardwood, $3.75 per cord and green tamarac $2.25 per cord.

The report was carried on motion of Messrs. Sawers and Brady.

"Any more reports?" called out the Mayor.

There was no answer.

Once more he called for reports and a surprised hum rose from the gallery, when there was still no response, as it was understood that the much commented upon report of the Committee on Appointments was to come up for decision.

Councillor Mills asked the Mayor

ON WHAT AUTHORITY

he had summoned the council together and for what specific purpose.

The Mayor drew from his pocket a document signed by Councillors Stone, Sproule, Clinkscale, Best, Phelan, Sawers and Denne. It petitioned the Mayor to call a meeting of the council for the purpose of disposing of the report of the Committee on Appointments.

"Well," remarked Mr. Mills, "the gentleman who was instrumental in having this meeting called and who is chairman of the committee has evidently flunked."

Mr. Mills was very anxious to have the question come up for discussion.

Mr. Sawers wanted to see Mr. Stone in his seat where he "would have to show his colours like a little man."

Councillors Mills and Mason then moved that

THE CLERK READ THE REPORT of the Committee on Appointments.

Carried.

The Committee on Appointments, through the clerk, then reported having considered the last four clauses of their report of Feb. 4th and recommended that the following offices be declared vacant on March 1st, 1895:—Police force, Medical Health Officer, Town Solicitor, Street and Bridge Inspector and Charity Relief Officer.

Councillors Sawers and Clinkscale moved that the report be taken up clause by clause.

In speaking to his motion Mr. Sawers stated that he had heard the Mayor was placed in whose interests he worked; he would, therefore, like to have the names voted on separately in order that the people might see just where the Mayor stood on these appointments.

IN THE COUNCIL BY A RING

Councillors Sproule and Denne moved in amendment that the report be referred back to the committee, in order as Mr. Sproule expressed it, to give the worthy chairman a chance of being in his seat and voting on the question.

The Mayor did not see the use in referring the report back. It had been referred back already.

Councillor Sproule suggestively remarked that at the last meeting when the Mayor thought that the report was about to be carried, he

WAS ONLY TOO WILLING

to see it referred back, but now, when the majority was apparently against the report, the Mayor was all anxiety to force the issue.

The Mayor lost his temper completely, and springing to his feet hammered the desk unmercifully with the gavel. Councillor Sproule was promptly called to order for his assumption in making such unvarnished statements to His Worship, to whom they were the more unpalatable, as the audience enthusiastically cheered the councillor who had the temerity

To beard the lion in his den,
The Douglas in his hall,

and call the Mayor down.

His Worship insisted that Councillor Sproule stick to the question and punctuated his remarks by imperative raps of the gavel.

Messrs. Mills and Brady moved in amendment to the amendment that the report be thrown out.

Councillor Mills remarked that it was an unmanly and unprecedented recommendation. Some might say that the offices were not hereditary and that the incumbents should not expect to hold them forever, yet he held that they should hold them as long as no fault could be found with the'r work. All knew just whom viz., the Chief of Police and the Town Solicitor, therefore it was not fair to the other officials to include their names in the report. Not a councillor could point out where money could be saved by the change.

THE COMMITTEE WERE AFTER—

Councillor Dawson called for Mr. Sproule's reason for being so determined to make a change. He understood that a certain ring or clique had been put into the council, pledged to carry out certain legislation.

Councillor Sproule answered Mr. Mills first and stated that it was a most deliberate untruth to state that he was after the chief and solicitor. The police force was too large and too expensive to maintain in its present shape. Any councillor accusing him of being put forward by a clique or ring was guilty of telling a falsehood.

The question was now called. Mr. Mills' amendment was lost, as was Mr. Sproule's. The motion was then put of taking up the report, clause by clause, and was lost on the following division.

Yeas: Councillors Sproule, Denne, Clinkscale and Sawers—4.

Nays: Cahill, Best, Mills, Phelan, Dawson, Mason, Brady and the Mayor—8.

RESOLUTIONS.

On motion of Messrs. Sawers and Sproule, the services of the Relief Officer will be dispensed with on March 1st, Mr. Sawers undertaking the duties. In consequence of the motion Councillor Brady said he would resign from the committee, as he was averse to having the chairman assume sole control.

Councillor Mills read a bylaw which he proposed introducing for the formation of a board of police commissioners. The Mayor, County Judge and Police Magistrate were named as the personnel of the board.

The old councillors promptly sat upon Mr. Mills and asked him who authorised him to introduce a by-law in such an irregular manner. Mr. Mills, however, had a precedent to go by as at the last meeting Councillor Sproule introduced a by-law for the reduction of the auctioneers licenses without giving as much notice.

A deputation consisting of Councillors Phelan, Brady, Cahill and Mills was appointed to go to Ottawa with a deputation from South Monaghan to press for pecuniary aid towards the erection of the proposed bridge.

The council then adjourned.

ON A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—Mayor Kendry's action last night in calling Councillor Sproule to order for speaking some unpalatable, but wholesome truth, which somewhat reflected on the Mayor, leads me to claim the floor for a brief space of time, during which I wish to ask a few questions for my own personal enlightenment.

In the first place I would like to know whether the Mayor has two votes in council? Can he, by his voice make a tie vote, and by voting again carry or defeat a motion as he sees fit. And does his prerogative extend so far as to allow him to vote at all unless there is a tie to be broken?

Secondly, I would like to know what the rules of order say about the business which is to be transacted at a special meeting called for a specific object. If my memory serves me aright no business can be taken up except that for which the meeting is called to consider, unless the council signifies its willingness so to do. No such vote was called for last evening, and I would like to be informed if the business transacted was legal or not?

Yours,
INQUIRER.

IN THE METROPOLIS.

CITIZENS OF NEW YORK MAKING PLANS FOR THE FUTURE.

Improvements on a Gigantic Scale Projected—Hundreds of Millions of Dollars to Be Spent In Beautifying the Chief City of the Continent.

Much has been said from time to time of the absence of public spirit, of local pride and of neighborhood feeling in New York. Even the men who have made great fortunes here do not seem to have any regard for the city that has given them their opportunities for achieving wealth. "Men do not understand the causes of their success," said a speaker of the board of trade recently in commenting upon the difficulty in arousing public interest here in the movement for the improvement of the Erie canal, on which so much of the prosperity of the city depends. The lack of public spirit was signally illustrated in the half hearted way in which the business men entered into the movement to secure the World's fair for New York. Chicago was a blaze of enthusiasm on the subject, but New York entered into the competition in a listless, don't care sort of way, which naturally resulted in Chicago carrying off the prize.

The fact is that New York is a city of markets, of ships, of shops, of hotels and of tenement houses, but not of homes. The rich men may have mansions here, but their homes are in their country houses. The people who live in flats and tenement houses are engaged in a struggle for a bare existence, and have not the time or disposition to give much thought or care for the city. The diversity of races and languages represented in the population serves only to separate the people more and make them regard the city with utter indifference.

But there is reason for believing that this state of things is gradually growing better. There are evidences of increased public spirit, of a greater pride in the city and of a larger interest in her development and improvement. Great schemes of public improvement have been projected or begun. Millions have recently been expended in the acquisition of new parks, and twice lately when it was proposed to do something that would injure Central park there was an exhibition of aroused public opinion that prevented the outrages and would have done credit to a much smaller bnt more enthusiastic city.

Rich men are now contributing a liberal portion of their wealth to enterprises that will increase the glory of the metropolis. Columbia college is being rapidly developed into a great university. A magnificent cathedral has been started. A spacious botanical garden is to be established. A fine aquarium is to take the place of Castle Garden on the Battery. A splendid speedway for horses is to be built. The city is to erect an immense municipal building, which it is proposed shall be a notable architectural addition to the metropolis. The present city hall is to be given to the trustees of the Tilden trust and made the home of a $2,000,000 library.

The art and natural history museums are being rapidly developed and will soon take rank among the best in the world. Monuments and statues are being multiplied, and eight years after his death the $500,000 tomb of General Grant is approaching completion.

But in other and perhaps more interesting ways is the revival of public spirit in New York being manifested. Business men are showing an increased interest in the good government of the city and in its improvement in little things as well as great. Other cities might indeed copy with advantage some of the methods of the organizations that have been formed here for the public weal.

The City Improvement society has been formed and has started out to investigate the various complaints of citizens and to secure, if possible, better pavements, better street cleaning and smaller improvements in parks, bridges and streets of the city. Lately a municipal art society has been organized by leading artists, architects and others, with a view of making the city more beautiful. They seek to improve the architecture of the public buildings, to secure artistic decoration within them and to prevent the erection of inferior statues and other inartistic structures. Another society is engaged in marking with bronze tablets the places of historical interest. Others of a more philanthropical nature are endeavoring to better the lives and condition of the tenement house population.

The women have organized a health protective association, and are endeavoring to institute reforms that shall decrease the death rate and make New York a better city to live in. The latest reform which they have taken up is that of securing a health regulation requiring the removal of the refuse of the 60,000 horses in the city of New York. The physicians comprising the Academy of Medicine have lately been acting with vigor and courage to secure improved quarantine protection and a purified water supply. The chamber of commerce and the board of trade—the mouthpieces of the merchants and bankers—have lately exhibited increased activity and exercised a wider influence. All these things certainly indicate that New Yorkers are beginning to wake up and to show a livelier interest in the welfare of the city.

Perhaps the fact that other cities are getting closer to her in the competition for business has something to do with this. It is beginning to dawn upon her citizens that unless she can unite with Brooklyn, bridge and tunnel the North river, throw more bridges over the East river, get rapid transit from city hall to Westchester county and institute other measures of public improvement, she is liable to lose her commercial supremacy. —New York Cor. Baltimore Sun.

Many of the South Sea islanders believe that paradise can be inherited only by persons of perfect physical forms. Where this belief prevails a man will die rather than submit to amputation.

A New Theory of Sleep.

Some discussion has been going on concerning Herr Rosenbaum's recently proposed theory of sleep—namely, that the anæmic condition of the brain is due to an excess of water in the brain cells of that body. The supposition, as stated, is that sleep is essentially a matter of nervous action, and the direct cause is thought to be fatigue of the nerve cells which communicate with the heart and bring about some change in the circulation. The nerve cells are thus supposed to be full of water when sleep comes on, and this water during sleep passes into the venous blood as waste, and the nerve cells then receive nourishment from fresh arterial blood. Then when the process is entirely over the sleeper awakes.

According to this theory, sleep is not solely healthy because it rests the body and brain, but also because it invigorates them. It is also to be inferred from Rosenbaum's theory that the nerve cells and brains of infants who sleep so much must contain more water than is to be found in those of adults, and that the effectiveness of brain cells is in inverse ratio to the water contents.—New York Tribune.

Dairy Suggestions.

Always treat the calf kindly. Many sicking, ugly cows have been made by abusing the calf.

Experiments have shown that potatoes make poor butter. They make a white butter deficient in grain.

Churn promptly when the cream is ready for churning. Every moment it stands after that is a detriment.

There is no better hay for the milch cow than oats cut and cured when the seed is in the milk state.

The man who has calves to carry through the winter should have bran and ground or crushed oats on which to feed them.

An exchange says that if a cow gets choked with an apple or potato, holding up its head and breaking an egg in its mouth is a sure cure. The same remedy is recommended for horses under simular circumstances.

Adam's Staff.

The Talmudic writers tell us that "the blessed God gave to the first man in paradise a staff which had been created between the stars. Adam gave it to Enoch, Enoch to Noah, Noah to Shem, Shem to Abraham, Abraham to Isaac, Isaac to Jacob. Jacob carried it into Egypt and gave it to his son Joseph. When Joseph died his household goods were taken to the house of Pharaoh. Pharaoh took the staff of Adam, which had descended to Joseph from the first man, and put it among his special treasures."—St. Louis Republic.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble; and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, 'be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

ONE CURE FOR INSOMNIA.

A Man From New York State Took a Little Active Exercise on Horseback.

"I once was a sufferer from insomnia," said a dentist who lives in one of the small villages of the state, as he sat talking with other men in the sitting room of an up town hotel, "but I got rid of the trouble."

"What did you take for it?"

"Bucking pony."

"Tell us about that, please."

"Well, you see, there was nothing the matter with me only I couldn't sleep. The doctor looked me over and said I wasn't suffering from any disease that he could detect, but all the same I could get only a few catnaps every night, and I felt that I would go crazy if such a condition of affairs continued much longer. A wise friend of mine advised me to try horseback exercise. Just at that time a man had brought to the village a string of ponies from the west. As the ponies were wild they were offered for sale cheap. I bought one. He was such a sleepy looking animal that we called him Rip Van Winkle. After we knew him better we dropped part of the name and called him plain Rip. The first ride I took on him furnished excitement for the whole village. Two men helped me to saddle and mount him in the stable. When the door was opened he shot out into the street like a streak of lightning.

"He ran full against the fence opposite the stable and broke several pickets. Then he reared up on his hind legs and came near throwing me over backward. Next he tried to stand on his head, but I yanked him back on his feet and drove the spurs into him. He started to run then, and I let him go as fast as he could leg it until we got to the Methodist church at the end of the street. A temperance meeting was being held in the church and the door was open. Before I could stop the pony we were in the church and half way up the aisle. Women screamed and fainted.

"Some of the men led Rip back into the street. I didn't dare to get off his back. When the men let go of the bridle he began to buck, and for a few minutes I thought my neck would be broken. He would go at a gallop when he went at all, but he would stop now and then to indulge in some bucking. Presently he changed his tactics and went from one street to another, across lots, jumping fences, turning up flower beds, damaging gardens and keeping me busy dodging the branches of fruit trees. The next street led to a turnpike, along which I spurred him for miles until he was covered with foam and nearly tired out.

"He seemed to be docile when I got him back to the stable. Next day, however, he was nearly as bad as when I first rode him, and every day for a fortnight I was obliged to race him along the turnpike several miles. My! my! How he did buck! I was so lame at the end of two weeks that I could scarcely walk to my office, but I could sleep. A few minutes after I got into bed at night I was sleeping soundly, and I awoke every morning thoroughly refreshed."

"Do you still ride the pony?"

"No. By the time I was cured of sleeplessness I had broken Rip to ride, and I sold him for double the sum I had paid for him. My advice to anybody who is suffering from insomnia is to get a bucking pony and ride as fast as he can. If no necks are broken, both man and pony will be benefited by the treatment."—New York Tribune.

To Remove Substances From the Eye.

To remove the solid particles from under the lids, it is sufficient to pull the lid away from the eye and to wipe the body with a piece of moist paper or the corner of a handkerchief. If it is under the upper lid, grasp the lid firmly between the thumb and finger, lift it from the eyeball and draw it down over the lower lid, and then allow it to slide slowly back to its natural position. The foreign body will be scraped off on the lashes.

The operation may be repeated several times. Or lift the lid from the eyeball, allow the tears to accumulate beneath the lid and forcibly blow the nose. Or place in the eye a few grains of flaxseed, which, forming a mucilage, will promptly bring relief. Or place across the upper lid the point of a pencil or bodkin, and turn the lid back over it. In this way the foreign particle is brought into distinct view and can be readily wiped away.—Washington Star.

Astounding Memories.

Horace Vernet is the best example of visual memory. He could paint a striking portrait of a man, life size, after having once looked at his model. Mozart had a great musical memory. Having heard twice the "Miserere" in the Sistine chapel, he wrote down the full score of it. There are soloists who during 24 hours can play the composition of other masters without ever skipping a note.—M. Binet in Revue des Deux Mondes.

Streets Versus Presidents.

A little Buffalo miss, when asked by her schoolteacher to name the presidents of the United States in order, began glibly, "Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Adams, Watson, Emalie"—Here she was checked by the teacher, who remarked that she seemed more familiar with the streets of her native city than with the presidents of her country.—New York Times.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you it it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or ou what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's oldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

A BATTLE STRANGELY WON.

An Army Put to Flight by One Man and With the Loss of Only One.

It was probably one of the most remarkable battles that was ever fought. The advance had been well planned by the attacking force, the idea being to surprise the enemy at the dead of night. Every detail had been carefully considered. The advance would be hidden by a wood, and the first the enemy would know of it would be when the troops swept out of the wood and carried the camp by storm. There were apparently no pickets in the wood, and there seemed to be no possibility of a failure.

The colonel in command was gloating over his expected victory, when one of his officers called his attention to a bright light some distance to the left of the advancing column.

"What is it?" asked the colonel anxiously.

"I don't know," replied the officer. "It flashed up there only a minute ago."

"Well, if any one suspected we were here he wouldn't go along swinging a lantern to make a target of himself," asserted the colonel.

The column had barely begun to move again when a light appeared on the right and a little to the rear of the one that had just disappeared. Another halt was made, and the colonel was tempted to order a volley in the direction of the light, but of course that would betray the exact whereabouts of the column and would be almost suicidal.

"We are being surrounded!" exclaimed one of the officers excitedly.

Then a light appeared in the shrubbery immediately ahead of the retreating column. The first man yelled "Rifle pit!" and cleared the whole thing at one bound. The second man was not so fortunate. He stumbled and fell, and as he fell he instinctively made a reach for the light. He was the only man killed, but his death completed the panic. Ranks were broken, and the retreat became a wild race to get out of the wood.

And the lights seemed to dance here and there, appearing at the most unexpected points and adding to the confusion.

When the excitement was at its height, a man climbed out of a pit some distance in the rear of the retreating force. He stretched himself and peered after the fleeing soldiers.

"Hanged if I wasn't cramped in that hole," he said. "I suppose I might as well turn a cannon or two loose just to wake the boys up and scare those foot racers a little more."

He lay down on the ground at the edge of the pit, reached his hand down to some keys on a sort of switchboard, and in an instant cannon boomed out. Then he raised himself to a sitting posture, lit a pipe and chuckled to himself.

Two or three men rushed up and breathlessly inquired what the trouble was.

"Oh, I had a little brush with the enemy," replied the man with the pipe calmly. "They tried to surprise the camp."

"And you beat them?"

"Why, they're running yet."

Quite a crowd from the camp had gathered by this time, and one of them cried, "Three cheers for the electrician!" but the man with the pipe raised his hand to stop them.

"The credit is not all mine," he said. "Remember my able force of linemen who ran wires through this wood and made it possible for me to win this victory."

Just then some of the men who had gone into the wood after the retreating enemy returned with the news that one man had been killed.

"What!" cried the electrician, jumping up. He hurried to the place where the body lay.

"Too bad! Too bad!" he said regretfully, "but then accidents will happen, even in a battle. He had no business to catch hold of a live wire."

"Oh, well, there's no use feeling bad about it," put in one of the officers. "A victory has been won, and only one life has been lost."

"But why have one lost?" asked the electrician. "Of course it was tiresome work in that pit, and when I got them on the retreat I was glad of it, but I never supposed any one was going to grab hold of the light. It's too bad!"

And the man who had won the victory could not be consoled.—Chicago Tribune.

The Goliath of Big Basin.

In Big Basin, Santa Cruz county, Cal., there are thousands of giant redwoods that will measure from 10 to 23 feet in diameter. But the Titan of them all is a giant known far and near as "the Goliath of Big Basin." This monstrous vegetable growth is 26 feet in diameter at the ground and is perfectly solid, a fact noted as a rarity in these colossi of the forest. Goliath is a fraction over 200 feet in height, the lower 100 feet of the trunk being free from branches or unsightly excrescences. Experienced woodmen declare that the tree would weigh more than 100,000 tons and that it would "cut" 1,500,000 feet of clear board measure lumber, besides 100 cords of wood that could be gotten out of the limbs and waste.—St. Louis Republic.

The only blood-purifier admitted on exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair was Ayer's Sarsaparilla, all others being excluded as secret preparations and patent medicines. With doctors and pharmacists, it has always been considered a standard remedy.

"I was troubled a long time with sick headache. SONS OF CANADA SCORE A GREAT SUCCESS.

A Large Attendance of Spectators—A Brilliant Array of Masquers—Many Fine Costumes—The Prize Winners—Record of Special Events.

The last carnival of the season, held under the Sons of Canada auspices, took place last night at the skating rink, and is pronounced one of the most brilliant and successful events of the kind ever given in the town. The attendance of spectators was unusually large, and the costumes were numerous and of especially excellent quality. There were, of course, a few which did not amount to much, but there were many of much excellence, while nearly all were better than the average. The management, who are to be congratulated upon the success of last night's brilliant entertainment, did well to insist on excluding costumes not up to a required standard. The result was excellent.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

The judges were Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Bamford, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Elliott, and Dr. and Miss Brennan. Though they had a cosy fur-lined bower to occupy, nevertheless they occupied an uncomfortable position. The number of excellent costumes that came under their judicial jurisdiction was so great that the matter of decision was a difficult one. Still there was no permanent disagreement of the jury, and the verdict given seemed to be generally accordant with the opinion of the spectators. The following is a list of the winners. The characters they represented can be seen by reference to the list of costumers:

Best dressed lady (fancy costume)—1st, Miss Ackerman; 2nd, Miss Vina Harper.

Best dressed lady (comic costume)—1st, Miss Fox; 2nd, Miss B. McAuliffe.

Best dressed gentleman fancy costume)—1st, Percy Owens; 2nd, A. C. Thompson.

Best dressed gentleman (comic costume)—1st, Fred Logan; 2nd, O. LaPlante.

Best dressed girl (fancy costume)—1st Miss Lulu Fox; 2nd, Miss Gertie Guy.

Best dressed girl (comic costume—1st, Miss Maud Hay; 2nd

Best dressed boy (fancy costume)—1st Alfred Cox, 2nd, G. W. Hall.

Best dressed boy (comic costume)—1st, N. F. Lewis; 2nd, Clayton Stapleton.

THE RACES

were a series of exciting events generally well contested. The dog race, however, was of a farcical character, very much on the model of a council meeting, which was taking place at the same time. This is the result:—

Partner's race (2 entries, Scott Laing and Miss Isa Cook, O. LePlant and Miss Gertie Guy)—1st, O. LePlante and Miss Gertie Guy.

Mile race (for amateur championship of Ontario, 6 entries, Walter Jackson, A. G. Pilkie, J. Levasseur, S. Ridpath (Lakefield), T. Brady (Lindsay), and E. H. Bell—1st A. G. Pilkie, 2nd H. H. Bell.

Dog race—1st J. Moore's "Captain."

Boys' race (half mile, 5 entries, G. Galvin, H. King, S. Ridpath (Lakefield), Lorne McWilliams and Harry Owens)—1st S. Ridpath, 2nd L. McWilliams.

MRS. MONAHAN'S DAMAGES.

The G. T. R. Recognizes Her Claim for Her Husband's Death.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—The G.T.R. signified its willingness to recognize the claim of Mrs. Monahan, of 93 Breadalbane street, for damages on account of the death of her husband, J. S. Monahan, who was fatally injured in the accident near Weston.

B. B. Osler, Q. C., and W. J. Wallace are acting for Mrs. Monahan, and it is said that the Grand Trunk people, in response to a legal letter, intimated their desire to give the widow a fair settlement. The amount of the claim is not yet fixed, although $20,000 has been named. It will be calculated on an acturial basis. The expectancy of life of the deceased, the probable duration of life of the widow, the time that will elapse before the children can support themselves and other matters are all to be considered before any formal claim is presented. It it a certainty that there will be no suits in connection with the accident.

As to the late Frank Joseph's case, there is no person to sue or make any valid claim as he left no father, mother, widow or children, and those are the only relatives who can claim damages under the Act when a person is killed on a railway.

Mr. Monahan had about $2,000 a year from his business of court reporting and besides received $30,000 or $40,000 from his father's estate in Ireland in the last fifteen years. He was too liberal-hearted, however, to save much. He lost a good deal, it is said, through advances to friends, and the estate he left is rather small.

Ever since the accident the remark has been common in legal circles that the accident was a "bad thing for the railways." That was on account of the judges and prominent legal men aboard. The accident gave them too vivid an idea of the terrors of a railway disaster.

The Inquest at Weston.

WESTON, Feb. 23.—Yesterdy the adjourned inquest to ascertain what killed Frank Joseph in the recent disaster in Wardlaw's Cut was opened by Coroner Charlton in the town hall. There was a large crowd of people present anxious to hear the testimony of the witnesses. County Crown Attorney Dewart attended to look after the interests of the Crown, while several officials represented the G. T. R.

of all diseases arise from deranged Kidneys and Liver, and it strikes at once at the root of the difficulty. The elements of which it is compposed act directly upon these great organs, both as a food and restorer, and, by placing them in a healthy condition, drive disease and pain from the system.

The Egyptian Question at an Acute Stage—Great Britain Will Act Firmly—Fierce Fighting In East Africa—Germany's Navy to be Increased.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The phenomenally cold weather which has been prevailing in Great Britain seems to have finally broken up. The mercury now stands at about the freezing point in most parts of the country. Traffic on the Thames which, has been at a standstill owing to the great quantities of floating ice is being, gradually resumed.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—The Bordeaux Chamber of Commerce has petitioned the Government to place Canadian petroleum under the minimum tariff so as to enable it to compete with the Russian and United States oils.

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—The budget committee of the Reichstag voted the appropriations for four new armored cruisers. In the discussion of these appropriations vice admiral Hollman, secretary of the admiralty, and Frei Herr Marschall, secretary of the Foreign affairs, have represented the Government. Marschall spoke at length as to the political aspect of the proposal. He mentioned the frequency of the complaint that German subjects abroad, most notably in Central and South American States, did not receive adequate protection from the home Government. If there was any justice in such complaint, he said, it will be because the German navy was too small to meet the demands of the vast numbers of Germans who had settled in the civilized countries. The addition which the Government proposed to build could be used to guard German interests in colonial lands and to heighten the respect of foreign governments for the German name. Without doubt Germany should have warships on both the east and west coasts of South America. A cruiser must remain at Delagoa Bay. A dozen other places might be mentioned as requiring the presence of a German naval force.

A Cape Town mail received at Plymouth fears a panic prevails at Lorenzo east Africa, in consequence of a disaster to the Portuguese force. Kaffirs entered the Portuguese camp at Dawn, pretending that they were friends. Most of the soldiers were sleeping. Many of them were suffering from fever. The Kaffirs began killing them with assegais. Lieut. Manuel, while helping a fellow officer was stabbed in the back. Eventually the troops were got out, were formed in a hollow square and with the aid of the guns they repulsed the natives, killing 500. It is reported that 200 of the Portuguese and their allies were killed and sixty wounded. A later despatch says: The fight took place at Maraqueen on February 2. Another account says that the Portugnes admit that 9 whites and 20 Angolas were killed and many wounded. According to this report only 150 Kaffirs were killed. The situation is serious. The Transvaal artillery have been ordered to be ready to proceed to the frontier.

Geo. W. Smalley cables from London: The last week has witnessed another outburst of Anglophobism in Paris respecting the British occupation of Egypt. For the last three weeks French influence in Cairo has been vehemently worked to induce the Khedive to dismiss Nubar Pasha and his co-ministers. The old reason is alleged that Nubar's government is too complaisant toward British control, and this is the more remarkable because Fakhry and Mazloun Pachas were thrust upon Nubar by the Khedive because of their supposed anti-British sympathies. A further acquaintance on their part with "The brutal Lord Cromer," as he is called, and with the advantages of British rule and of the undoubted approval by the Fellaheen of the British administration have modified the hatred these gentlemen were once supposed to entertain toward Great Britain.

The Khedive's miserable tactics of inspiring a local newspaper to distort what passed between him and Lord Cromer at their last interview illustrates how completely his highness reflects the littleness of mind by which he is inspired by the French coterie that surrounds him. While these latter have been putting pressure on the Khedive at Cairo, the Paris newspapers have been spitting the usual venom against England and Nubar. At length the Times in an apparently inspired article, warned all and sundry that the arrogant and foolish boy was exhausting British patience, and if he did not act with greate prudence he might find himself shipped out of Egypt after his grandfather. Even the National Gazette and the Cologne Gazette have lately complained of French methods of fomenting trouble in Egypt, and the Austian press, which is understood to be largely read by the Khedive, who was educated in Vienna, warns his highness that Europe approves of England strengthening her position in Egypt and is prepared to suppress any attempt at abolishing the existing order of things.

The truth is that this agitation is largely the work of the Paris newspapers, whose real character has just been illustrated by the blackmailing trials, and who were so cleverly belittled in Lord Dufferin's cheerful speech last night. Everybody, French or German, who holds any interests in Egypt is quite aware that the British occupation has been a blessing to the country. France is running about with a beam in her eye in the shape of the Bardo treaty respecting Tunis. When she has pulled that out she will be in fit condition to search and see if England is afflicted with an Egyptian note.

The news from Cairo indicates that Lord Cromer is acting with his usual vigor. Though Saturday was an official holiday, he induced the Khedive to create a special tribunal for dealing with the rowdies who might contemplate attacking English soldiers and sailors during Ramadan, and he has also defeated the dilatory tactics of the legislative council by summoning them back to discuss certain reforms of administration which they had sought to avoid by their recent sudden adjournment.

Harold Frederic cables: It has been decided, I am given to understand, to cease fooling in Egypt and to give the young Khedive the peremptory alternative of submitting in all things to English control or getting out. His successor designate, Prince Halim, stands ready at hand, and on the slightest further provocation he will be put on the throne, while Abbas Pasha is conducted to Alexandra and led on board a ship between a file of soldiers. Meanwhile the machinery for a state of martial law has been created in the form of a new tribunal, with summary jurisdiction over cases of affront or violence offered to English soldiers, sailors, marines and other officials, and the mutinous native legislative council, which thought to disable the Government by adjourning till April, has been sharply ordered to return to Cairo and resume its session at once in order to pass measures suggested to it by the English authorities. Considerable confidence is felt that these virile exhibitions will suffice to scare Abbas Pasha and his advisers into docility. If they fail England will take the bull by the horns and declare a protectorate and France will be told to take whatever course she pleases.

That France would proceed to extremes no one believes seriously on either side of the channel. Her title to interfere was practically abdicated in 1889. Her privilege to be disagreeable has been exercised with great freedom for a dozen years and the English are tied of it. No doubt there will be prodigious roaring and lashing of tails on the boulevards, and very likely, a majority will be found in the Chamber of Deputies for rash preliminaries to adventure, but the French foreign office knows far too well what kind of a nut to crack England is, and also what vast domestic perils would encompass any real disturbance of the republic's international relations.

EXTENSIVE LITIGATION.

An Ohio Man Sues For Immense Damages—An Interesting Case.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Edward M. McGillin, of Youngstown, Ohio, has begun two actions in the court of common pleas against John C. Laflin, Edward E. Eames, Daniel Robinson, Horace J. Fairchild and Dexter L. Force, who comprised the firm of H. B. Claflin & Co., before it became a corporation. One action is for $500,000 and the other for $258,000. The plaintiff, who is a well-known western drygoods dealer, states that in 1888 he was in the drygoods business in Cleveland, and was also interested in cattle ranches. He says that prior to Sept. 1888 he was making $60,000 a year from his business in Cleveland. He alleges that the defendants got him to sell his stores in Cleveland to H. P. Wasson and George N. Fischer, who he has since learned were "dummies," and agree to manage for the defendants their interests in the American cattle trust, the profits to be divided evenly. McGillin alleges that on January 1, 1889, the defendants repudiated their agreement. He charges that it was all a scheme to drive him out of business. Mr. McGillin says that after September 1, 1888, a million dollars could have been made out of the cattle trust stock. Of this $50,000 would have been his share, and he sues for that. The suit for $258,000 is based on credits due him on the books of Claflin & Co., on his ranch, which he turned into the trust and on a bond transaction.

Out of the bond transaction grows a third action, brought by Mary B. O'Neil, sister of McGillin, to recover $14,000. The defendants say in their answer that McGillin was only a partner in the stores in Cleveland and that he used the money of the concern in various ranches and cattle enterprises and brought the dry goods business to the verge of failure. The defendants alleges that he asked them to take the stores for the amount due them, he agreeing to give them a bill of sale to avoid future litigation.

Fighting on the West Coast.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—It is reported that there has been severe fighting between the British naval force and the natives at Brass Guinea, West Coast of Africa. A sailor who was on the warship St. George telegraphed to his wife in Plymouth, England: "Big fight at Brass on Saturday. We are all right." No details have been received, but it is known that the cruiser Barrosa and the gunboats Widgeon and Thrush with the St. George, the flagship of the West African station, were near the Niger's mouth at the end of the week. It is reported at Plymouth that Sir Claude Macdonald, British agent in the Niger region, and the officer commanding the British warship were wounded severely. The natives, it is said, were put to flight after suffering severe losses.

Julius D'Estimauville Clermont writes from Montreal: "I was suffering from skin disease, and after all drugs failed tried Burdock Blood Bitters, of which 3 bottles restored me to good health. I recommend it also for dyspepsia."

A TERRIBLE CHARGE

Against a Thirteen-Year-Old South Grimsby Girl.

IS SHE GUILTY OF MURDER?

Accused of Poisoning an Infant Left in Her Charge—She Denies the Accusation, but Offers a Weak Explanation — She is Now Under Arrest.

ST. CATHARINES, Feb. 25.—South Grimsby has a real live sensation in the shape of an alleged murder case, the alleged murderer being a 13-year-old girl named Lulu Lacey, who lived with the family of Mr. Pierson, of South Grimsby. The girl was brought to the jail here about 11 o'clock Saturday night by Constable Clarke and will have to stand her trial for the alleged crime.

The victim is an 18 month old child of Mr. Pierson. Lulu Lacey was employed at the Pierson home to do light housework and mind the baby. Saturday Mrs. Pierson went to the barn to do the milking and left the baby and Lulu alone. When she returned to the house the baby was found to be suffering greatly and a doctor was at once sent for. The child, however, shortly afterwards died from the effects of supposed poisoning and suspicion at once rested upon the hired girl and she was placed under arrest.

It seems that there was a bottle of medicine in the house, which was procured by one of the brothers of the dead baby for some illness. The medicine contained strychnine, not sufficient to kill a baby. The girl, on being questioned, stated that the baby asked her for the bottle and she would not give it to him. The baby then by some means secured possession of the bottle and emptied a portion of its contents into his mouth. This story was not believed by the parents and Lulu was arrested on a charge of murder. She was taken before Magistrate Forbes and remanded for a week, when the circumstances connected with the case will be fully investigated.

A post-mortem examination on the dead body of the baby was held. These are the facts so far obtained, but as yet there is nothing definite about the case. The suspicions of the family may be groundless and a satisfactory explanation may be given in time. Lulu Lacey, the prisoner, denies being guilty of the terrible charge and maintains great calmness and unconcern, even in the face of the odds that appear against her.

IN LEGISLATIVE HALLS.

Quiet Day at the Buildings—Coming Legislation.

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—There was a caucus of the fourth party in the legislature on Saturday morning. Peter McCallum presided, and A. T. Gurd, the rank and file, was present. It was decided to do nothing in the way of introducing legislation until the bigger divisions have been heard from. It is settled that the gentlemen of the Government ranks will meet in caucus on Tuesday morning. Hon. G. W. Ross has prepared his defence in the case of the University resolution which Whitney will move. Mr. Ross will take the ground that the action of the president has been justified in every instance. As to the dismissal of Prof. Dale, Mr. Ross will say that it was impossible to retain that gentleman on the professoriate after his public denunciations of the head of the University and college.

Leader Marter spent the morning in his room at the buildings, where, with First Lieutenant Whitney, the plan of campaign will be gone over. It is almost settled that the Opposition will bring forward a motion calling for a radical change in the present method of securing colonists.

Newfoundland's Troubles.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Feb. 25.—The steamer Grand Lake was despatched by the Government last night with a cargo of provisions to relieve the distress existing among the residents on the Northern coast. The Whiteway government applied to the Imperial Government last week for a loan of two million dollars, pledging the revenue of the colony as security and permitting the two English commissioners to undertake the expenditure of the money This the Imperial Government declined to do unless the local administration consented to a thorough investigation of the colony's affairs by a royal commission beforehand.

The Work of Wagging Tongues.

ST. CATHARINES, Feb. 25.—The wife of Alfred Price, of Merritton, around whom a shadow of suspicion was cast a few weeks ago on account of the supposed poisoning of her husband, has left Merritton. She felt very keenly the talk that was connected with her name and went away without giving a word of warning. Her husband still maintains that he was not poisoned and feels badly because certain wagging tongues have caused such trouble.

Highway Robbery.

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—On the night of the 18th inst. W. F. Hawley, of 67 Yorkville avenue, was walking along Surrey place when he found himself confronted by a man who held him up at the point of a revolver and relieved him of his watch, chain and pocket-knife. Yesterday Detective Harrison arrested Edward Stephens, who lives at the Salvation Army Home. Stephens was arraigned in the Police Court, pleaded not guilty and was remanded until February 26.

THREE ELEMENTS TO BE RECKONED WITH.

The Government organs can hardly claim that the great farming classes are in sympathy with the chief planks of the Government platform. We all know that the Patrons of Industry are opposed to a protective tariff and, according to the report of a session of the Grange held in Toronto, on Friday, when a resolution, among others, was adopted demanding that the "tariff of our Dominion be reduced to a revenue basis," the Grange is in the same boat. Of course that declares against protection of one industry at the expense of another. In this matter the Grange ranges itself alongside the Patrons and between them the farming sentiment of the country is pretty fully represented. The Liberal platform on this question and the Grange and Patrons are practically identical and between the three elements the Dominion Government's high taxation policy is threatened with a severe shaking up at the next elections. Article 8 of the Patron's platform reads:—

8. Tariff for revenue only, and so adjusted as to fall as far as possible upon the luxuries and not upon the necessities of life.

Now there has been no time since Confederation when the Liberal party did not avow and act upon the principle of a revenue tariff, with duties so adjusted as to yield no more revenue than was necessary to meet the requirements of the Government when honestly and economically administered. When the slight revision of the tariff was made in 1876, and duties were advanced from 15 to 17½ per cent., the Conservative leaders condemned the Mackenzie administration for refusing to advance duties to a point high enough to afford protection to home industries, and in 1878, when the lines were being laid down for the impending appeal to the electors, the Mackenzie Government unflinchingly adhered to the policy of a low revenue tariff, while the Conservative party, under the leadership of Sir John A. Macdonald, formally took ground in favour of the National Policy by motion made March 7th, 1878. The contest was fought out upon this issue, and in an honest determined stand for a revenue tariff the Mackenzie administration met its doom. From that time onward the Liberal party has steadfastly adhered to the revenue tariff principle, and many parliamentary motions defining the position of the party in that regard could be quoted. The Liberals favour the reduction of the tariff in the interests of the consuming classes and the abolition of duty on raw material in the interests of the manufacturing classes.

GRANGERS AND PATRONS.

The Two Orders Fraternize But Will Not Fuse.

The Grangers and the Patrons will not amalgamate, at least not for the present. That was decided upon on Friday at the session of the Grange, held at the Albion Hotel, Toronto. The Patrons sent a deputation, including Messrs. Caven, McPherson, Dynes and McNeil, members of the Legislature, and Mr. Wrigley, to convey fraternal greetings to the members of the Grange and talk over matters of common interest. The interview took place behind tyled doors, but afterwards Master Dawson Kennedy, of Otonabee, said that the members, while in deepest sympathy with the Patron movement, did not favour the proposal to amalgamate. The Grange owned many halls and much property throughout the country, and, while its membership was not numerous, it was increasing. The Grange puts no candidates in the field of its own, but it was well understood that its members would support farmers against professional men, and always stand by the Patron candidates wherever nominated, regardless of party ties. The Master's statement may be regarded as official expression of the cordial relations existing between the two orders.—Globe.

DAIRYING IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

A Peterborough Man the Pioneer of the Pacific Coast

Mr. Joseph Kerr, of South Monaghan, has visited British Columbia, and having seen in that fine agricultural province a good opening for the dairy industry, has made preparations to carry his ideas into effect. He has procured the best possible equipment, having purchased a complete outfit for cheese making, consisting of boilers, vats, presses, etc., from J. W. Moore & Co. town. The outfit is of the latest improved make, and Mr. Kerr is highly pleased with it. To match his first-class outfit, he has secured the services of a first-class man as cheese maker, Mr. R. C. Abbott, of Lakefield, who has had large experience and success as a cheese and butter maker, being, besides his practical training, a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Mr. Kerr left Thursday for British Columbia, and will be known as the pioneer factory cheese and butter maker of that province. No doubt Mr. Kerr will be successful and do credit to the reputation of Ontario, the leading cheese country of the world.

MILKING TIME.

'Tis milking time, 'tis milking time,
And the cow bells ring with merry chime
As the cattle come home in the evening cool,
From wading deep in the sedgy pool,
And the girls whose cheeks bear a laughing glow,
With milk-maid apron and cap like snow,
And the bright tin pails swing to and fro,
As forth to the milking yard they go.

Then, whistling the lads come home from toil,
Those jolly, hard working sons of the soil,
And as down to the milking yard they go
Are hailed by the girls with a merry hello!
The foam topp'd pails they gallantly carry,
For the girls whom they think they'll some day marry;
And they all move along in merry rhyme,
And the cow bells ring 'tis milking time.

Now the daily milking time is over,
The cows have gone to the fields of clover,
Night is the round of the merry ding dong,
The summer moon high and the night creeping on;
But the boys and girls their love tales will tell,
Out in the hammock and down by the well,
Oh! many the sweet and lovely rhyme
Is breathed in the hour of milking time.

LUMBERING IN THE FAR NORTH.

Bobcaygeon Independent.

Thirty years ago, this village was the centre of the lumbering operations; ten years later the centre had moved back about thirty miles; and to-day the great lumbering field of the Gilmour Co'y is a hundred miles to the north. A considerable number of men arrived this week from the Gilmour shanties, the winter's cut having ceased about ten days ago. The Co'y had eleven camps, and two jobbers, averaging about 55 men to the camp. Supplying this little army of men, together with over 150 pair of horses, was in itself a large undertaking. Dorset, on the Bobcaygeon road, about 70 miles north of Bobcaygeon, is a depot point at which provisions and supplies are gathered from Haliburton county and Huntsville, and are then sledged to the camps, over the Company's tote road of 47 miles. On an average 55 sledge teams have been engaged all winter drawing in supplies for the camps from Dorset, and occasionally a camp would get before a team would reach them. About half the camps are situated along the Canoe lake river, which is about ten rods in width, and between four and five miles in length. The men were sent in early in the fall, and had a fine season for cutting up to Christmas. Since then the snow got deeper, but as soon as it became troublesome, the skidding of logs was stopped, and the men were put to work close to the river, so that the teams drew direct from the stump to the dump. One of the camps having 75 men, had 14 teams, and each team made 17 trips a day, drawing an average of six logs at a load. In the old days, the system was to pick out the best trees, and the same ground was gone over year after year. The rule now is to make a clean cut as they go, that is, every live pine over ten inches in diameter, is cut down, and whatever is of any use is taken out of it. The cross-cut saw is now used much more than was the case, and the axe less, the felling being DONE WITH THE SAW.

DOWN TO PORK AND BREAD

A great saving in timber is made in this way, especially with large trees. They cut closer to the ground, and there is no waste in butting. It is usual for three men to work together, one measures and chops, and two saw. The chopper puts a cut four or five inches in depth on the under side of the tree indicating the direction it has to fall, and marks out the work for the saw on the fallen tree, making the logs of various lengths according to the peculiarities of the tree. Sixty-five logs a day, is the customary allowance for each gang of three and if they cut more it is usual to "bank" the extra ones, so that on a stormy day the men need not go out if they have enough "in bank." The old fashioned caboose, or great log fire in the centre of the shanty, with the swinging jack and steaming kettle, and cheerful flames dancing up through the stack in the trough roof, has become a memory of the past, and the cooking is now done on a large stove and in an attachment to the shanty which also contains the bunks of the cook and foreman. The shanty is heated with a stove. Square box stoves were used until this winter, but the men in putting on pots to heat water for washing their clothes, that this year round stoves were adopted, so that nothing could be put on them, and the men built a fire outside between two stumps, suspending a pot from a pole, when they wished to luxuriate in a clean shirt.

BROKE THEM SO FREQUENTLY

On Thursday last, a surveying party, of 14 men, camped on the south side of Canoe river, opposite one of the Gilmour shanties. The surveyors were locating the Ottawa & Parry Sound Railway, and when the line is built, which may perhaps be accomplished within a year, a station at this point will supply all the camps. When that railway is opened, Huntsville and Dorset will shed tears. The surveying party were making their way through the untrodden forest, tramping on snow shoes over three feet of snow, sleeping in tents, five portageurs drawing their impediments on the light jumper hand sleighs of the Indian.

There are at present only a few men in the woods, river "drivers" who are filling in time cutting boom stuff, and preparing for the opening of the lakes, when the enormous accumulation of logs, some 300,000, or between forty and fifty million feet of pine will be floated down the streams, passing Dorset, Minden, Bobcaygeon and Peterborough, and in the end bringing up at the great saw mills of the company at Trenton, on the shore of Lake Ontario.

A HORRIBLE DEATH.

Fell Amongst a Moving Dump of Logs and Fatally Crushed.

A man named Wm. Brown, employed at Howry & Co's lumbering shanty near Gooderham, met with a frightful and instantaneous death on Friday last. Information (which is not very direct) is to the effect that he was standing on a dump of logs that had frozen together and was chopping them loose, while two men stood below watching to give him notice when the logs began to move.

Suddenly his mate called to him to jump but instead of doing so he waited long enough to give one more blow with his axe, and the delay proved fatal, for the next instant he fell into the moving mass of logs and his head was caught and crushed so badly that he was dead before he could be got out.

Deceased, who was from Saginaw, Michigan, and had no relatives anywhere near here, was about 28 years old and unmarried. He was buried at Pine Lake on Saturday in a coffin that was sent up from Fenelon Falls by Friday's train.

Scraped With a Rasp.

SIRS,—I had such a severe cough that my throat felt as if scraped with a rasp. On taking Norway Pine Syrup I found the first dose gave relief, and the second bottle completely cured me.

The MAIL AND EMPIRE, of Toronto,
Presents its Compliments.

HAPPY TIDINGS

FOR ALL

OUR READERS

TO THE CITIZENS OF PETERBOROUGH!
YOUNG AND OLD, AND OF ALL CLASSES ARE DEEPLY CONCERNED

In the Announcement here made of a movement in their dearest interests that has just been entered into by the Mail and Empire, of Toronto.

THE MATTER IS BRIEFLY STATED

The Great Problems of Society and Government, the most precious Secrets of Science, even the Mysteries of Life and Conduct, are all finally solved by THE SIMPLEST MEANS. What interest is more cherished by us, for example, than THE EDUCATION OF THIS PEOPLE? We regard it as the Basis of our National Prosperity. We behold in it the weapons of personal success and eminence. And, therefore, we make laws for it we spend our millions on it—we provide stately buildings for it—we search the world for improved methods—we banish our children from their homes every season to get a poor instalment of it! Now comes the wand of Genuis! Did you ever inquire:

Why Not Educate Ourselves? ... and Why Not Do It In The Home?

The answer to these burning questions is the establishment of

The Home University

This is a movement for SELF-CULTURE now spreading over the land. The Mail and Empire has studied it well and fallen in with it on behalf of its readers. Both the plan and the means are simplicity itself. ALL MAY JOIN. The studies are free and optional. The Youth may prepare for any calling or profession. The Artisan can perfect himself in the knowledge of his own handicraft. The Business man can master the secrets of prosperous trade. The Farmer may become a more thrifty agriculturist. The Professional man may crown his specialty with the wisdom of its grandest experts. These various classes will each receive guidance and suggestions, have their studies mapped out for them.

And all this at HOME

And with the use of ONLY ONE BOOK—the famous and all embracing ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA. Such is the outline of the HOME UNIVERSITY, in which The Mail and Empire hopes to enroll all its readers, and in connection with which it has made arrangements to provide them with the latest edition of Britannica (Ninth), supplemented with new matter up to date, on terms which even a day-laborer could spare from his meagre income.

HAIWAIIAN PRISONERS

LATEST NEWS FROM HONOLULU

What President Dole Says—Trials and Convictions of Many Revolutionists Military Precautions—One of the Queen's Late Ministers Speaks.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25.—Correspondence per steamer Gaelic from Honolulu says: The following persons under arrest have accepted the privilege of leaving the country in preference to standing trial before the military commission and have been released on their personal recognizance in order to settle their affairs: F. Wunderburg, British, business man; John C. White, British, machinist; Geo. Rittman, British, machinist; John Radin, British, hackman; James Brown, British, hackman; F. H. Redward, British, builder; Fred Harrison, British, builder; John Defries, half white; A. P. Patterson, American, lawer; Chas. Creghton, British, lawyer; Edmund Norrie, a Dane, editor of Holuma; Lewis T. Levy, British auctioneer; M. C. Bailey, clerk for Levy; Capt. A. C. McDowell, Arthur White and two Greeks named Carrianne and Camarinos. V. V. Ashford, a Canadian, was sentenced on the 15th to one years imprisonment and $1,000 fine. On account of ill-health the hard labor was remitted.

John S. Bouler, an Irish-American, was sentenced on the 16th to five years imprisonment and $5,000 fine. Bouler undertook for Nowlein to take possession of the telephone station. No other leading revolutionists have yet received their final sentences. All statements to the contrary have been erroneous. About seventy natives and half whites have been tried, the majority for treason and a few for misprison.

It is certain that nearly all have been convicted. Twenty-three only of those have been publicly sentenced, four for ten years, two for eight, one for seven and sixteen for five. Twenty-one natives were arraigned yesterday.

John F. Colburn, of Liliuokalini's last Cabinet, has written to Mr. Thurston to the effect that he is disgusted with the Queen's course and is working hard with the natives for annexation. He urges Thurston to forward it by every possible means. The disclosures from the Queen's diary, published in San Francisco and republished here, about Rudolph Spreckels were news to the Honolulu people. They are genuine extracts. All the sentences of imprisonment for the insurgents, as is well understood, are open to much reduction in the future and may even be subject to a general amnesty whenever the condition of the republic shall be favorable, either as the result of annexation or otherwise.

In an interview with the United Press reporter President Dole stated that United States Minister Willis and British Commissioner Hawes had been given in confidence the sentences passed by the military commission upon citizens of their respective countries. Mr. Willis reported that the communication to his government of the death sentences upon Gulick and Seward was a correct statement. Those sentences have not been reviewed by the commaneer-in-chief. It is the President's intention next week to summon the advisory council for the purpose of advising upon these sentences.

Action has been postponed until all leading cases have been tried that the sentences could be revised together and suitable judgment be meted out. It was the desire of the government to inflict no heavier penalty than was absolutely necessary to public security. A further reason for the delay was to await the expression of public sentiment abroad.

In reply to the suggestions that American Senators and others fail to apprehend the great differences between the present situation in Hawaii and that in America at the close of the civil war. President Dole replied that it was impossible for them to understand it, ailments existing there before renewal of the rebellion had been completely crushed, which was anything but the case in Hawaii. Their war had ceased to exist; Hawaii's was only suspended by the strong force which the government was able to exert. The President declined to intimate what course would be taken with the Queen.

Volunteer military companies are keeping up their drill and equipment to the highest point. Citizen guards are constantly improving their organization. There is no sense of permanent security. As is natural under these conditions, the general voice of the citizens shouts for some example of severity upon the men who have coused this insecurity.

City of Morocco Looted.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—A despatch from Tangier says that rebel tribesmen have entered and looted the city of Morocco. A British man-of-war has arrived at Tangier from Gibraltar. A second despatch says that the rebels and inhabitants have had bloody fights in the city's streets and that many have been killed and hundreds injured. The Jewish quarter of the city is said to have been spared.

O. A. & P. S. Railway Construction

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—Half a million dollars is to be expended on the construction of the Ottawa, Arnprior & Parry Sound Ry. this coming summer. The work of construction is about to be resumed. Contracts have been awarded for the building of three more ten mile sections and a fourth section is to be let.

THE HAIWAIIAN CABLE.

The Senate and the House at Odds—Legislative Difficulties.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 25.—The business of the senate for the present week is of great importance, and is bound to lead to debate that may run through day and night until the session ends. But three of the thirteen great appropriation bills have passed. Six are in conference, and in some of them radical points of difference between the two houses are involved. Chief among these is the diplomatic bill which carries the senate appropriation of $500,000 for the commencement of the work of laying a cable between this country and the Haiwaiian Islands. The House by a formal vote has refused to agree to this amendment and the senate has directed its managers to insist upon it. Some senators say they are willing to permit the whole bill to fail rather than allow the amendmeno to be stricken out. On the other hand, Mr. Blackburn, one of the senate conferees, is authority for the statement that the President would vote the whole measure if this provision was left in the bill.

The Indian appropriation bill, which went to conference Saturday will be a matter hard to manage, for the Senate engrafted much new legislation upon it. Four of the appropriations bills still remain to be acted upon, the sundry civil bill having been made the unfinished business for to-day. This is one of the most important of the appropriation bills. The amendment reported by the appropriation committee providing for the issue of treasury certificates to meet the current expenses of the treasury will be antagonized by the silver men. Mr. Mills' proposed amendment repealing authority for the issue of bonds in the future, will also be strongly opposed by those who look upon the authority of the resumption act as the only barrier between the Treasurer and a silver basis. The bill also carries the Senate amendment appropriating for the payment of the sugar bounty earned prior to the passage of the new tariff law, between four and five millions of dollars. The next bills in order, will be the legislative and executive, and the naval appropriation bills.

TERRIBLE MINE DISASTER.

Two Convicts and Twenty-Three Mules Smothered in an Alabama Mine.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 25.—Two convicts and twenty-three mules were smothered to death early yesterday morning in Rock Slope shaft No. 1 at Pratt mines. Shortly after two o'clock the engine room in the slope was discovered on fire and a general alarm was given on the outside. Willing hands with hose and water were soon in the mine fighting the flames which had gained considerable headway, for it was known that twenty convicts and twenty-three mules were cut off from the outside by the fire. The smoke, which was following the air, was going towards the men. After three hours' hard work the fire was extinguished and the men pushed on.

The body of John Patton was found lying across the track, his head was badly battered as he tried to kill himself before being smothered. A short distance away the second body was found. It was that of Louis Stevens. The 23 mules were found all in a heap dead. They had kicked one another fearfully while maddened by the thick smoke. The other 18 convicts were found in a bunch near the air shaft where they had gathered in hope of keeping alive. Several of them were on the ground. They were hastily carried out and soon recovered. The fire was incendiary.

That scrofulous taint which has been in your blood for years, will be expelled by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier

ALD. A. F. STAGG, OF BROCKVILLE, ONT.

Restored to Perfect Health by South American Nervine.

Had Tried all the Local Doctors, but Failed to be Benefited.

Visited Massena Springs, but Returned in Despair—To-day Enjoys Perfect Health After Taking Nervine.

ALD. A. F. STAGG, BROCKVILLE, ONT.

A citizen whose influence carries a good premium in the growing town of Brockville is Ald. A. F. Stagg, an extensive stock dealer in that section of the province. For over fifty years he has carried on business in Brockville. The people know the man. How much he has accomplished during this half century in building up the municipality is known to them, and they have been ready to show their appreciation of these labors by making him a town father. Mr. Stagg, however, failed just where so many other men of active and aggressive temperament fail, namely, in exceeding his strength. About two years ago his nervous system became broken and shattered, and he was unable to do work of any kind. This was a serious blow to a man of so active a temperament, and with the volume of business he had on hand. He did, as any one else would do, and which is the natural thing to do, sought the assistance of the local doctors of the place. He tried not only one but all of them. Whatever the trouble was they seemed unable to master it, and did him no good. He went to Kingston, hoping to find greater medical skill in the Limestone City. He was no better off for his trouble. A friend influenced him to visit Massena Springs, it being believed that the peculiar charm that surrounds that spot would have its effect in giving back to Mr. Stagg his lost health. But it was simply a case of history repeating itself everything failed, and he remained home in utter despair, seeing nothing but early death before him. His neighbor, a Mrs. Johnston, who had been using Nervine with great success, recommended him to try a bottle. It cannot be said that he did so with any bright hopes of being benefited. To his great delight, however, he found almost instant relief. After taking several bottles he to-day says, in his own words, that he enjoys perfect health. To those who do not know the particular virtues of South American Nervine all this may sound like a miracle. Here was a man whose condition was known to every one in Brockville, for everyone knew Ald. Stagg, who was completely broken up in health, and whose disease the best medical skill could not relieve, much less remove, and yet a few bottles of this wonderful discovery, Nervine, gives back to him the health that two years previous he had completely lost. This is what Nervine will do in every case. Physicians fail usually because they doctor, as it were, on the surface. Nervine succeeds in every case because it immediately acts upon the nerve centers of the body, from which, as science has unmistakably demonstrated, flows the life blood of the system. When these nerve centers are kept in healthful condition disease that may exist in any part of the body speedily becomes an unknown thing.

It was decided to offer a bounty of fifty cents a head for foxes owing to the damage they inflict on farmers' poultry.

The Output of Logs.

There will be a large output of logs from North Harvey this year, as well as a large quantity of firewood. Messrs. Moore, Barcroft, Middleton, Taylor, Richmond, Walroth, and others have taken out logs on their own lands, and will run well on to a thousand pieces each, chiefly pine, Wm. Fee had a camp for Sadler, and got out a lot of miscellaneous stuff, about 14,000. Mr. Thexton has also had a camp taking out wood.

Charged with Robbing His Employer

A most daring robbery was perpetrated about a mile north of Hastings on Wednesday. Harry Aust, a young Englishman who worked for a farmer named Andrew McGee, left McGee's with the ostensible intention of coming to the village for some groceries, but before leaving, it is alleged, he stole a new suit of clothes and $50 cash from his employer. The money was not missed until about eight o'clock Friday morning. Aust left Hastings on the 2:30 train, and got off at Belleville. The authorities there have been notified to be on the look out. The Belleville police received a telegram from Hastings Friday morning informing them of the above facts, but Aust had gone east on the Wednesday midnight train and likely was in Uncle Sam's domains before the authorities were notified.

Fined Fifty Dollars.

This morning Mr. Martin Connors pleaded guilty to the charge of selling liquor without a license and was fined $50.00 and costs. The fine was paid forthwith.

Don't forget Rugby Football Minstrels at Opera House tonight. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Plan of hall at Salisbury's store. Come and have a good laugh.

The Collector's Office.

Contractor McIlwayne is making a neat job indeed in the renovating of the office of the tax collector. A new hardwood floor and ceiling have been placed in position. The walls will be neatly papered and a counter with brass fixings and net work will divide the office.

The Ops Cheese Factory.

A meeting of the proposed cheese factory for the northeast portion of Ops was held in Lang's school house on Friday afternoon last. There were about twenty farmers present, and the subject was thoroughly discussed, but the meeting was adjourned, awaiting some further information on the workings of the stock factory plan. Those present were heartily in favour of a cheese factory, and another meeting will shortly be called to bring the matter to a conclusion.

The Electric Man.

Mr. Cerise LeBrun appeared at the carnival Friday night in what was probably the greatest novelty in the way of a costume that has ever appeared on ice. He was attired in full evening dress. The brilliant studs in his shirt front were comprised of two candle power electric lights. In each button hole of his coat shone forth other lights, the power emanating from a couple of little storage batteries which he carried in his pockets and which were manufactured for the occasion by Mr. J. H. Greer.

The Markets.

The market was poorly attended on Saturday, and the farmers who came into town had thrilling experiences to relate concerning the difficulty of navigating the tremendous pitchholes which are plentifully besprinkled along the country roads. As produce was scarce it sold correspondingly high. Eggs brought 20 cents a dozen and roll butter sold at 18 and 20c a pound. Poultry was not to be secured after ten o'clock, and what was on the market was greedily picked up by the buyers, who were willing to pay anything in reason for it. Beef was the only commodity which was at all plentiful.

Fire in Smith.

One evening of last week Mr. James Heard, of Smith, had the misfortune to have his barns burned to the ground. It appears that Mr. Heard had returned home from Peterborough and after putting his horses away for the night went into the barn with a lantern and had only been there a short time when it exploded. He immediately threw himself on the lantern in the hope of smothering it out, but the fire caught onto his clothes also, and to put them out he ran out and rolled himself in the snow. In the meantime the fire had communicated itself to the barn and as no assistance was at hand the barn was burned to the ground.

The Lenten Services.

During the Lenten season, services will be held as usual every Wednesday evening, in St. John's church, and as has been the custom for the past six years, visiting clergy will be present at these weekly services. Amongst those who have signified their willingness to attend are Rev. Canon Burke, Belleville's venerable rector; Rev. Septimus Jones, Rural Dean of Toronto; Rev. Carl Smith, of Lindsay; Rev. Mr. Etherington, of Sunderland, and Rev. A. J. Reid, of Uxbridge. It is hoped that as in the past, these services will be largely attended. Rev. Carl Smith, of Lindsay, will officiate next Wednesday evening.

Veterinary Surgery.

A few days ago a valuable brood mare belonging to Mr. Haygarth, of North Monaghan, was fearfully mutilated in the region of the hip from another horse kicking her. It was almost thought advisable to destroy her, but before doing so Dr. Poole, V.S., was called in to give his opinion. The doctor took the case in hand. The nature of the injury to the hip was a lacerated wound twelve inches in length and another wound running at right angles from the first eight inches in length in the centre of which the muscles were punctured. The hole would admit a man's fist readily. A considerable number of stitches were required to bring the parts together. Through antiseptic treatment being maintained the patient is progressing most favourably.

Novel and Attractive Sign.

The artistic triplets, Messrs. Cook, Mitchell & Cook, have hung out in front of their work rooms, over Alex. Elliott's store, a very showy and novel upright sign which is being much admired. Instead of being placed parallel with the front of the building, it is hung in an upright position against the building, facing north and south, and is 25 feet long. On the one side is emblazoned the word "signs" in raised gold letters on a hammered silver background; and on the other side the word "painting" in raised silver letters on a black smalt background. The effect is very striking. The sign is surmounted with a dragon's head in gilt, carved and executed by Mr. Fred Cook.

Rugby Minstrels, To-Night, To-Night.

The Rugby Minstrels will hold the boards at the Opera House to-night. Fun will run rampant for three hours or more. When the curtain goes up you will think you have struck a veritable nigger town. When they start the fun, well you will do a little more than smile. The management say that they will not pay the funeral expenses of those who meet a violent death from laughing to-night. Every person who has not secured a seat would do well to line up at the door early for three signs will be hung out respectively, S.R.O., B.R.O., and H.R.G., which mean, "Standing Room Only," "Breathing Room Only," "Breathing Room Gone." The affair will make a tremendous hit to-night. The local jokes are good, and to many may prove a light little tap. Those who are unfortunate enough to stay away will feel sore when they hear the jokes and songs being repeated after. Doors will be open at 7 p.m.; Gallery open at 7:30 p.m.; Disturbance begins at 8 p.m. To-night, to-night.

CURLIANA.

The Lindsay Post says:—"A rink of Peterborough juniors came up Thursday to have a try at our young curlers. Following are the names of the players and scores:—

Lindsay.	Peterborough.
R. Smyth,	E. Goldsmith
H. Knowlson,	W. Hall,
S. Fee,	R. Bradburn,
E. Rutherford, sk ..20	G. Hay, sk 8

A rink from the Peterborough Collegiate Institute went to Lindsay last Saturday to play a rink from the Collegiate Institute of that town. They had an exceedingly pleasant outing. In the morning they visited the beautiful building of the Lindsay school and other points of interest in the town. The game occupied from two to six o'clock o'clock p.m., and the Peterborough rink was defeated, being outplayed by their opponents, but not to a greater extent than they had expected. The rinks were:—

Lindsay.	Peterborough.
Mr Hardy.	Mr O'Brien,
Mr Herrington,	Mr Drope,
Mr Stephens,	Mr Jeffries,
Mr Harstone, skip..20	Mr Fessenden, skip ..14

The annual "point" game amongst the members of the curling club will be played off at the rink this evening.

The iniquitous practice of playing "ringers" is apparently becoming more widespread every day, even the curlers have descended to it, as it is openly charged by the "Putty" rink that the "Pills" played a ringer on Friday night. The men of "Putty" are confident of being able to win from the "Pills" if they have "a fair field and no favour."

An interesting inter-rink match was played on the rink Saturday evening with the following result:

G M Roger,	N St C. Gurd,
E H D Hall,	Geo Morrow,
Geo Matthews,	J M Irwin,
R P Boucher, skip .13	A St A Smith, skip...14

HOCKEY.

The G.T.R. have made arrangements whereby the rate for the hockey excursion to Toronto to morrow has been reduced to $1, return. A special train will leave at 3.30 p.m., returning at midnight for the convenience of those wishing to be back in town the same night.

Parsons, Peterborough's clever cover point, it is hoped will have sufficiently recovered from the effects of a badly sprained ankle, to play in to-morrow's match in Toronto. He practiced this afternoon. The Peterborough's could ill afford to play without Parsons.

THE WHEEL.

The Globe in speaking of the annual meet of the C. W. A., says:—"While on this lay (to adopt a phrase which the predatorially-inclined gentry have copyrighted) it would not be amiss to say a few words about the cities that are desirous of securing the annual meet of the C. W. A. Peterborough and Waterloo are thought to have the call, and it is considered that at the bell tap they will both be within a wheel's length of each other; but it remains to be seen whether Peterborough can hold her own in the stretch. Toronto and the towns to the west of the city will vote as one man for "Beerloo," as the wheelmen best know it, and as they control quite a number of ballots, not "bullets," the "fast town," another pet name that the bicyclists apply to Waterloo on account of the location there of the Zimmerman House, will probably get the meet. Peterborough and Stratford also have a fighting chance and their pretensions are not to be overlooked.

Wheelmen, who are nursing any pet ideas which they are desirous of having adopted as part of the constitution of the C. W. A., are hereby informed that all notices of amendments to the by-laws of the association must be published in The Wheelman at least one month prior to the annual meeting, and as that paper is issued on the fourth of March, there is not much time to spare."

IN MEMORIAM.

Last Evening's Service in the George Street Church.

A large congregation assembled in George street church, last evening, as a mark of respect to the late Rev. E. Dewart Lewis, in memoriam of whom the service was held.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. W. R. Young, M. A., from the text "If a man die shall he live again," being part of the fourteenth verse of Job xiv. Mr. Young subdivided his subject and took it up under three different heads:

Who am I?
Whence came I?
Whither am I going?

In regard to the first query, the speaker explained that philopolemics agreed in saying that that the answer to such a question should be "the body, the soul and the spirit."

Concerning an answer to the second subdivision of his subject, the speaker explained that it furnished meat for discussion between the advocates of

"EVOLUTION" AND "CREATION."

The believers in the former theory held that man was evolved from the original protoplasm? while the creative or old Mosaic idea, which was the true theory, was that God has formed man from the dust of the earth and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life.

The query of "Whither am I going?" invited all to an interesting study of Eternity. That there was life hereafter, Mr. Young thought, was amply proven in the existence of the massive intellect of man. Such an intellect would not be given if it was only to be used for the brief time of three score years and ten. "Where ever you find an idea," continued he, "which is universally accepted, there is a reality in existence to which that idea belongs. Go where you will you will find mankind, as a whole, accepting the idea that there is a life after death."

In speaking personally of the deceased, Mr. Young regretted the absence of Rev. Dr. Galbraith, president of the Toronto conference, and Rev. Wm. Buchanan, chairman of the district in which

THE DECEASED OFFICIATED.

If the narration of a few incidents in the life of Rev. Edward Dewart Lewis would inspire holier thoughts in the minds of those present, then the service would not have been in vain. The deceased was born in North Monaghan in March, 1852. Soon after his parents moved to Norwood where his boyhood was spent and where he received his early education. At the age of 16 he entered merchantile life in Brantford where he remained for three years. It was during his sojourn in Brantford that young Lewis was brought under religious influence and gave his heart to God when but seventeen years of age. He returned to Norwood, where he qualified as a public school teacher at the High School and after teaching some time turned his thoughts to the ministry. He spent three years in study at Victoria University and during this time he grew to love Christ and to tell others of Him.

In George Street Church during the session of the conference of 1876 he was in the ministry of the Methodist church and appointed to assist the pastor on the Lakefield circuit and was afterwards transferred as assistant on the Darlington and Pickering circuits.

In three years he returned to Victoria College and completed his studies and in 1882 was ordained to the ministry and appointed to the Hastings charge, being afterwards successively located at Norham, Centreville, Shannonville, Warsaw and Epsom in the latter of which places he laid down the standard and was gathered home.

Mr. Young met the deceased in Picton at the time of the formation of the Bay of Quinte conference and at that time formed the conclusion that Rev. Mr. Lewis was a painstaking and faithful member of the Methodist ministry. He had a zeal for the saving of souls and spent his time and strength in seeking men and persuading them to give their hearts to Christ.

In the year 1882

REV. E. DEWART LEWIS

was married and a certain portion of his success in after life, Mr. Young thought, should be attributed to the devoted and consistent character of his now sorrowing widow. He was in Peterborough in June last attending the conference. He was not strong then, and was constrained by his friends against overdoing himself, yet he returned to his charge at Epsom with renewed zeal and vigor. A few weeks after conference he felt his strength giving way, and suffered intensely. In November he sought relief at Clifton Springs, but without avail, death had laid its icy hand upon him, and slowly but surely his young life went out at the early age of 42 years, when a man is generally considered at his prime.

When offering prayer a touching reference was made by Rev. Mr. Young to the young widow and her deep affliction.

SEPARATE SCHOOL INSPECTORSHIP.

Hamilton Herald:—Thomas O'Hagan is spoken of as a likely successor of the late Cornelius Donovan as one of the Separate school Inspectors of the province. Mr. O'Hagan is well known in Hamilton, and has many friends here who would be glad to see him appointed to the vacant post. ....We understand that Mr. Michael O'Brien, of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, late headmaster of the Separate school here, is also an applicant for the position with a fair chance of success. While not poetically inclined, like his opponent, he is lacking in none of the sterling qualities that should commend a man for the position, and his many friends are giving him hearty support.—Lindsay Post.

"THE RACE MEET."

To the Editor of the Examiner:

SIR,—Much adverse criticism, as the EXAMINER, of Feb. 22nd inst., puts it, over the head of an anonymous correspondent, calling himself "Fair Play," was exhibited by the onlookers at the ice track races held on Thursday last, when "Lulu B.," owned by Robert Hewitt, Esq., was put back from second to third place for running.

The ordinary anonymous correspondent to a newspaper invariably strikes wide of the mark, and as a consequence very little attention is paid to it by the subscriber. Robert Hewitt, Esq., may be a gentleman, he may think he knows something about horse racing, but he is not too old I hope to learn rule 30, sec. 1, as laid down.

"When any horse or horses break from their gait in trotting or pacing, their riders or drivers shall at once pull them to the gait in which they were to go the race and any party failing to comply with this requirement, if he comes out ahead, shall lose the heat; and whether such breaking horse comes out ahead or not, all other horses shall be placed ahead of him in that heat, and the judges shall have discretionary power to distance the offending horse or horses."

"Fair Play" in his letter says it is rumored that Mr. Jos. Daly, one of the judges, left the stand on account of the decision. Now Mr. Editor, as a matter of fact, Mr. Jos. Daly remained on the stand until the heat was finished and is authority for the statement that "Lulu B" broke ten times in the mile and was a party to putting "Lulu B" back to third place.

Dr. Robinson was waiting for Mr. Jos. Daly to drive him to the station, who can also corroborate the foregoing statement. The abuse to the judges, rained with monumental gall by Bob Hewitt, was entirely uncalled for, as his record on the track, not only on this but other occasions, has given him an unenviable reputation as a first class kicker.

This season at Trenton he was put back for running. At the same place in the 4th and 5th heats of that celebrated race he was put back for foul driving.

Many horsemen are of the opinion that "Lulu B" was educated by his owner to "break." Where you get a breaking horse and a "kicking" owner, as was evidenced in Port Hope last summer when Mr. Robert Hewitt "fixed" a race whereby he was to get 1st money, and after the field beating him he "kicked," clearly shows without taking up too much of your space that the decision of the judges was a righteous one.

One word in conclusion, Mr. Editor. While I would scorn to make light of the infirmities by birth, it was not very becoming of the party who represented the judges' decision on "Lulu B" at the carnival held on Friday evening, and it is to be hoped that his youthful indiscretions may cease. Thanking you for your valuable space I remain,

Yours respectfully,
ANDREW MCNEIL.

DR. BARNARDO IS WILLING.

He has no Objection to the Proposition of the Children's Aid Society.

After considerable interchange of correspondence Mr. E. B. Edwards has just received the appended letter from Dr. Barnardo, in reference to the using, by the local Children's Aid Society, of the Peterborough Barnardo Home as a temporary shelter for little ones taken in charge by the society, under the Act:

LONDON, E.,
February 2nd, 1895.

MY DEAR SIR,—I have read with great pleasure the copy of the Children's Protection Act, which you sent me. I heartily congratulate all who have had any share in bringing about this most desirable legislation on behalf of the children of Canada. I write now at the earliest possible moment to say that it will give me very great pleasure to offer our home at Peterborough, as a temporary shelter under the Act for the reception of girls who may be committed to us through it, and for the purpose of securing, after awhile, foster parents and homes in which the children can be boarded out. I understand from the Act that the municipality would pay for the support of those children at a fixed rate and I am quite satisfied if such expenses be paid to place my entire experienced staff and our institution at the disposal of the society for the purpose of rendering prompt and efficient aid in such cases. I, however, suggest that this arrangement should be in force only for a year; that at the end of the year we consider the position, for it is just possible from either one side or the other that we might not consider it desirable that the arrangement should be permanent. Of course when the home is full of children who have come from England and are waiting to be placed out in homes, we could not receive those who may be committed under the Act, and my offer is understood only, therefore, to obtain, if there is room. As to the class of children that would be offered to us by the society under the act I hardly like now to lay down any hard and fast rule, but it would be obvious that certain children would be very undesirable—that for example a very depraved or vicious child might injuriously affect others and I imagine that such a case would best be dealt with not by sending her to a home like ours, but by boarding her out at once in some family where there are no other children. But, however, it might be, and without laying down too stringent a rule, I would wish by this letter to offer our institution at Peterborough for the purposes of the Act, and if you will convey this offer to the responsible parties I shall be very much obliged to you. Believe me to be, dear Mr. Edwards,

Very faithfully yours,
(Signed) THOS. J. BARNARDO.

Annual meeting to-night at 7 o'clock.

Literary Society to-morrow night at 7.30 o'clock.

All the fellows will hear Dr. Hunter Thursday night in the Opera House.

Mr. Mills, one of the directors of the Kingston Association, gave an earnest talk at yesterday's meeting. A male quartet (Messrs. J. Miller, Crowe, A. Miller and Birch) sang two selections.

More men is the need of the Literary Society. The last meeting was all right. Mr. Forster's paper on "Single Tax" and J. W. Bennett's talk on "Self-culture" were profitable, while the parliamentary drill and readings were much enjoyed by the members. Any young man, whether a member of the association or not, may join the society. Next "meet" is Tuesday night.

Annual meeting to-night at 7 o'clock. Reports of work will be read, officers and board elected, and committees for next year appointed. The meeting is for members and all interested friends.

A number of ushers will be on hand Thursday night to provide seats for the crowd of men who will attend the purity meeting. Dr. Hunter, of Montreal, the speaker, is an authority on the topic, and his ability as a speaker, with the additional musical attractions, will insure a crowded house. Lecture begins at 8 o'clock with a praise service led by male octette and orchestra. Silver collection taken to defray expenses. Boys under 16 not admitted. Opera House is the spot.

Everything must go at price. Grafton & Co.

A most pleasing anthem entitled "Great is the Lord," was sung in St. Pauls church last evening by the choir in particularly good style.

On Friday next the Sunday School of the Park street Mission will hold its anniversary. An interesting programme is being prepared.

Rev. Mr. Andrews, the new curate who will take charge of St. John's Mission, delivered the morning sermon at St. John's church yesterday.

Miss Vina Belleghem in George street church last night sang a soprano solo entitled "There is a Land Mine Eyes Hath Seen," in a most charming manner.

In Charlotte street church yesterday morning Mr. A. L. Davis took the solo and Messrs. Davis and W. J. Squires the duet in the anthem "Light of the World."

Thanks to the congregation of St. John's were expressed yesterday by Rev. Mr. Davidson for the liberal response which was made to his appeal for funds for charitable purposes.

The choir in the Baptist Park street Mission sang as an anthem last evening "Weary Sinner Come Away." Miss Smart and Mr. Churchill took the duet most acceptably.

A pretty arrangement of "Nearer My God to Thee," constituted the anthem in the George street church last evening. The duet was taken by Miss McGuire and Miss Annie Belleghem.

Rev. C. W. Hedley, who went to Harwood and Gore's Landing last week to hold service, was storm-stayed in that section for three days. The town clergy hold services in these villages every two weeks.

Mr. E. P. Churchill, of McMaster University, conducted the services in the Park street Mission yesterday. In the evening he spoke to a large congregation from the text "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, whatsoever man soweth that shall he also reap." The sermon was a very powerful one.

The evening service in St. John's yesterday was conducted by the rector, Rev. J. C. Davidson, who in his sermon emphasized the watchword for the Lenten services, viz., "Information and instruction concerning religious principles and the systematic method of understanding them."

HAD ONE WIFE BUT WANTED ANOTHER.

Narrow Aversion of a Most Scandalous Sensation Last Week.

Within the last few months some startling sensations in the line of scandal have been developed in Peterborough, and an incident with even more serious accessories was narrowly averted last week.

A young Salvation Army girl who was in service with a family in the north end of the town has for some time been keeping company with a farm hand who worked in the country a few miles from town. In the natural course of events the couple became engaged and the wedding day was set for some time early in March. The impatience of the lover to have the ceremony come off at once was checked by his inamorata, who wished for time in which to prepare her trousseau.

In his generosity the young man furnished the money wherewith to purchase the wedding garments for the bride.

As the officers of the Salvation Army always take a particular interest in the welfare and home lives of the members, the arrangements for the approaching marriage were scrutinized with a friendly interest. The officers were surprised to learn that the bridegroom elect would lose his position on the farm on the 20th of March. Surely, argued they, if such is the case there must be an Ethiopian in the fence corner somewhere. A rigid investigation was inaugurated and the horror of the officials may be readily imagined, when it is stated that it was ascertained that the man had already one wife living, from whom he had been separated for five years.

The girl was made acquainted with the circumstances of the case and when the lover called on Saturday evening bearing with him an engagement ring, he received his "conge."

Much credit is due the officials of the Army for their prompt action in this matter, as a little delay would have cost the girl that which is most dear to woman—her honour and pure name.

Better be Early Than Late.

Ladies may rest assured of this fact that Miss Delaney's clearing sale will positively close on the 1st of March. The store must be vacated on that date without fail. To accomplish this the goods must be sold, no matter what the sacrifice. Extra bargains have already been given, and better ones are still to follow. For a few days there will be a special sale of gloves, flowers and vellings—but other bargains will still go on. Prices are lower than the ladies of Peterborough have ever seen attached to high-class millinery. Miss DELANEY.

DECOYING FISH.

SKILLFUL INDIANS OF THE NORTH HAVE QUEER METHODS.

They Cut a Hole In the Ice, Build a Hut Over the Hole and Let Down a Decoy Through the Ice—Fooling Innocent Creatures of the Deep Lakes.

"You have heard of shooting game by means of decoy birds often enough no doubt," said an old sportman the other day, "but I doubt if you ever heard of fishing by means of a decoy fish, where the decoy was not used for bait. I never saw it done myself till I visited Georgian bay, a part of Lake Huron, in Canada, one winter. There I found that the half breed Indians erected huts on the frozen bay and fished through holes cut in the ice by means of a queer decoy.

"In order to facilitate matters, some of them had little stoves in their huts to keep them warm while they fished. The huts had only one opening, a door, and when the fisherman had entered and closed the door no light entered the hut except what came up through the floor, reflected through the ice outside and the water underneath it. This made it possible for the fisherman to see deep down into the water and difficult for fish to see him in his dark hut. The fisherman has a chair or bench to sit upon, food and drink to keep life in him during his long watch and a little stove to prevent chill. Now comes the decoy business.

"The half breed takes out of his kit a queer looking stick, painted and shaped roughly to look like a fish, he avers, though it would hardly be breaking the second commandment to worship it, for it is the likeness of nothing in the heavens above, or on the earth beneath, on in the water under the earth: but if the fish think it is the main object is accomplished. This wooden counterfeit of a fish is loaded with lead, so that it sinks and lies in the water the right way when suspended from the middle of the back by a string attached to a short fishing pole. The Indian lets this decoy down into the water and by means of the string gives it a series of short, sharp jerks, which make it a dart hither and thither in a remarkably lifelike manner, although, of course, its range is exceedingly limited, about a yard in any direction.

"The thing is provided with tin fins and tail and is weighted with lead most heavily at the head. The string is attached nearer the head than the tail, upon the back, and the skill with which these fishermen make the queer thing shoot about in a triangle under their feet, through a hole in the ice, is truly remarkable. I did not succeed in acquiring the art myself. I should say from trying it that it is rather more difficult to learn than fly casting.

"Presently a few fish, noticing this decoy darting about as if in active pursuit of his food, swim that way to see if there is not something there for them also. They may be fresh water herring, salmon, trout, whitefish or less valuable game; but none of them, big or little, is refused by the half breed. Fine fish he sells; the coarse ones he or his dogs or his children or his squaw eat readily.

"Pulling up his decoy, the fisherman lets down a baited hook and tries his luck on the newcomers, seldom in vain. These men fish with all sorts of queer bait. I saw one man make a splendid haul one day, using for bait only a big white bone button without any hook. The fish swallowed it greedily, and he would jerk them out of the water before they could get it out of their throats. By and by a pike or dogfish, seeing the shoal of fish around the pole, darts after them. They scatter in a hurry, and the fisherman lets down his decoy again to attract the pike.

"Now all the skill at his command must be employed to make the decoy work well, for if it lags in the water long enough for the pike to suspect its genuineness he will turn away in disgust. If the decoy deceives the wily pike he dashes at it, and the fisherman jerks it away before the pike can grab it in his strong jaws. The pike turns to pursue, and as he halts to turn the fisherman drives at him with a long forked spear. If his aim is accurate, the pike is transfixed and is brought bleeding to the surface in a jiffy.

"These men are skilled hunters and know many curious habits of the creatures they pursue. They say that muskrats, for instance, are able to swim long distances under the ice in this manner: Taking a long breath, the muskrat dives from his pursuer and swims as far as he can. When he can go no longer without a fresh breath, he comes up under the ice, and pressing his nose against it breathes out all the air in his lungs. This forms a big bubble under the ice, and the Indians say that the ice has the power of making that bubble of air fresh again, oxygenizes it in fact, and that the little fellow then breathes it in again and dives once more. This he can do half a dozen times, the Indians say, before the air he took with him becomes so foul that the ice cannot freshen it again.

"Whether this property of the ice is true or not I cannot say, but the Indians firmly believe it, and I know that muskrats can travel a long way under the ice, and I have seen them come up under the ice, press their noses to it awhile and then dive again. Perhaps some scientist might explain the case."—New York Tribune.

The Southerner at Home.

The southerner at home is prone to neglect his headgear for the sake of having his feet well shod, and he will go about in public places wearing a battered and soiled slouch hat, but scrupulously neat as to his footwear. The peculiarity perhaps arises from family pride, a besetting southern sin, coupled with the belief that aristocracy is evinced in the shape and size of the feet. It is worthy of note, however, that the southern slouch hat is often a costly article of the finest and most durable felt. Such a hat for winter and a costly and indestructible Panama straw for summer are the proper headgear for a southern country gentleman.—Chicago Herald.

An Old Man Attempts His Life With Opium in Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 23.—Edward Fraser, 86 years old, was discovered on the bank of the Monongheia river on Second avenue in an unconscious condition from the effects of opium and will probably die. He was removed to the Mercy Hospital. A letter left by Fraser dated February 20 indicates that the act was calmly considered. It states that he is a native of Quebec, Canada, and was the favorite son of Capt. Thomas D. Fraser, formerly Mayor of Quebec, and of Her Majesty's 76th Regiment. Fraser came to Pittsburg a week or so ago from Greensburg, Pa., where he had been employed by a music dealer for the past two or three years.

North York Conservatives.

AURORA, Ont., Feb. 23.—The Conservatives of North York held a convention here yesterday for the purpose of selecting a candidate to contest this riding in the coming election. They selected Dr. Strange of Toronto as their standard bearer. In the evening a public meeting was held in Mechanics' hall, addressed by the candidate, Hon. N. C. Wallace, Controller of Customs; Hon. J. F. Wood, Controller of Inland Revenue; Dr. Beattie Nesbitt and C. C. Robinson, of Toronto.

C. P. R. Did Not Declare a Dividend.

MONTREAL, Feb. 23.—There is considerable speculation in financial circles as to whether the Canadian Pacific Railway will declare a dividend this year or not. A meeting of the directors was held yesterday but nothing was done. Another meeting will be held to-day when it is expected the matter will be finally settled.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble; and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promise from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, 'be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home.
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

American Levity.

Singularly enough it appears that Poe, the only absolutely distinct genius our country has yet produced, was incapable of humor and that even his levity was artificial. Hawthorne, next to Poe in originality and far above him in style, was but meagerly equipped with smile provoking material. Bryant, our greatest poet, maintained a lofty seriousness throughout his work.

It may be sacrilege to say so, but the truth is Lowell was the founder of our levity. He never could be quite a reliably serious thinker, but could at any moment break off into funmaking. Humor is good in a fresh and natural state, but so is a peach. Cut and dry either, and you have a poor article for a regular diet. We Americans have fed upon laughable things until our faces show the wrinkles of a grin even when in solemnest repose.

We are never sure of one another, but must wait awhile after each communication to find out whether or not it is a joke. The effect of highest sincerity cannot be reached in the midst of all this hurly burly of chaffing voices. How can one be serious while everybody else is grimacing?—Chautauquan.

There Was Just One Man.

There is a gallant congressman who once had the reputation of sowing wild oats broadcast. When he was first running for congress, many breezy stories were told about him. At last he gave it out in the heat of his campaign that he would speak shortly in defense of his morals. It was a Populist district, and he had a big audience. The speech every one liked, but until the last sentence not a word was spoken about the advertised subject. At the last the candidate stuck his hand under his desk and pulled out several boxes of imported cigars.

"Gentlemen," he cried, "I am accused of having certain bad habits. Particular instances have been alleged in fact. I wish to make some one in this assemblage a present of a box of good cigars. If there is any one here who has never done what I have done, will he please step up and take it?" No one moved. For a long time the big crowd kept silent. But an old Baptist minister in a far back seat after awhile arose and said in a high, squeaky voice, "Colonel, I don't smoke."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Didn't Know His Own Child.

At Antietam, just after the artillery had been sharply engaged, the Rockbridge (Va.) battery was standing waiting orders. General Lee rode by and stopped a moment. A dirty faced driver about 17 said to him:

"General, are you going to put us in again?"

Think of such a question from such a source to the general of the army, especially when that general's name was Lee.

"Yes, my boy," the stately officer kindly answered; "I have to put you in again. But what is your name? Your face seems familiar somehow."

"I don't wonder you didn't know me, sir," laughed the lad; "I'm so dirty, but I'm Bob."

It was the general's youngest son, whom he had thought safe at the Virginia Military Institute. "God bless you, my son; do your duty!" and the general rode on.—Washington Post.

Died to Free His Wife.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Feb. 23.—B. J. Millhouse, a stock raiser living near here, had his wife arrested on a charge of bigamy. Yesterday he committed suicide, leaving a letter in which he declared that he took his own life in order that his wife might be free to live with the man whom she had married in violation of the law.

A Pilot Boat Missing.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—The pilot boat George H. Warren, No. 5, is still missing. She was last seen on February 7 just before the great storm. None of her six pilots has yet brought a vessel to port which would indicate that she has been blown far out of the course of the trans-Atlantic steamers.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you if it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's oldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance [illegible], in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

Mistakes of Missionaries.

Come behind the curtain with me while I whisper into your ear a few of the mistakes made by missionaries, who talk so much about the mistakes of the heathen. One evening an English missionary in Peking took a friend who was visiting him to a regular Chinese theater. It happened that the play for that evening was a burlesque on foreign preaching. A Chinaman dressed up to represent a foreigner came upon the stage with his arms full of books, attended by his Chinese servant. He began to preach a mock sermon, making the mistakes in talking which a foreigner is likely to make. These mistakes were received with bursts of laughter from the audience, to whom the books were distributed. The fun came to a climax when the preacher, after delivering a sentence particularly full of laughable mistakes, turned to his servant and said: "How did I speak? Did I do pretty well?" and the servant replied with great gravity: "The foreign teacher speaks the Chinese language exceedingly well. No mistakes at all were made."—New York Independent.

An Invention For Steamships.

An English mechanical genius has devised a method of indicating and stopping a leak by the use of compressed air. He divides a ship into airtight compartments, fitted with doors provided with packing material and connected by tubes with a room on deck called the "switch room." In this room is a junction chest supplied with compressed air from fixed or portable compressors and so arranged that the air can be delivered to any of the compartments. Other tubes lead from the compartment from which water can be forced out when required, and electric indicators are also connected with the switch room to indicate the accumulation of water in any of the compartments. Should the vessel "spring a leak" the indicator will show which compartment is affected, so that the compressed air may be forced in to drive the water out.—Boston Journal.

True Love Side Tracked by an Orange.

A young lady said the other day that she hated oranges because one had come between her and her lover. He had called on her one evening, and after sitting awhile had produced a couple of bright Florida oranges out of his pocket and suggested that each eat one. She now says that she cannot drive ont of her mind the sight of his nose, cheeks and chin dripping with juice, and he has been whispering something horribly similar about her. Evidently you cannot love a girl and a citrus aurantium at the same time.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Senators Use Their Fists.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 23.—A row occurred in the State Senate yesterday. Senator Mills in the course of debate called Senator Peace a liar. Mills then threw a paper weight at Peace and the senators clinched and fought viciously. The result was four black eyes and a lively flow of blood. The contestants were finally separated. The Senate ordered an investigation of the fracas and adjourned.

North Victoria Liberals.

COBOCONK, Ont., Feb. 23.—The adjourned Liberal nominating convention was held here yesterday. The meeting was convened in the Oddfellows' hall, Mr. Jas. Dickson, who has held the position of president of the association for some fifteen years, occupying the chair. Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, of Lindsay, and President Dickson were nominated, but on a vote being taken it was found that Mr. McLaughlin was the almost unanimous choice of the convention. He will oppose Major Hughes.

To Purchase Carlyle's House.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The Lord Mayor presided at the meeting held at the Mansion House in support of the plan to raise a fund for the purchase of Carlyle's house, which is to be fitted up as a Carlyle museum. The meeting was largely attended. Among those present was U. S. Ambassador Thomas F. Bayard, who spoke eloquently of the debt which the English-speaking people owed to Carlyle.

Chinese Plots Unearthed.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The Times correspondent in Hong Kong telegraphs:—A widespread plot to overthrow the Manchus has been discovered in Kwang-Kung, Kwang-Si and other southern provinces. The British Consul was assaulted during the black flag riots at Takau. The riots were quelled before the Mercury arrived and 25 of the leaders were beheaded.

This Point Practically Settled.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—In the House of Commons yesterday Sir Edward Grey, Under Foreign Secretary, said the Government had no power to demand that Belgium and Germany terminate the operation of the clauses of their treaties of commerce which preclude preferential tariffs between Great Britain and their colonies.

Captain Howgate Acquitted.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Captain Howgate was acquitted Saturday of the charge of embezzling $11,800 from the government while holding the position of disbursing officer of the United States signal service and of forging a voucher for that amount to cover up his alleged wrong doing. The verdict was rendered about noon Saturday, when the jury had been locked up nearly two hours. Capt. Howgate received the announcement without emotion, but after he had been taken to his cell beneath the court room he danced for joy, in the realization that part of the burden and anxiety of fifteen years had been lifted from his shoulders.

Clever Counterfeiters Arrested.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 25.—The police arrested Francisco Romera, Frank Nicolas and Jos. Stambola, supposed to be western distributors of a counterfeiting gang located in New York, known as the Adams gang. Considerable counterfeit money was found on the prisoners. The police say the Italians are agents of a gang reported to have coined from pure silver at least $1,000,000 in dollars and smaller denominations, circulating in this country, Canada and Europe, thereby making a profit of $800,000.

"Splendid" British Paupers.

NEW York, Feb. 25.—A London cable says: Lord Sudeley finds himself compelled to sell both his country estates. In these days of "splendid paupers" this is by no means a rare event, but it is not every day that a man offers in the market something that his family owned since before the Norman conquest. His Gloucestershire estate at Toddington was the dowery of a Saxon Princess in the eleventh century who was his ancestress, and has been in the direct male line of his family for over 700 years.

A Seaman Lost.

HALIFAX, Feb. 25.—The steamer Vancouver with the weekly mails arrived last night from Liverpool. When off the harbor Seaman Jones fell from aloft, struck on a rail and rebounded into the water. Boats were lowered and the steamer cruised around for two hours, but nothing was seen of him and it is supposed he was stunned by the fall and sank. He belonged to Carnarvon, Wales, and leaves a wife and five children.

Patrons and Grangers Won't Unite.

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—A deputation of Patron members conferred with the Dominion Grange and afterwards Master Dawson Kennedy of the Grange announced that while his order and the Patrons were on friendly terms, the former could not see its way clear to a union with the other body. The Grange owns a number of halls and is increasing slowly in membership.

HADDAM, Conn., Feb. 25.—Thomas Cavanaugh and his wife were burned to death in a fire which consumed their home late last night. The house was situated one mile from Middle Haddam and as there were no near neighbors the fire was not known until people passing saw the ruins and discovered the charred bodies.

THE MILLBROOK CARNIVAL.

Praise for Mr. E. J. Hartley's Fancy Skating There.

In speaking of the carnival given by Mr. E. J. Hartley, in Millbrook last week the Reporter says: "The carnival given on Wednesday night last by Mr. E. J. Hartley, professional fancy skater and the wonderful and difficult figures he cut upon the ice was not witnessed by as many as would have turned out had our people known the treat that was in store for them. Mr. Hartley is certainly a curiosity on runners and the difficult movements he went through would seem impossible to those who had not the opportunity of personal observation. It is useless to enumerate the various figures he cuts upon the ice, for he could map out almost anything asked for, from Sir John A. MacDonald's head to a blacksmith's anvil. Standing on the tip-toe of one skate he would spin around top-like so fast that one could not tell whether it was man or stump. Mr. Hartley was handicapped somewhat by the spring water ice which is more brittle than soft water ice and chipped off in large pieces, but if he ever returns to our town again he may expect a crowded rink.

AT THE OLD TRYSTING PLACE.

The dead leaves rustle at my feet,
The moon is shining bright o'er;
Something has softly dimmed my eyes.
Across the path one shadow lies,
The path two trod so lightly.

It was upon a night like this
Love left us only sorrow;
I held her little hand in mine.
That parting is to me divine.
Then there was no tomorrow.

Since I have learned life's lesson well
Hearts are not easy broken.
Tonight all joys I have forgot:
There's something sacred in this spot,
Where sweet goodbys were spoken.

I'd feel less lonely with myself
If I were broken hearted:
Would I could live that night again,
With all its sadness-sweetened pain,
When love from love was parted!

What a Young Man Did.

A college graduate had hardly received his diploma before he was compelled to face poverty and family disgrace. His father, who had been reputed to be wealthy, was an embezzler and a fugitive from justice. His mother and sisters were entirely dependent upon his modest earnings in a broker's office.

He had planned taking an advanced course of professional study in architecture. His ideal occupation had to be abandoned. He was in love with a charming girl, but ceased to visit her since marriage was out of the question. An opportunity for a year's travel in Europe at a friend's expense was given up.

Year after year he maintained a hard, bitter struggle to make a living at uncongenial employment for his mother and sisters, to support his father, and to overcome prejudice caused by the family disgrace. He became a successful business man, but was prematurely gray at 40. His life was haunted by the ghosts of his youthful hopes.

Such lives do not furnish material for exciting stories. They are dull and prosaic, but are nevertheless heroic. To give up all that is dear to youth and to be loyal to family obligations sometimes is a crowning triumph of unselfishness. —Youth's Companion.

Many Ministers Present.

Ex-Secretary Lincoln, while United States minister to England, wished to get into Westminster on the occasion of a special service there. Archdeacon Farrar had told Mr. Lincoln to go to the east door of the cathedral to avoid the crowd and to inform the usher that he was the American minister, so that he could be conducted at once to the archdeacon's pew. When Mr. Lincoln sent in his name and title, the usher came out and said, with surprise, "For gracious' sake, how many American ministers are there?" It seems that several gentlemen of the cloth had each deftly made his way into the church by informing the usher that he was an American minister.—San Francisco Argonaut.

All Right.

Two men became engaged in a fight in the street. Instantly their hats went off and rolled in the dust. One of the men was entirely bald, and the other had a thick head of hair. The bald man seized the other by the hair and began to drag him about.

"Stop him!" cried a bystander.

"Why should you stop him?" asked another. "He's only practicing the golden rule."

"The golden rule? What do you mean?"

"Why, he's doing to the other man what he wishes to goodness the other man might be able to do to him!"—Youth's Companion.

FROM THE COAST.

The Great Prevalence of Kidney Disease in British Columbia.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 25.—The great prevalence of kidney disease on the coast, and the apparent inability of the physicians to successfully grapple with the malady has long been a subject of considerable anxiety. It is a fact not generally known that fully ninety per cent. of the death rate in this province is caused by kidney disease. Hitherto the whole pharmacopœia of medicine has failed to furnish a specific that could be relied upon to cure this disease. In Dodd's Kidney Pills, which have of late been extensively introduced throughout the country, the medical men think they have at last got what they have been looking for and are using it almost exclusively in their practice for kidney disease. Many remarkable cures have been affected.

They include free reclining, palace, sleeping, and dining cars of the latest and best patterns. Call on or write any railway agent for tickets and all information, or address J. A. RICHARDSON, Canadian passenger agent, north-west corner King and Yonge streets Toronto.

A Southern Railway Wreck.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 25.—Passenger train No. 1 for New Orleans on the Louisville and Nashville Railway was wrecked by being derailed two miles below Greenville, Ala., and 47 miles south of Montgomery at 8.30 Saturday morning. The train was going at the rate of 50 miles an hour when the rails spread and the tender of the engine jumped the track and the combination mail, baggage and express car, smoking car and two passenger cars were thrown over the embankment and plowed into the mud. The first Pullman left the rails, while the other sleepers and a private car of the C. & A. railway with officials on board remained on the track. G. B. Walsh, of Birmingham, Ala., thought to have been a barber, was instantly killed and many were injured, some seriously.

Our Brotherly Neighbors.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Feb. 25.—A Washington special to an evening paper says: Mr. Chas. A. Chickering, of Copenhagen, N.Y., who represents the Oswego district in the House, will be given a place on the Foreign Affairs Committee in the next Congress. He is anxious to push his bill to retaliate against Canada for her discrimination against American shipowners and he believes he can subserve this purpose better by being a member of the committee with whom such legislation originates. He will have the support of the New York delegation and the influence of New Yorkers with Reed will be very great.

To Decorate Journalists and Authors.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—A special London cable says: Fleet and Grub streets are in a state of pleasurable emotion on the apparently well founded announcement that the Queen is elaborating a scheme for establishing a literary order of merit for the recognition of those who as journalists or writers of books have done good work. There are to be three grades, as in most other orders, the first consisting of twenty-four knights of the grand cross, the second of 100 knights commanders and the third of 250 companions. British literature and journalism are pretty poor just now in great men and one shudders to think of the mediocrieties who will get the new decorations if the three classes are even half filled.

The Road at Sea.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The President has signed the joint resolution of Congress postponing the new rules of the road at sea which, according to Presidential proclamation, should have gone into effect March 1st. A new proclamation is expected Monday and every effort will be made by wide publicity to warn American seamen that the new regulations which have been generally circulated are to be ignored. It will be necessary for the navy department to send cablegrams to several warships to prevent them from putting the new code into operation March 1st.

Curious News From Russia.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Some rather curious news comes from Russia. The fact that the telegraphic censure, so strict in Russia, allows despatches announcing troubles in the universities to pass proves that something very much more serious must be taking place in the political world. It is asserted that the Czar has received threatening letters from the Nihilists. It is necessary to receive the news with great caution, but it appears probable that it is true.

A Cure for Insanity.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The Daily Chronicle's Vienna correspondent says: Prof. Wagner, of Vienna University, expounded a cure for insanity to the medical society. He injected Koch's tuberculine, causing a fever, after which the insanity diminished. He repeated the treatment a few times, each injection lessening the insanity until eventually it vanished.

The prices won't scare you, either. If you buy your Hats at GOUGH'S you'll soon find out that you save just 20 per cent.

We sell easy fitting, durable Shoes, with all the style put on to them that such artistic makers as Slater & Son, of Montreal, can invent. We have all intermediate makes, as well as the cheaper grades from Lower Canada, where they don't pay much for making—sometimes nothing at all.

AMERICANS ARE ANGRY

Because Cranston was Deported From Hawaii.

MINISTER WILLIS CALLED DOWN

The Eagle Screams and Will Make a Diplomatic Demonstration of Extreme Firmness—If Sentences Are Carried Out on Americans For Will Fly.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The Administration has adopted a most rigorous policy to be applied to the government of Hawaii, in some red-hot instructions sent to Minister Willis. With the instructions have been sent a letter of censure for Mr. Willis' benefit. Both the President and Secretary Gresham are very angry with him for not preventing the deportation of the American Cranston, who was sentenced without being given a trial. The President thinks that Willis was lacking in courage upon this occasion, and that he should have called out the marines from the Philadelphia and prevented the departure of Cranston until he had had a hearing upon the charges against him. In the despatches, which should reach him in a few days, Minister Willis is instructed to take every means in his power to prevent the execution of the two Americans who have been condemned to death. This may mean war upon the Hawaiin government. If the sentences upon the two Americans are executed before the receipt of these instructions by Mr. Willis, Secretary Gresham proposes to make it hot for the youthful republic. The administration thinks this will fire the hearts of the people of this country, and that it will regain the prestige it has lost.

In the House yesterday the principal item under discussion in Committee of the Whole was the amendment offered by Mr. Breckenridge (Dem., Ky.) to appropriate $425,000 to carry out the agreement made by Secretary Gresham and Sir Julian Pauncefote, British Ambassador, last August to pay the British Government for the claims on account of the seizures and warnings of vessels engaged in the fur seal traffic. The committee on appropriations, by a tie vote, refused to incorporate the item in the bill to be reported to the House. In the Committee of the Whole the agreement was agreed to by a small majority, but in the House, on a call of the yeas and nays, it was defeated by 143 to 112.

The Senate began yesterday the last week of the 53rd Congress with the consideration of the great appropriation bill. No less than four hours time was occupied in the discussion of the amendment reported from the committee on appropriations to acquire for the Government Mrs. Blaine's interest in the Blaine property on Lafayette square, Washington, paying her $150,000 for it, besides an indefinite amount for the cancellation of the lease, estimated at $30,000, but stated by the opponents of the measure as an amount equal to the purchase money. Amendments requiring "a complete and perfect title," and "a fee simple title" were voted down and finally the committee amendment slightly modified was agreed to. An amendment was also agreed to for the purchase of sites for public buildings at the Capitals of Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho and Washington, the cost of none of the buildings to exceed, including site, $120,000.

Mr. Ryan (N. Y.,) from the Committee on Railways and Canals reported to the House yesterday the resolution of Mr. Cooper (Ind.,) providing for the appointment of a commission to make a survey of a ship canal from the southern shore of Lake Michigan to the Wabash River.

That Railway Question.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—There will be a meeting of the Trunk lines with the Western Trunk committe next Friday, when the former will be asked to discipline the Grand Trunk for continuing to pay commissions on immigrant business at Canadian ports. In return for this favor, if it is granted, the Western lines will pledge themselves to refrain from paying commissions in the territory of their eastern connections. The advisory committee of the immigrant clearing house, has been trying to settle this question which is quite likely to become a serious one unless promptly settled.

NERVY THIEVES, THESE

A Young Woman Gagged in Broad Daylight.

WHILE THE TILL WAS LOOTED

And This on One of Toronto's Principal Thoroughfares—Dalton Gang Imitators Do Some Decidedly Bold Work—The Robbers Fled When Alarmed.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—In broad daylight, while the blue-coated guardians of the peace sauntered along the street firm in the belief that a mill of justice was in operation every day except Sundays and legal holidays on Court street were enough to make a man think twice before even attempting to break a city by-law, a robbery was committed which rivalled the most famous deeds of that notorious band—the Dalton imitators—which is now serving out different lengths of terms in Kingston penitentiary.

It happened on Queen street west yesterday afternoon about half-past three o'clock. At 186 1-2 William Weisser keeps a tobacco store. His daughter, a young lady of 17, was in the shop when two men entered. One asked for a package of cigarets. While she was engaged in complying with their request one of the men sneaked behind the counter and grabbed the girl by the arms.

At the same time he put his hand over her mouth, but finding that an ineffectual damper he pulled a handkerchief from his pocket and shoved it in her mouth, thus preventing her from making any outcry.

Then he dragged the young girl into a back room and held her there while his companion proceeded to loot the store. When he had ransacked the till he became alarmed, and, calling to his companion to follow, he rushed out of the store and ran up Queen street west. The other robber left his victim and followed in his footsteps.

As soon as the girl recovered her senses she rushed out into the street screaming at the top of her voice. When a coherent account of the robbery had been obtained from her the "day-lighters" had disappeared onto some side street.

T. H. & B. RAILWAY.

Work Being Rapidly Pushed—A Strange Disappearance of Valuables.

HAMILTON, Feb. 26.—Work on the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway is now being rushed on at a lively rate. A gang of men worked all day Saturday, and with favorable weather and the gang working night and day, it is expected the road from Garth street, Hamilton, to the city of Brantford will be completed by the end of this week. It is unlikely any of the laborers will get back pay till the road is finished.

A package of coupons representing $20,000 which was given to Ernest Clarke, a messenger in the Canada Life Assurance Company, to mail at the postoffice, has been lost and no trace of it can be found. Clarke admits he failed to post the package, but does not know what disposal he made of it. Under certain circumstances the coupons can be cashed by the finder. The police have been acquainted with all the circumstances and every effort is being made to trace the lost package.

IS HERBERT RECALLED?

He Leaves Ottawa, and, It Is Said, Will Not Return.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—The fact that Lord and Lady Aberdeen called on Major-General Herbert and Mrs. Herbert yesterday has given rise to the report that the Major-General may not return again to Canada. It is well known here that ever since the suspension of Adjutant-General Powell by the Major-General and his being speedily reinstated by Mr. Patterson, there has been considerable friction between the minister and the major-general commanding.

Premier Davie, of British Columbia, was notified by the Minister of Justice that he was appointed chief justice of the province.

Col. Allan Gilmour died here last night. He was one of Canada's best known and most widely respected citizens. He was 79 years of age.

West Durham's Member Safe.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—The Court of Appeal decided yesterday that William H. Reid, Conservative member-elect for West Durham, was entitled to his seat in the Legislature. The court found that the kidnapping charge against the member had been proven, and held that it was a corrupt act but that it in itself was not enough to influence the election either way. Unless a general system of corruption is shown, the new act provides one corrupt act cannot render an election void. The petition was, therefore, dismissed with costs.

Politicians Down by the Sea.

HALIFAX, Feb. 26.—The Liberal delegates from the different electoral districts in city and county met last night and on the first ballot selected G. W. Weldon by two thirds majority as candidate for the county. J. V. Ellis was the unanimous choice for the city. This ticket was received with great satisfaction to the Liberal party generally.

A Provincial Convention.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—The Methodist Young People's Association of Ontario commenced its fourth annual convention in the Elm street church yesterday. Up to Saturday night the names of 500 delegates who are coming were received, and it is expected with about 100 city representatives there will be between 700 and 800 present from associations in Ontario and Quebec.

Severe Fighting on the West Coast of Africa.

BRITISH SEAMEN IN ACTION

A Severe Lesson Administered to the Natives of the Guinea Grass Coast—Losses on Both Sides—Welsh Disestablishment Severely Criticised.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Advices received from Rear Admiral Frederick George D. Bedford, in command of the Cape of Good Hope and West Africa station, who has been co-operating with the land forces of the British expedition on the Brassey sure Guinea coast, confirm the report of severe fighting in that locality. The admiral adds that Lieutenant Taylor, of the royal navy, and two men were killed and five men were wounded during the engagement. Some details of the engagement were received here yesterday. The British, it appears, advanced up the Brassey river on February 23 in steam launches and the same day they captured several rebel strongholds and destroyed a number of war canoes. Many of the natives were killed and the main body of the rebels retreated into the interior. On the following day the British advanced further inland and after some sharp fighting captured and burned the native town of Nimbi. The natives, who lost heavily, fled from Nimbi to the town of Bassouva. They were followed by the British, who shelled the last-mentioned town, but did not proceed any further inland. Sir Claude MacDonald, who personally directed the operations, then sent an ultimatum to the rebels notifying them that unless they surrendered and gave up the prisoners which they had captured at Akassa a month ago and restored the booty which they obtained at that place a further attack would be made upon them.

The operations were carried out in a brilliant manner. Several of the Niger protectorate Houssas were wounded. A later despatch from Admiral Bedford says that the British expedition consisted of the gunboats Widgeon, six guns, Lieut. Commander William J. Scullard, and the Thrush, six guns, Lieut. Commander Henry L. Tottenham, and two steamers belonging to the Niger protectorate, as well as the boats of the flagship St. George containing a detachment of marines. On February 21 the rebels in 25 war canoes made an attack upon the British force at Sacrifice Island. But the fire of the natives was ineffective and three war canoes were sunk, after which the rest of the canoes retired. On the following day the intricate channels of the Brassey river were buoyed, and the creek reconnoitered. "At daybreak on February 23," says the Admiral's despatch, "we commenced the attack and after an obstinate defence of a position which was naturally difficult, a landing was gallantly effected and Nimbi and completely burned. The force was withdrawn on the evening following, after the residence of King Koko and the houses of the other chiefs had been destroyed.

Mr. Asquith, speaking on the Welsh disestablishment bill, said the bill proposed that the church should cease to be established in Wales and Monmouth in January, 1897; that provision be made for the formation of a representative body made up from the clergy and laity, to which power should be given to legislate ecclesiastical matters; that the church should be transferred to this body and the glebes to the parish districts and town councils, and that other property vested in the church be placed in the hands of a commission of clergymen who should receive their present emoluments during their lives, the income from the remainder of the property to be used in the erection and maintenance of hospitals, dispensaries and convalescent homes; to provide nurses for the sick poor; for laborers' dwelling allotments; and for higher education. The opponents of the bill, he said, might accuse them of attempting to secularize religious funds, but the Government held that the purposes mentioned were truly religious and that there would be no profanation of a fund dedicated to pious uses in applying it to the relief of the suffering. The bill was conceived in an honest desire to satisfy a genuine demand of a vast majority of the Welsh people with the least possible detriment to the interests of the church.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Conservative, for West Bristol, answered Mr. Asquith with great energy. He characterized as sheer political cant the Home Secretary's remarks as to the appropriation of church property for charitable uses. The Government proposals, he said, were without precedent in English history and would be resented by millions of Englishmen and women. Even in the Irish disestablishment there had been provisions for re-organization by allowing persons with vested interests to commute and compound them for the benefit of the new church body. Thus refounded the church had been able to assume something like its old position. The present bill debarred a similar course in Wales.

CAMPAIGN ISSUES

The Tory Mayor of Peterborough has introduced the put-up-or-shut-up mode of carrying on the tariff controversy, but so far has not been fortunate in selecting his ground. He offered to bet $100 with Mr. McCarthy and Col. O'Brien that cotton goods are as cheap or cheaper in Canada than in England, and they took him up. If Mr. Kendry had looked at the trade returns he would not have got into this scrape. In 1892 we imported dutiable cotton goods—raw cotton is free—of the value of $4,500,000, chiefly from England and the United States. The duty was 1,200,000, or 25 per cent. all round. Mr. Kendry would have us believe that if we had chosen to do so we could have got these goods as cheap at home as their cost abroad, and so have saved the $1,200,000—a proposition which reflects upon our sanity. If he says that these were classes of goods not manufactured by our mills he is mistaken. Here is one case in point out of many—Dyed cotton sateens used for light dress goods and linings are manufactured in Canada. The duty on them is 30 per cent.; it used to be 33½. If anyone in Peterborough wants to "gamble on a sure thing" at Mr. Kendry's expense, The Globe will send him two samples of sateen, one English, the other Canadian; the English is 30 inches wide, the Canadian only 26; the English is as good if not better material than the Canadian, yet, while the English has to pay 30 per cent. duty and something more for freight and other charges, it is laid down in Toronto cheaper than the Canadian. In other lines, especially in bleached and unbleached cottons, the duty is heavy enough to enable the Canadian combine to sell as cheaply as British and American mills, but of course if it were repealed the Canadian manufacturer would have to bring the price of his cottons down to the competitive point. To put it differently, the prices of the big combine here are, speaking generally, higher than foreign prices by very nearly the amount of the duty. The last thing a sensible Tory would bring to notice is the so-called development of the cotton industry under the N.P. By his duties and clap-on-all-sail speech Sir Leonard Tilley induced an enormous lot of capital to rush into the business. The output soon exceeded the home demand, and the cost of production was too high to admit of profitable exporting on a large scale. Temporary agreements to regulate the supply and keep the home price up were established, which involved the closing down of mills, but these were frequently violated. At last a number of capitalists came on the scene and acquired the mills for less than the amount sunk in them, several millions of money being wiped out in this manner, and set up a permanent combine, which is "holding up" the consumer at the old stand in the way described.—The Globe.

Mr. Mayor Kendry is developing into a decided "sport" and scatters round his wagers as readily as an habitue of the race track. In the Opera House, on Feb. 25th, 1891, at the time of the general election, he interrupted Mr. John Crerar, of Hamilton, who was speaking in the Liberal interest, and disputed one of his statements, and the following night at a Conservative meeting in the same place, the sportive mayor wagered $500 in support of the correctness of a statement he had made. And it will be remembered that in January, 1893, Mr. Kendry made a bet of $100 that there was no deficit in the town finances that year and that sum is due the poor of the town. Before the mayor settles up with Mr. McCarthy and Col. O'Brien, he had better pay over to Mr. John Sawers, the chairman of the Charity Committee, that $100. If our worthy mayor continues to accumulate "debts of honour" at this rate he would seem to be in danger of having a deficit in his personal accounts similar to that the town accumulated under his administration. It is gratifying that the Globe has noticed Mr. Kendry's betting proclivities. It should be a source of pride to Peterborough—the premier town of Ontario—that it possesses a chief magistrate whose lofty appreciation of the ethics of the discussion of public affairs, finds expression in the phraseology and practice of the prize ring.

An Infant Trouble too Often Neglected.

Lactated Food Corrects and Aids Digestion.

Thousands of babies and young children suffer from irritability of the stomach. This trouble is common to-day, and too often neglected by mothers.

Poorly prepared foods are responsible for the majority of the evils that infants suffer from. These common foods are so crude, heavy and indigestible, that, were they used by an adult of strong constitution, indigestion and dyspepsia would certainly result in less than a week.

Stomach irritation and nausea is quickly banished when children are fed on Lactated Food. This food agrees with the weakest stomach and is retained when other foods are promptly ejected. Lactated Food is a true nourisher of all the digestive organs, and puts but little work upon the stomach and bowels. Infants and young children with impaired digestion and failing appetite should be fed regularly on Lactated Food.

Doctors recommend Norway Pine Syrup because it is the best cure for coughs, colds. Price 25c. per bottle.

DOMESTIC INFELICITY.

The Old, Old Story of a Strong But Unholy Passion.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 26.—Frederick L. Bebbington, an investment agent, was married in Ottawa in 1887 to a prominent society lady in that city. Business did not prosper in Canada and the family removed to this city where Bebbington opened an office and began to cut a swarth of considerable width in local society. There was some trouble a couple of years ago when Mrs. Bebbington attempted to have deported a young girl named "Flossie" Shepherd, whom she had adopted in Canada, but who did not turn out to the satisfaction of the Bebbingtons. She lacked the moral tone necessary for a family of such religious pretensions, Bebbington being a trustee of Asbury church and Mrs Bebbington an earnest moral reformer and a member in nearly all the women's societies and charitable workers' associations of the city. Now Mrs. Bebbington has brought an action for divorce from Frederick, and Frederick, according to the complaint in this action, is a fugitive, being afraid to return to Buffalo lest he shall be prosecuted for the embezzlement of certain moneys entrusted to him.

Mr. Bebbington went to England last October on business and there met Miss Aries, the daughter of a wealthy merchant of London, and became infatuated with her and she with him. She came to this country to meet him, as he represented to her, so it is said, that he had an action for divorce pending and would marry her as soon as he was free to do so under the laws of this country.

The complaint alleges that the parties lived together at the Imperial hotel, Niagara Falls, Ont., and in New York city, and further states that since November 1st last Bebbington has been but once in this city and that was after nightfall on the 17th of December. He then returned to Niagara Falls, Ont., where he and Miss Aries remained until January 19th, when they went to Detroit, Mich. It is known that Bebbington is now in Sioux Falls, S.D., and it is believed that Miss Aries is with him. He has gone there for the purpose of securing a divorce.

Mrs. Bebbington's lawyer had an interview with Miss Aries last month, in which that lady frankly told him that Mr. Bebbington had gone west to get a divorce and that as soon as this was accomplished she and Bebbington would sail for London and would be married at her home there. This consummation she expected would be reached about April 1. Miss Aries has a brother in Baltimore, Md., a well-to-do business man.

Safe Blowers Shoot an Officer.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Feb. 26.—The First National Bank of Griswold was entered by burglars. They blew open the vault doors and then drilled the front door of the time lock safe, put in dynamite and closed the vault doors. The charge used was evidently much heavier than intended, as it totally wrecked the vault, doing over $3,500 damage to the safe and building. The noise of the explosion was so great that the burglars made a hasty departure. Over $400 worth of stamps belonging to the postmaster and $120 in cash are known to have been taken. The burglar-proof safe inside the vault contained $90,000 in cash, but this was not touched. Three men supposed to have committed the burglary were arrested. As they were being led to the jail they drew revolvers and fired. One policeman was badly wounded and will probably die. One of the thieves was shot. Only two of the men were recaptured.

Death Came Suddenly.

BUFFALO, Feb. 26.—John A. Burch, general agent of the Lake Shore and M. S. road, left his office at the close of business late yesterday afternoon and went to market to make some purchases. While picking up his parcels he suddenly reeled and fell to the floor dead. He began his railroad career in Canada and for two years from 1855 to 1857 was division clerk in the office of the general agent of the Great Western in Hamilton. Since 1857 he has been connected with the Lake Shore. He was 68 years of age.

Twenty Guns Failed.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—A Central News despatch from Tokio dated Feb. 22 says that on Feb. 21 the Chinese made another attack upon Hai Cheng Ko from Tong Washan with four guns, from Laoyang with six guns, and from Natsun with ten guns. The attack was not successful, the Chinese being repulsed and forced to retreat. The Japanese lost six killed. The Chinese loss is uncertain, but the attacking force from Tong Washan alone left 100 dead behind them.

Rosebery's Idea of a United Race.

BUFFALO, Feb. 26.—An Irish-American resident of this city has received a letter from Lord Rosebery in which the Premier says he is very desirous of furthering the most cordial relations among the Anglo-Saxon race in all parts of the world. A union of the English-speaking people of the earth could, he feels assured, do more for the advancement of peace and amity and universal brotherhood than anything else.

Revolutionary Threatenings.

HAVANA, Feb. 26.—The apprehension of a revolution are increasing. The Governor-General has put in effect the public order law throughout the island. This law provides for the immediate punishment of anybody taken in a seditious act. Some 500 men have defied the authorities and called for rebel recruits at Ybarra near Matanzas and trouble is reported also from Guantanamo.

Cremated in Their Home.

DAYTON, O., Feb. 26.—The home of G. W. Weaver and wife, an aged couple living two and one half miles southwest of Trottwood, Montgomery county, was burned last night. The fire was not discovered until shortly after four o'clock this morning. The charred bones of Weaver and his wife were found in the ruins. It is thought robbers committed the deed.

School Teachers Beware!

A Profession Not Overpaid that has Many Dangers.

BADLY VENTILATED SCHOOLS AND CONTACT WITH DISEASE.

Paine's Celery Compound Cleanses the Blood and Keeps up Strength and Vitality.

It Banishes Languor, Despondency and Irritability.

The majority of our public school teachers, male and female, have many dangers to face in a profession that is never overpaid.

Many teachers are suffering to-day from maladies and diseases contracted in crowded and badly ventilated school buildings; the seeds of fatal troubles are taken into the system from imperfect drainage, and contact with children who carry infectious diseases from their homes.

At this moment hundreds of school teachers are invalids, or go about the performance of their duties in a half-dead way. Nervous troubles are prevalent amongst teachers; headache, dyspepsia, languor, irritability and despondency are common troubles, and make life truly miserable.

The school teachers' friend and life-giver, Paine's Celery Compound, has done a wondrous work in the ranks of the afflicted ones. During the year 1894 scores of cases have come before our notice, of sick and suffering ones having been restored to new life, energy and activity through the use of nature's wonderful medicine.

Paine's Celery Compound has been a true blessing to every teacher who used it. The great medicine has done its work promptly and efficaciously. It always begins its operations at the great nerve centres; it cleanses and purifies the blood, and takes all impurities from the system; it strengthens every digestive organ, and builds up the entire system. Every school teacher in the land, male and female, should use Paine's Celery Compound if sound health and perfect bodily strength is desired.

Knowles Sent to Jail.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Feb. 26.—Albert Knowles, who has resided at Thorold, Dunnville and Niagara Falls South in Canada, charged with obtaining false naturalization papers, was yesterday remanded to jail in default of $1,000 bail for trial at the United States district court at Utica in March. The principal witness against Knowles was James Welton, of Tonawanda, who was a neighbor and friend of the prisoner when both lived in Canada.

Another Embezzler.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Feb. 26.—Walker G. Hanner, teller of the First National Bank, has been arrested for misappropriating funds of the institution. The bank officials last night announced the shortage of $25,841.

Another Shake.

TACOMA, Wash., Feb. 26.—Two slight shocks of earthquake were felt here and at Sumner, twelve miles distant, at eight o'clock last evening.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Feb. 26, 1895.

On the street one load of red wheat brought 64 1-2c.; 100 bushels of barley 48c. and 100 of oats 36 1-2 to 37 1-2c. Outside prices were unchanged with little business doing.

The bears were more aggressive at the stock exchange, New York. Their increased activity and the consequent decline in prices were due to the passing of the Canadian Pacific to the non-dividend paying list; the practical defeat of the Patterson railroad pooling bill in the Senate on Saturday last and the firmness of sterling exchange, the posted rate for demand bills having been advanced 1-2 to 4.89 1-2. Actual rates are now higher than at any time since the bond syndicate began its operations and the selling figures are close to the gold exporting point.

At London the influence of the passing of the Canadian Pacific dividend and the weakness of the Paris Bourse flattened all the markets. Canada Pacifics were down, closing at the lowest. Americans and Grand Trunks have fallen sympathetically. The new American loan is at 4 3-4 per cent. premium. More gold is being purchased for America. It cannot be learned how much. Money is scarce. The Bank of England has lent largely to-day.

DREAMS THAT COME.

STRANGE FANTASIES OF THE DAY TROUBLE US IN SLEEP.

A Few Examples of Disturbed Slumber That Illustrate a Bright Remark Made by an Illustrious Poet—Remarkable Experiences In Sleep.

A lawyer who had been overworked rose in his sleep, went into the hall of his house and discharged a pistol. The household hurried to the place and found him at the head of the stairway, awake, but much bewildered. He had dreamed of burglars and had gone to attack them. One member of the family slept through the noise. When he came into the dining room—before he had heard of the events of the night—he complained that his sleep had been much disturbed. He had dreamed that he had been condemned to be shot, that he had been led to the place of execution and had fallen senseless when the guns were fired.

A lady dreamed that a man came into her room, poured some water into a basin, carried the splashing water to her bedside and began to sprinkle it over her. She awoke and heard a loud splashing. At first she was motionless with fear, but presently she lighted a candle and went to the basin, where she found a mouse making frantic efforts to get out of the water.

Another dreamed that she had a severe earache, that she rose, unlocked a door that separated her room from one in which two children slept and went to a shelf where was a lotion which she applied to her ear. When she awoke, she found herself in her own bed and without pain. The door was still locked, but in a few minutes one of the children began to cry that his ear ached, and she rose and went to the shelf for the lotion.

A young man dreamed that he was in his office, busy with a troublesome estimate, when a woman came in with a screaming baby and began to walk rapidly up and down the room, so that it was impossible for the calculator to remember his figures. Presently the woman thrust the child into his arms, and he was so startled by this that he awoke, but the screams still troubled his ears, for a mother in a neighboring room was walking about vainly trying to quiet a crying child.

Another incident appears to be a case of thought transference. Several years after the death of her husband, a widow, lying awake one night, recalled vividly some scenes of her husband's last illness. Presently her daughter, who was beside her, awoke and said, "Oh, mamma, I have been going over in my dreams all the scenes of papa's illness." She then told her dream, in which the scenes were almost the counterpart of those that had been recalled by her mother.

Dreamers sometimes answer questions and carry on more or less coherent conversations.

A lady had a summer cottage on an island in Muskoka. One night her sons were stormstaid on the mainland, and a young English visitor went to sleep full of apprehension that Indians might visit the house while their protectors were absent.

In the night the hostess was suddenly roused by some one clutching her arm, and when she opened her eyes she saw her guest standing by the bedside.

"Oh, Mrs. Laughton, Mrs. Laughton," exclaimed the girl in a hoarse whisper, "there's a man at the window—an Indian. He's gone to get something to climb in by."

The next moment Eva was fumbling about on the floor.

"What are you doing?" asked Mrs. Laughton.

"I have some liniment in my valise," was the answer. "I'm going to get it out, and when he puts his head through the window again I'll throw it in his eyes."

Mrs. Laughton, who was not nervous, began to laugh, but Eva paid no attention and presently asked, "Where's the button hook?"

"What do you want it for?"

"Why, Mrs. Laughton," said Eva aloud, and in a very indignant tone, "do you think I would allow myself to be seen anywhere with my shoes unbuttoned? No man would respect that kind of girl."

In the morning when Mrs. Laughton awoke and looked across the room to Eva's bed she saw the girl sitting up, gazing with dismay at her crookedly buttoned shoes in which she had slept. She had no recollection of the remarks she had made in the night, and it was evident that she had been asleep all the time.

One night in camp I heard a peculiar sound near the middle of the tent, and by the dim light I saw one of the campers apparently trying to climb up the tentpole.

"What are you doing?" I asked.

"There's a snake in my bed," she answered, "so I'm going to sleep up there."

"Up there?"

"Yes, why not? It will be more comfortable."

Then, with a sudden change of tone, she exclaimed, "I forgot to say my prayers." But instead of kneeling she picked her way through the tent to the foot of one of the beds and lay there till morning. She did not remember the conversation of the night, but told us that she had a habit of talking in her sleep, and that she had often conversed with her sisters while she was sleeping soundly.—M. Bourchier Sanford in Kate Field's Washington.

ALD. A. F. STAGG, OF BROCKVILLE, ONT.

Restored to Perfect Health by South American Nervine.

Had Tried all the Local Doctors, but Failed to be Benefited.

Visited Massena Springs, but Returned in Despair—To-day Enjoys Perfect Health After Taking Nervine.

ALD. A. F. STAGG, BROCKVILLE, ONT.

A citizen whose influence carries a good premium in the growing town of Brockville is Ald. A. F. Stagg, an extensive stock dealer in that section of the province. For over fifty years he has carried on business in Brockville. The people know the man. How much he has accomplished during this half century in building up the municipality is known to them, and they have been ready to show their appreciation of these labors by making him a town father. Mr. Stagg, however, failed just where so many other men of active and aggressive temperament fail, namely, in exceeding his strength. About two years ago his nervous system became broken and shattered, and he was unable to do work of any kind. This was a serious blow to a man of so active a temperament, and with the volume of business he had on hand. He did, as any one else would do, and which is the natural thing to do, sought the assistance of the local doctors of the place. He tried not only one but all of them. Whatever the trouble was they seemed unable to master it, and did him no good. He went to Kingston, hoping to find greater medical skill in the Limestone City. He was no better off for his trouble. A friend influenced him to visit Massena Springs, it being believed that the peculiar charm that surrounds that spot would have its effect in giving back to Mr. Stagg his lost health. But it was simply a case of history repeating itself everything failed, and he remained home in utter despair, seeing nothing but early death before him. His neighbor, a Mrs. Johnston, who had been using Nervine with great success, recommended him to try a bottle. It cannot be said that he did so with any bright hopes of being benefited. To his great delight, however, he found almost instant relief. After taking several bottles he to-day says, in his own words, that he enjoys perfect health. To those who do not know the particular virtues of South American Nervine all this may sound like a miracle. Here was a man whose condition was known to every one in Brockville, for everyone knew Ald. Stagg, who was completely broken up in health, and whose disease the best medical skill could not relieve, much less remove, and yet a few bottles of this wonderful discovery, Nervine, gives back to him the health that two years previous he had completely lost. This is what Nervine will do in every case. Physicians fail usually because they doctor, as it were, on the surface. Nervine succeeds in every case because it immediately acts upon the nerve centers of the body, from which, as science has unmistakably demonstrated, flows the life blood of the system. When these nerve centers are kept in healthful condition disease that may exist in any part of the body speedily becomes an unknown thing.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Pags,
Enough to forward when of age.
Then went home, but stop, I miss,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home.
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
Enough to forward when of age.
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

The Grand Board.

The Grand Board of the Patrons of Industry met at the Grand Union Hotel, Toronto, last night, and will continue in session until Thursday, when it will be joined by the representatives of the Executive bodies of Quebec and Manitoba, who will come for the purpose of assisting in the organization of the Patrons of the Dominion for the coming campaign. The Dominion organization will not be a permanent affair; it will only continue while the fight is on, and when the necessity for its existence ceases it will be dissolved. The date of the meeting of the Grand Association has not yet been determined.

Runaway Accidents.

Last evening while driving on George street, Mr. James Fairweather pulled out from the level portion of the street to allow a farmer to pass, but as the roadway was most uneven one of the sleigh runners caught in a rut with the result that both the occupants of the sleigh were thrown out and the horse made a break for liberty. Before the animal was stopped the handsome cutter was almost ruined. Fortunately neither Mr. Fairweather nor his man were injured. Another upset occurred on George street this afternoon, and it is understood several suits for damages will be instituted against the town on account of accidents resulting from the alleged poor condition of the streets.

ELVES GOES TO THE CENTRAL FOR SIX MONTHS.

His Faulty Education to Blame for his Misfortunes.

James Elves, of Millbrook, the clothes-wringer fiend, was this morning sentenced to six months at hard labour in the Central Prison by Police Magistrate Dumble. The prisoner states his intention of appealing the case on the ground that the evidence was improperly taken.

Elves, it will be remembered, victimised a number of Peterborough citizens last August by taking their clothes-wringers to mend and not returning them. He was arrested in Trenton some few weeks ago on a charge of having practised the same "fake" in Colborne. Some of the charges were not proven, however, but on one he was convicted but allowed to go on a suspended sentence. He was tried on these charges in Cobourg and was brought from there to Peterborough.

This morning Mrs. John Stanger testified to Elves having taken a wringer of hers to mend, and returning it to her as perfect and receiving $1.50 for his work. The wringer, however, not working properly was again taken by Elves but never returned.

Mrs. Rae, of Auburn, in her evidence stated that Elves had taken a wringer from her in order to cement the rubbers more firmly for which he was to receive fifty cents. The wringer was never seen again by Mrs. Rae.

Miss Anglesia trusted a sewing machine to Elves to be repaired, but the man didn't return it to her, although she received it this morning, as Elves told where it was to be found.

The defence of the prisoner was to the effect that being uneducated he was unable to either read or write, and so did not know to whom to return the wringers. He harped on the plea too much, however, and the Magistrate, while sympathising with him in his misfortune, thought it too strange to be credited that his faulty education was to blame in almost every town in which he had transacted business.

A number of the young bachelors of Peterborough held a most pleasant assembly in the Foresters' hall, Hunter street, last evening. Invasion of Pretty Milliners.

The semi-annual invasion of the pretty but business-like milliner occurred yesterday, says the Toronto Globe, and she was much in evidence in the wholesale section of the city. Committee on Appointments.

Councillor E. B. Stone has returned from his trip to the country and has made an explanation in regard to his absence from Friday's meeting of the Council, which entirely acquits him of all blame in the matter. Mr. Stone and his wife and child, it appears, became stuck in a snow drift while driving back to Peterborough, when about thirteen miles from town. Their situation for some time was one of extreme peril. Mr. Stone has called a meeting of the Committee on Appointments for this evening to discuss the last report with regard to which no action was taken in the council.

THE RUGBY CLUB'S AMATEUR MINSTRELS

IN BRADBURN'S OPERA HOUSE LAST EVENING.

The Presentation of the Programme a Great Success—A Crowded House Greets the Boys—Presentation to Mr. John Crane, Musical Director.

The programme presented by the Rugby football club amateur minstrel troupe in the opera house was a great success. Everything went smoothly, there was a crowded house, the end men were of the wittiest, the choruses above criticism and the boys have every reason to congratulate themselves on the result of their effort.

The entertainment was opened with a hidden chorus, which was rendered with remarkably good effect. The orchestra's interpretation of "Ten Thousand Devils" was most spirited.

THE CURTAIN ROLLED UP

disclosing a chorus of burnt cork artists composed of several score of voices. Mr. Will Johnston occupied a seat in the centre of the assemblage and during the evening discharged his duties as interlocutor, in a in a highly satisfactory manner. The eight witty end men were Messrs. Dan Simons, R. P. Strickland, Harry Neil, F. Lount, F. Burritt, H. J. B. Dunsford, J. H. Jones and J. H. Ames. The ball of fun and merriment was started rolling by a general conversation of a most witty character, sparkling with brilliant repartee, which was carried on between the end men and the interlocutor.

A ballad by Mr. F. Lount entitled "When summer comes again" was well sung, the chorus being a particularly fine one. Mr. H. J. B. Dunsford's "You'll be an angel bye and bye" brought from the audience, its ringing chorus being well received, as was the solo part.

Mr. R. J. Hiller's song, entitled "A curl from baby's head," was a particularly pleasing ballad, sung in good voice.

Mr. Danny Simons' appearance was the signal for vociferous applause, and his rendition of "The Band on Bradburn's Block" was intensely funny. The step dance in connection showed that "Danny's" heels had lost none of their lightness.

The chorus of "Tommy Atkins" was sung with great gusto, the solo part being taken by Mr. Fred Burritt.

THE MUSICAL TREAT

of the evening was heard when the "Song of the Steeple" was rendered in perfect tone and harmony by a quartette composed of Messrs. Herbert King, R. J. Hiller, Alex. Elliott and Mr. Mackenzie. The audience fully appreciated this musical gem.

The end sang "Mit a Letle Buch of Vhiskers on his Chin," by Mr. J. H. Jones, was very amusing and R. H. Strickland's "Rowdy Dowdy Boys," with its ringing chorus took well with the audience.

Through all this part of the programme, between the rendition of the various numbers, the end men kept up a running fire of wit and some excellent local hits were made which were well received.

Part second opened with a pleasing selection by the orchestra, after which Mr. Dan. Simons delighted the audience by a clogged as only Danny can. A repetition of the number was insisted upon, when a sand jig was well danced.

FANCY CLOG DANCE,

The slack wire performance of Mr. Harry LaBelle was one of the special features of the evening, which contributed to raise the performance to one away above the average. The audience held its breath while this skilful and daring young fellow balanced himself on chairs and ladders in mid-air, while only supported by a wire of such infinitesemal size as to be invisible to the audience.

An instrumental by the members of the banjo club is especially worthy of praise. The club is comprised of Messrs. McGill, Dunsford, Lefevre, Burnham and Wonham, and so well did they render their number as to call for to which they kindly responded.

Mr. LaBelle in his thrilling trapeze and balancing acts was a wonder indeed. At one time he was sitting on a chair balanced on a trapeze at a great height, when with a shout man, chair and everything else seemed to get mixed, and a shriek of terror went up from the ladies. In another second, however, it was discovered that this was simply a part of the performance, as LaBelle was seen to be hanging by his toes from the trapeze in safety.

A merry ten minutes was next spent with Mr. Dan Simons, when he gave an exhibition of a knockabout song and dance in an inimitably funny manner.

Much enthusiasm was manifested over

THE FANCY DRILL PERFORMED

by sixteen members of the Rugby football club, who under the instruction of Sergt. R. J. Hiller of No. 6 Co., 57th Batt., had become most proficient. The various difficult evriutions were performed with a regularity and precision which called for round after round of applause.

The spectacular extravaganza, "The Trained Giraffe," (pronounced with a hard "G") was an irresistible provocation to laughter and was in fact the most humourous feature of the programme.

The darkey sermon of Bro. "Rastus" by Mr. Harry Neil was rich indeed. In this line it would be hard indeed to find genial Harry's equal.

The programme was brought to a close

WITH THE SCREAMING FARCE

"The Asylum," in which Messrs. Dan. Simons, LaBelle Bros., Will. McClelland and Robert Hay took the principal parts.

The orchestra parts were kindly arranged gratis by Prof. George Arnold, late of Manchester, England, to whom many thanks are due. Mr. John Crane, who had laboured indefatigably in the training of the choruses, was presented at the conclusion with a handsome pair of gold cuff linkets, as a remembrance of the occasion. Mr. Percy Owens, who so willingly gave his time in aiding at the rehearsals by presiding at the piano, is also deserving of thanks. The efforts, of course, of Mr. Max Poussettes, as secretary-treasurer and manager are too well known to need comment or eulogy.

Upon leaving the Opera House the minstrels adjourned to the Palace Restaurant, and partook of an oyster supper, when speeches were made by Mr. R. B. Rogers, Mr. Max Poussette and others on the success of the performance.

Cured of a Serious Disease.

"I was suffering from what is known as Bright's disease for five years, and for days at a time I have been unable to straighten myself up. I was in bed for three weeks; during that time I had leeches applied and derived no benefit. Seeing Hood's Sarsaparilla advertised in the papers I decided to try a bottle. I found

THE PETERBOROUGH CHEESE BOARD.

March 2nd, Saturday, the Date of the Annual Meeting.

The date of the annual meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board is Saturday, March 2nd, (and not March 23nd) as incorrectly announced in the advertisement in the last issue. It is important that the correct date should be borne in mind. This meeting, in view of action tending to separating an important section of the Board by the establishment of a new Board, will be an important one. One would think that the larger the Board, and the consequently larger offerings, the greater the certainty of keener competition among buyers, and, consequently, better bids. Take the case of a small Board that only offers a carload or so of cheese, it will be seen by the few buyers who will be attracted that there is only a shipment for one buyer, and there would not be the active competition that would prevail with a large offering. There would also be less chance for selections, and superior cheese would have to take its chances with the lower grades of inferior factories. There would be a less incentive to factories to improve or or keep up the quality of their make, and the tendency would be to lessen the vigilance of factories in the direction of the production of the best possible article of cheese. Canadian cheese stands first in the markets of the world, and no action that would in the least degree trend to conditions favouring the production of an inferior article should be encouraged. Under all the circumstances a full meeting of the members of the Peterborough Cheese Board should take place in the council chamber, Peterborough, on Saturday, March 2nd.

MILLBROOK

From Our Own Correspondent.

The adjourned meeting of the East Durham Liberal convention will be held in the town hall, Millbrook, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Tuesday, March 5th. A full attendance is requested as a candidate will be chosen to contest the riding at the next election.

Robert Sketch was up before Thomas Gillott, J. P., on Thursday, on a charge of carting without a license. Mr. Sketch proved that he was carting for his son, who has a license, and that he owned neither horse nor waggon. The case was dismissed.

The Millbrook hockey club will go to Keene, on Monday next, to play the club of that place. They will likely play Norwood at Keene also.

The Independent Order of Foresters gave grand a supper in their rooms, over Leach's drug store, to a number of friends. Rev. Alex. MacGillivary was present and made a few remarks.

Mr. L. S. Clarry, whose carriage works were destroyed by fire on the 14th, intends rebuilding at once.

Mr. Henry Elliott, of Hope, was in town last week.

Rev. A. L. Brown, of Cavan South, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church, last Sunday.

Mr. W. S. Given, of the Reporter, is suffering from a painful cut in his hand, which he received at the recent fire. He was trying to get into his office by breaking the front window, when a piece of glass, from one of the third story windows, fell on the back of his hand, making a very large gash.

Mr. Alf. Raper, who has sold out his hotel business at the station, intends opening out in the old Dominion and running a first-class commercial house.

ASH-WEDNESDAY.

I repent in dust and ashes.—Job. xlii, 6.

The first day of Lent is commonly called Ash-Wednesday, because the priest used to place ashes in the form of a cross on the heads of the persons who sought pardon for their sins. The word Lent is derived from the Anglo-Saxon Lencten, i. e., Spring. There is evidence that in the early Church the Fast preceding Easter was not always the same length. Cassin, A. D., 420, says that some churches kept their Lent six, others seven weeks, yet none exceeded thirty-six days—Sundays were deducted, and in case of seven weeks Saturdays also, except Easter Even. Ash-Wednesday and the three days proceeding the first Sunday in Lent, were probably added by Gregoro the Great to complete the number (forty), which seemed peculiarly consecrated as a fasting season. From the earliest times, during Lent, the faithful were to abstain from public shows, from the celebration of birthdays and other amusements. Marriages were not allowed, and frequent religious services and sermons were enjoined. The Homily says: "To chastise the flesh that it be not too wanton, but tamed and brought in subjection to the spirit."

To have perfect health you must have pure blood, and the best way to have pure blood is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

WESTWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The roads in this vicinity are unusually bad and in many places the main road is left and travel is through the fields. The windings and turnings are so intricate as to appear a perfect puzzle to a stranger, and they must be so as Mr. E. B. Stone, of Peterborough, with a party of friends lost themselves—got fast in the banks of snow, their horses were unable to go on and despite the able management of the case by the lawyer, who is familiar with knotty points and cases, they had to succumb and shout for help. Mr. Richard Walsh came to their assistance, helped them out and kept them all right.

The Presbyterians here have purchased a new organ from Mr. Cunningham, of Peterborough.

Miss Clara Cairns and Miss Stevenson, of Peterborough, were visiting Miss Annie Breckenridge last week.

A petition, very largely signed, accompanied by a deputation of the leading men in and around here, will shortly wait on the Dominion Cabinet, urging upon that body the necessity and great importance of building a branch of the Trent Valley Canal through Westwood. This branch could connect with the main canal at the east end of Stony Lake and follow the Ouse river right down to its outlet at Rice Lake. The petition is pretty strongly worded, and among other items of importance it enumerates the vast forests to the north of us, minerals, etc., which could be so easily brought to the front by the means of this travel. It also describes the course, survey, etc. of the beautiful river Ouse, its many coves, points, bays teeming with game, etc. Very little dredging would lower the Ouse and deepen it so as to allow the largest steamers, barges and scows to navigate its waters with safety from Mr. Christie Crow's, on the extreme north, to Mr. F. Birdsall's commodious wharf at the southern end. The deputation which will shortly visit Ottawa with their petition are confident of success, as they consider now a fitting time, on the eve of an election, and if all goes well, this branch should be open for traffic on or before the first of October next.

Rev. Mr. Peak, of the Methodist church here is now holding special meetings, which are very largely attended, and very successful. The church is packed to the door each night, and one night the crush was so great that the floor gave way. Nobody was hurt.

[illegible] NOTES.

At a recent annual meeting last night, the [illegible] will be officered for the year by the following gentlemen:

President—J. W. Bennett, (re-elected.)
1st Vice-President—Mr. Alf. Parker.
2nd Vice-President—Mr. Grover.
Treasurer—Mr. Madill, (re elected.)

The President, Messrs. Roger, Parker and Grover were appointed as an Executive Committee.

The following gentlemen were appointed for directors: Messrs. Bennett, Parker, Grover, Madill, Croly, V. Best, F. Mason, P. H. Green, B. F. Ackerman, R. J. Kidd, M. A. Morrison, T. Moore, T. H. Martin, F. W. Gladman, H. P. Kennedy, A. E. Dixon, J. S. Knapman, T. McFadden, E.A. Peck, Lamb Stanley, and M. W. Matchett. During '94 the Association was on the down grade. Without a Secretary or workers, ground was lost, financial support failed, and we go into '95's work with a burden of $400 debt. But a foundation is now being laid for a good work among the young men of Peterborough. We are realizing the true aim of the Young Men's Christian Association in "Saving Men," and look forward to a grand work this year, closing also with a balance on the right side. At the close of the annual meeting the Board of Directors held a short conference. Twenty new members were received. With the exception of finances the directors were encouraged with the state of the work.

A REMARKABLE CASE.

A Wonderful Cure of Bright's Disease at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—The age of miracles has not passed. A young man in this who had been a sufferer from Bright's disease for years has recently been entirely cured. According to the young man's story his convalescence was far more remarkable than that of either Dr. Rose or Dr. McCormick. From Dec. 23rd, 1893, until Nov. 15th, 1894, he was confined to bed with two doctors in attendance and although hundreds of dollars were spent in medicine, he secured no relief until he commenced using Dodd's Kidney Pills. He is now right as a trivet and entirely cured and his medical advisers have also become converts to Dodd's Kidney Pills. Further particulars of this remarkable case will be issued as soon as I can interview the parties concerned.

Everything must go at price, Grafton & Co.

Pretty.

A bedroom suite of native white maple with birdseye maple panels, now in A. Clegg's window, attracted considerable notice on Saturday; and especially during the evening large numbers stopped to admire. It is almost white, of neat design, just the thing for a young ladies room. Though pretty and dainty, it is not expensive. dw

GOLDEN WEDDING CELEBRATION

Fiftieth Anniversary of the Nuptials of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Dunlop.

Yesterday afternoon and evening, the fine old residence of A. C. Dunlop, Esq., was the scene of a most interesting gathering, assembled to assist in commemorating the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Dunlop, which occurred just fifty years before, and to congratulate the venerable couple upon having reached, in fairly good health, the fiftieth anniversary of that important event.

On February 25th, 1845, Mr. A.C. Dunlop, son of the late Major Dunlop, of Edenderry, Ireland, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, to Miss Eleanor Stewart, second daughter of the late Hon. T. A. Stewart, of Auburn. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert J. C. Taylor, rector of Peterborough, at the residence of the bride's father, now known as the late Hon. Robert Hamilton homestead, in the presence of a large number of guests, most of whom have since passed away, but some of whom were present at the fiftieth anniversary celebration yesterday. The marriage service was read from a large leather-bound folio Prayer Book of the time of King William III, which has been in the Stewart family since that time, and is now in the possession of Mrs. Dunlop. The bridesmaids on the occasion were the bride's sister, Miss Bessie Stewart, Miss Agnes Caddy, Miss Maria Strickland and Miss Fanny Reid. All these have since passed away except Miss Reid, now Mrs. Jas. Blackwell, of Douro. Mr. Jos. Dunlop, brother of the groom, performed the duties of "best man." After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop first lived at "Belvidere," Otonabee, for about eight years. They then settled at "Malone," near Auburn, on a property of Mrs. Dunlop's father, where they resided from 1853 till 1878, when Mr. Dunlop purchased the present town residence, corner of Murray and Water streets, from the late Dr. Burritt. The building was, however, subjected to improvement and additions, making it one of those delightfully rambling and homelike residences we see so many of it in the old land. Here Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop have passed many happy years of life, their family consisting, besides themselves, of one daughter, Miss Dunlop, three other children, that blessed their union, having died. Since their residence in this vicinity Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop have seen strange mutations in the material, social and industrial condition of Peterborough. Mrs. Dunlop's family came to Canada in 1822, and at that time the hand of man had not disturbed a stone upon the present site of the town.

Among the guests present were Mrs. Catharine Parr Traill, of "Westove," Lakefield, and Miss Kate Trail, Mr. Hilton, Auburn, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Collins, Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. A. Maire, Markham, Mr. Stewart Brown, Goodwood, Mr. E. Herbert Brown, Montreal, Miss M. Mairs, Markham, Mrs. Mark Burnham, Ashburnham, Mr. H. T. Strickland, Ashburnham, Mr. Z. Burnham, Otonabee, Mr. W. B. Stewart, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Blackwell, Douro, Miss Harriet Brown, Toronto; Miss Bertha Brown, Mr. C. D. Mathias, Mr. J. H. Burnham, Mr. A. J. Belcher, Mr. J. E. Belcher, Miss Isabella Roger, Mr. Jas. Reid, Miss Bessie Code, "Hazel Brae," Dr. and Mrs. Burnham, Mrs. Templeton Brown, Mr. R. W. Reid, Mr. G. M. Roger, Miss Connin, Mr. L. A. Reid, Rev. E. F. Torrance, Rev. J. C. Davidson, Miss Kirkpatrick, Mr. C. N. Brown, Mrs. J. D. Collins, Miss Mabel and Miss F. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. S. Hay, Master Robin Collins, Mr. and Mrs. J. Burnham, Miss Edwards, Mr. E. B. Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. John Carnegie, Glenmorris, Mrs. Clementi, Miss Mary Brown, and Miss Ella Edwards, Miss Bertha Brown and L. M. Hayes, Peterborough.

An interesting feature of the occasion was the presence of Mrs. Catherine Parr Traill, of "Westove," Lakefield, the well known authoress, whose latest literary work, "Pearls and Pebbles"—recently reviewed in the EXAMINER—which was written in her 95th year, is a marvel. Mrs. Traill has been intimate with the Dunlop's since her residence in the country, and last night she passed among the throng as alert in movement, as vigorous in intellect and as festive in spirit, as any of the golden wedding guests.

The wedding breakfast was served at 7 o'clock, grace being said by Rev. Mr. Torrance and afterwards the evening was delightfully spent in the enjoyment of the generous hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop, who were the recipients of most cordial congratulations on the auspicious occasion. A large number of elegant presents, suitable to the occasion, were contributed. During the evening the drawing rooms were brightened with music, social intercourse and old time reminiscences suggested by the occasion, which passed off to the great enjoyment of the guests who were honoured by being given an opportunity to do honour to a lady and gentleman who are held in such high esteem in a community where they have lived so many years in the enjoyment of the highest respect of every class of the community.

A pleasant circumstance of the occasion was the presentation of a beautiful gold-headed cane to each, Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop, accompanied by a very kindly letter, expressive of the kindliest sentiments such as the occasion naturally evoked. Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop have been much touched, and cordially appreciate the thoughtful action of their friends.

The following address was read:

To Mr. and Mrs. Dunlop:

DEAR FRIENDS,—It affords us very great pleasure on this, the occasion of your golden wedding, to present you with a slight token of our esteem. We rejoice that you have been spared to see many years of married life. We hope that you will long continue to enjoy a large measure of health and strength, and that our little gift may prove to be of some use to you, as well as to remind you of us.

OTONABEE.

Council Meeting.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A motion was passed certifying that the $250 county grant for Otonabee roads was properly expended. A petition was presented signed by five ratepayers of Asphodel and five ratepayers of Otonabee, petitioning that lot 1, the west halves of lots 2, 3, 4 and 8, the west 125 acres of lot 5, all in the 3rd con. of Asphodel, be detached from school section No. 5 and annexed to union sections 12, Asphodel and 18 Otonabee. On motion by Messrs. Johnston and Lancaster, no action was taken as a petition was presented in 1891 to change the bounds of union sections 12 and 18. Arbitrators were appointed and the bounds changed and sub-section 2 of section 82 of the school law specifies that no alteration shall take place for five years thereafter. Thos. Ferguson was heard requesting that no statute labour be charged against part of lot 8, con. 4, 11½ acres, as it is a point in Rice Lake, and no road to it. On motion by Messrs. Johnston and Deyell, that no land can be exempt from statute labour including islands in the lake, except islands not exceeding ten acres in extent and used with the houses erected thereon exclusively at summer resorts. Therefore we have no option but charge statute labour on Mr. Ferguson's lot. Andrew Nelson was heard requesting that part of lots 18, 19 and 20, con. 4, be detached from road division No. 11 and attached to No. 10. On motion of Messrs. Johnston and Weir, the clerk was instructed to write Mr. Nelson, the owner of above lots, that it is the council's intention to make the above change at its next meeting. Mr. Riddle was again present, requesting the council to convey the con. line to R. Deyell and open a new road. On motion of Messrs. Johnston and Lancaster, as W. Robertson had sent in an objection to having the con. line closed, that the matter lay over for further consideration. On motion of Messrs. Johnston and Weir, the clerk was instructed to again write to Samuel Redmond, pathmaster, to again notify the parties who removed the sand off the road allowance, making it very dangerous to public travel, between lots 20 and 21, con. 11, the corner of Wm. Hunter's land, to immediately fill up the holes with stones or earth. If not done before the next meeting of council, the council will have them filled at the expense of the parties who removed the sand, and the pathmaster to put up notices forbidding any person removing sand off the road allowance. Mr. Weir was authorized to procure posts, railing and hubbords and erect a railing on the west side of base line hill between lots 16 and 17, con. 10; Mr. Johnston the same for John Hatherly's Hill, between lots 23 and 23, con. 9; Mr. Lancaster the same for Shearer's hill, also material for a culvert, the clerk was instructed to again write to L. J. Sargeant, manager G.T.R. to have the culvert deepened under the G. T. R., lot 17, con. 8. The following accounts were ordered to be paid: Jas. McNeil, provisions for Jas. Metcalf, $15.05; grave cloths for late O. McGowan, 82c; Peter Hamilton, 4 road scrapers, $30.75; Dumble & Johnston, opinion re. old road allowance $5; Jas. Young, plank for crossings, $5.50. The treasurer's accounts was finally audited. Council adjourned to 18th March, when the new pathmasters will be appointed. Mr. Anderson was requested by the county special bridge committee to examine the Keene bridge and to make what repairs he thought necessary. He found four of the needle beams rotten and instructed Mr. Weir to have new ones put in. When doing so found 6 more bad. Mr. Anderson has instructed Mr. Weir to replace them with new ones.

THE STORY OF A DOG.

WHY A SOLITARY WAYSIDE GRAVE IS MARKED "PHANTOM."

A Lost Baby Is the Wilds of Western New Mexico Was Traced by the Faithful Canine—He Killed the Abductor and Led the Father to a Coyote's Den.

The tourist who visits the region of Lower Plaza, N. M., will see, among other things, as he drives along the trail from the railroad a grave with a thick headboard on which is painted the one word, "Phantom."

"It's only a dog's grave," the guide will explain, "but I reckon he'd more sense than some men."

Phantom was the property of Bernard Wisner, a cowboy living near the Datil mountains some years ago, but he was buried near the home of Daniel Chapman, whose wife was the sister of Wisner. Mrs. Chapman, when her brother first got the dog, had a hearty dislike for it. It was a big mongrel, with hound blood predominating, and, like all mongrel hounds, it had an enormous appetite that was never so well satisfied as with food stolen from somebody's kitchen.

For many offenses of this kind Mrs. Chapman had good reason to complain, and she would have taken the winchester and shot the hateful brute on more than one occasion but for two reasons. It was a very good hunting dog, and it would now and then play with the baby when she wanted to do housework—come over from her brother's house a mile away as if for the express purpose of having a romp with the little tot of 3.

However, the dog's manner kept growing worse, and one day when she saw it come sneaking around the corral she started for the gun, but stopped half way because she was reminded by the sight of the dog that the little one had not been about the house for an hour or two, perhaps more, so far as she could remember. So she ran out of the house quickly without the gun and called aloud:

"Baby! Baby!"

Then she listened and grew faint, for she heard no reply, and fainter still when she remembered that her husband had told her of seeing a panther's tracks down in the hollow near by. To think of this was to send her flying toward the hollow, but no baby or trace of it was to be found, although she looked behind every one of the scattered pines and cedars growing there. Then she came running back to the house, ringing her hands and calling "Baby" distractedly. She found the dog standing right beside the door, but she would not have noticed him, she was so near wild about the baby, only for the fact that he stood looking intently at her instead of taking to his heels with his tail between his legs, as he always done when she came toward him.

Even as it was she paid little attention to the dog, but ran hither and yon about the house and corral and horse shed, crying and calling the child, until at last she saw the dog come square before her, and after a grave look into her face start running around the house with his nose to the ground. She remembered afterward that he circled around the house two or three times and then disappeared, but by that time her fears had so overcome her that she fell headlong on the floor in a faint, and there she lay, nobody knows how long.

When she came to her senses, the dog was licking her face, and at once began to caper about and bark in extraordinary fashion when she opened her eyes and sat up. Then he ran out the door and stopped and looked back, and directly came back and grabbed the skirt of her dress, which he pulled so hard that he tore it. Then she picked up a club and drove the dog out the house, and then her burst of anger was over fainted again at the thought of the lost baby. When she revived this time she was too weak to get up, but she saw that the dog was still acting in the same unusual fashion she had noticed before. A little later the sound of horse's hoofs gladdened her ears, and with a last effort she got up, staggered out the door, saw her husband as he jumped from his horse, and, gasping out the words that "Baby is lost," fainted for the third time.

Chapman carried the woman to the bed, took one look around the room in order to assure himself that he had rightly understood what she had said, and then grabbing the winchester said to the dog:

"Hi, Phantom! where's Baby?"

"Wow!" replied the dog, and started away on a lope that kept Dan bumping himself to equal. The trail zigzagged about for nearly half a mile, then crossed a broken lava bed and ran off down a draw to the creek valley. Had any other dog than Phantom been on the trail Dan would have not believed the child could have gone that way, but he banked on Phantom and kept trotting along until at last a thicket was reached just two miles and a half from home. Into the thicket the dog plunged by what was really a sort of tunnel through the brush, and Chapman had to get down on his hands and knees to follow. Two rods in he came to an opening, and there on the dry sod lay the baby fast asleep. It was apparently in the den of some wild animal.

As Dan picked up the child the growl of the dog made him look around. Phantom was standing over the dead body of a recently killed coyote.

Phantom died of old age last spring, and was buried with many tears near the public highway, where all who pass can see it. It was only a dog that was buried there; but, then, as the cowboys say, "I reckon he'd more sense than some men."—Cor. New York Sun.

The stock of paid notes for five years in the Bank of England is about 77,745,000 in number, and they fill 18,400 boxes, which if placed side by side would reach 2½ miles. No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affection, found alike in the rich and poor, man and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. Moisture is the result, and intense itching. It is impossible to prescribe alone. Often the private parts become affected from the diseases, causing unbearable irritation and pruritis. These and many other symptoms of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately relieved and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF NOISE.

Aversion to Disturbance Is a Symptom of Neurotic Degeneration.

A woman suffering from neuralgic attacks her son to keep boys from making a noise in front of the house. A boy comes by whistling—a performance in which we must recognize a natural, wholesome and boylike act, whereupon there ensues a short, sharp fight between the pair, in which one is accidentally cut. The upshot is not important; the origin of it is.

It has long been usual to accord special privileges to invalids in relieving them against noise. Formerly straw would be strewn in the street, and thousands of persons who were not sick would be inconvenienced to ease the pains of one who was. In part, this custom was one of ostentation. It could be practiced only by the influential who were exalted by making themselves a nuisance. When death ensued, a hatchment was set up in the same spirit of vainglory. All the windows in the house were closed for a term, the duration of which was fixed by custom, but which bore a relation to the estate of the deceased and the consequent degree of exaltation descending upon his heirs.

All healthy animals delight in noise. The description includes barbarous folk and children. Dogs bark (curs only sneak off), birds scream, boys shout, girls clap hands to their ears in sweet confusion, horses paw, all animate nature responds to the exhilaration of noise. The sick do not. In every form of sickness the nervous function is deranged. As we have seen above mankind has shown its appreciation of this fact by its customs. Excessive sensibility to noise is thus one symptom of neurotic degeneration. It is the mark of one broad distinction between the state of civilization and its opposite. It testifies to one part of the price which that state exacts from man on his physical side.

Within civilization itself indifference to noise is one of the distinctions of a system rudely healthful, both in body and mind. The converse of this proposition is equally true. Whenever a person displays peculiar sensitiveness to noise we may know that the case is one of an unwholesome mind in an unwholesome body. From the fact that the disturbance is essentially a neurotic one it follows that it is controllable to a great extent by the will. Much of the disturbance that is experienced from noise can be put completely aside by exercise of the will. A barking dog may keep one person awake while his healthier or wiser neighbor sleeps the sleep of the just. Under the pinging of the cable car bells a valetudinarian subsides into frenzy while his younger clerk is lapped in dreams of the equally unconscious typewriter on the next floor. The contrast here need not be one of relative strength of mind merely; one of the two minds is sick.

In such a case the will power is impaired. It would probably be found that the complaining person is also irritable, passionate, perhaps consumed by self contemplation. In many cases of this order relief could no doubt be gained through treatment by suggestion. But in vastly the greater number the patient is competent to minister to himself. He is still capable of exerting the will, and in this exercise lies complete and permanent cure. Furthermore, the cure does not apply alone to the particular noise that may have called for it. It will be found to have influenced the mind permanently. The injurious effects attributed to noise do not proceed from without, but from within. They do not inhere in the aerial vibrations, but in the mental response made to them.

Finally it ought to be observed that the disease is one that increases by being yielded to. The noise that is first noticed as an annoyance in some moment of irritation, anxiety or other nervous disturbance can be nursed into an object of horror. Time was when folks thought sensitiveness to noise to be evidence of high strung character. They were rather proud of it and trotted it forth in public. The world knows better now. It erects hospitals for the Mrs. Wittitterlys, whom it rather admired in Nicholas Nickleby's time. It no longer holds poor Tom of Bedlam for inspired, and since it has learned how much sickness is either a fruit or a phase of ignorance it is getting a little sick of those sick folks, at least of whom it has a right to look for something better.—New York Evening Sun.

The Mineral Blue Eye.

Blue or light-colored eyes are popularly supposed to most frequently carry the baleful influence, and to counteract this blue beads are sometimes worn. Cases are cited of men able to overthrow a carriage merely by looking at it, to wither up a bean field, and so on. It is said that the belief in the evil eye among Christians, Jews and Mohammedans is stronger even than their religious beliefs. The peasants try to read good and bad luck from the color and growth of a horse's hair. This habit they seem to have got from the Bedouin Arabs, but are not so expert in the signs. A chestnut horse, for good luck, must have either both hind legs or else the near leg white. If only the off hind leg is white, that is bad luck. Then by the way the hair grows on the fetlock it is augured whether the owner will be killed by a spear or a dagger; and, if a horse begins to dig with its feet, that means that the owner is soon to be buried.—All the Year Round.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you it it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed. I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's oldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

Per GEORGE K. MARTIN.

A Vile Lie in the Pillory.

Weeks before the royal wedding it was openly whispered that the Duke of York, a gallant sailor and a gentleman, had made a false step, had been forgetful of his princely and knightly duties and obligations, and had, in fact, been secretly married and involved himself in a mesalliance, repugnant to his sense of honor and illegal in the eyes of the well known statute law. That law is simple. None of our blood royal can legally contract marriage without the consent of the reigning sovereign. Morganatic marriages have been recognized as such, and such love inspired sanctity as attaches to these unions when faithfully adhered to. The world knows all about them and sympathises with them. But what said the quidnuncs, the tattlers, the irresponsible, the chattering sparrows who build under the eaves of palaces?

Blankly this, that George of Wales was married; that the name of the place and the name of the lady, alleged to be the daughter of a naval officer of high degree, were known, and both names and places changed and fluctuated as the price of scandal shares rose or fell in the gossip market. Like ill winds, the ugly rumor grew space over the dinner table and afternoon teapot. Men talked of it—more shame to them—women murmured it with giggles and innuendo; the very "outsiders" got hold of it, and all the time the story was positively and absolutely untrue. Think you for an instant that the head of our church would have married our prince and princess had he not first satisfied himself, as we have reason to know he did, that the silly story was wholly untrue, absolutely baseless? The question carries its own answer. We contradict it directly with authority.—London Gentlewoman.

A Woman Who Got Along.

The ability of a woman to get on alone in the world is sometimes questioned by her big brothers. But there are plenty of instances where women have been left in circumstances which would try the powers of the stoutest hearted man to the utmost and have come out triumphant. One of these was mentioned to a reporter the other day in connection with a rough side hill farm in a remote part of an inland town. "There," said our informant, pointing to the place, "lived Aunt Abby S—— when her husband died. She then had three small children, and another was born soon after. The farm was in poor condition and had about all the mortgage it could bear. Her husband's old father, feeble and fussy, was left on her hands.

"Did she send the old man to the poor farm, think you? Not a bit of it. She kept him a year or two, and he was so fussy she couldn't live with him. Then she hired a neighbor to take him, and she paid his board 12 years, when he died. She raised her children and brought the farm into good condition. She paid the mortgage, and when she died she left a good property free and clear of all debts. The boys hadn't the old lady's spunk, for there's a mortgage up there now, and nothing in the world but laziness did it. They had everything left ready to their hands and ain't had no drawbacks, 'cept losin their mother, but somehow the weeds have got the start of 'em, and I guess they'll keep it."—Lewiston Journal.

Will's Grave.

"That grave on the right hand of the path as you go down to the porch door; that heap of airth with no growth, not one blade of grass on it—that's Will Pooley's grave that was hanged unjustly."

"Indeed! But how came such a shocking deed to be done?"

"Why, you see, sir, they got poor Will down to Bodmin, all among strangers, and there were bribery and false swearing, and an unjust judge came down—and the jury all bad rascals, tin and copper men—and so they all agreed together, and they hanged poor Will. But his friends begged the body and brought the corpse home here to his own parish, and they turfed the grave, and they sowed the grass 20 times over, but 'twas all no use, nothing would ever grow—he was hanged unjustly."

"Well, but, Tristam, you have not told me all this while what this man Pooley was accused of; what had he done?"

"Done, sir! Done! Nothing whatever but killed the excise man!"—Rev. R. S. Hawker.

His Way of Settling Debts.

While I was reading the London papers in a comfortable chair at the Colonial club not long since two studious looking visitors went by One said to the other: "Yes, he's a good fellow, but so eternally mysterious, though systematic, yet unreliable. Take the way he settles his bills, for instance, just like clockwork—tick, tick, tick."—Club.

The sun and the earth are both practically spherical in shape, and the earth is evidently only a small, cooled off or frozen sun. The sun has a shell of glowing metallic clouds; the earth has a shell of solid opaque rocks and metals.

Latest From the Seat of War.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Times correspondent in Tien-Tain telegraphs: It is reported that the Japanese have advanced from Hai-Cheng. Some fighting occurred around Thiencheangthai, whither Gen. Sung seems to have been driven. There are rumors of trouble in the foreign settlement at New Chwang, but nothing authentic has been received. The Central News correspondent in Pekin telegraphs the Grand Council met yesterday and the question of war or peace was put to a vote. The high provincial officials, first to third rank inclusive, were questioned by wire and telegraphed their answers. All expressed the opinion that the war was forced upon China unjustly, but they were anxious for peace, some adding "If the terms be tolerable."

DISGRACEFUL BLUNDERING.

At a Niagara Falls Fire—Firemen Injured.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Feb. 26.—Shortly after six o'clock last evening the Preston two storey brick block on Clifton avenue, near the post office, was discovered to be on fire. The ground floor was occupied by W. L. Flaherty, wholesale and retail liquor merchant, and H. Preston, customs broker, while the owner, Mrs. F. J. Preston and family used the south wing as a residence. Over Flaherty's store was located the Niagara Falls cigar factory. In the drying room of this concern is where the fire is supposed to have started.

The fire department responded promptly but there was a painful delay of some 10 or 15 minutes before the water was turned on the flames on account of the hydrants being buried under packed snow; and even when the hydrant was reached disgraceful bungling and want of discipline took place amongst the firemen. Everybody seemed to be managing the executive department. Ladders were raised and firemen climbed on them by the score. One ladder gave way and some half dozen men came down in the crash, and had it not been for the drifts of snow they fell in some of them would have been seriously injured. As it was, one of their number, Fireman Webber was badly injured. He was carried into Smith's drug store and his wants attended to. If not internally injured, he will probably be out in a few days. Two others, Harry Williams and Chief Chas. Cole, escaped with slight sprains.

The block was deluged in the water and the flames extinguished. John F. Anderson, owner of the cigar factory, will be the greatest loser, his loss being placed at $1,000 on plant and stock; no insurance. Loss to building by fire and water $1,000, fully covered by insurance. Mrs. Preston, household effects $500, damaged by water, fully insured; W. L. Flaherty, $300; Henry Preston, $900; both damaged by water, fully insured.

LIVELY TIME AT WINDSOR.

The Police Have a Rumpus With a Robber and a Woman.

WINDSOR, Feb. 26.—The police last night arrested William Hall, the alleged accomplice of the man McGee, charged with stealing a trunk full of clothes and valuables.

One of the officers was passing the residence of Mrs. Cousins on McDougall avenue at 6 o'clock when he saw a man dodging in that looked like Hall. He at once notified the chief who went there. He demanded admittance but the lights were put out and no reply made. The officers very promptly put their shoulders to the door and smashed it in.

Mrs. Cousins met them in the hall and denied that Hall was in the house, but Chief Wills forced his way past her into a bedroom. As he approached the bed the woman jumped on him and beat him, yelling murder, fire and other thrilling alarms. Wells threw her to the other side of the room while his aide hauled Hall from under the bed. A big crowd had assembled, but though threatening, they offered no resistance to the arrest. Magistrate Bartlett has refused to try McGee, so he will have to go before Judge Horne. Hall will have a preliminary hearing Wednesday.

Belligerent Aldermen.

MONTREAL, Feb. 26.—Mayor Villeneuve and Ald. Hurteau, chairman of the Civic Finance Committee, almost came to blows after the adjournment of the City Council meeting yesterday. The dispute arose over the recent trip of a civic delegation to Quebec and Ald. Hurteau made statements to which the mayor replied that the alderman was not a truthful person. The war of words promised to develop into something stronger when friends interfered.

Perils of the Deep.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Capt. Stewart, of the British steamer Duchess of Roxburgh, which arrived at Liverpool from Galveston and Norfolk, was drowned during the voyage. The British ship Ladakh, Capt. Doyle, which sailed from New York on February 5 for Hong Kong, has put into St. Vincent. Her hatches were stove in, boats damaged, one seaman drowned and the captain and first officer sustained broken legs. Six hundred casks of petroleum were jettisoned.

A Brakeman Instantly Killed.

TRURO, N.S., Feb. 26.—Neil MacDougall, of Antigonish, brakeman on the I. C. R., was killed at Riversdale yesterday morning. He left here at 5.30 on a special freight train. While coupling cars at Riversdale he got his foot caught in a frog of the track and two empty flat cars passed over him. He was killed instantly. The remains were brought to Truro. An inquest is being held.

The Copyright Question.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

A VILANELLE.

Love in the dawn is honey sweet—
Sweet to the taste and fair to the sight;
Kisses are balm when young lips meet.

The heart in the throes of its first white heat
Burns, a meteor shining bright;
Love in the dawn is honey sweet.

Enjoy while you can such moments fleet—
These transient spells of a fond delight;
Kisses are balm when young lips meet.

Glad as the morning, Marguerite,
Are your stolish face and your bosom white;
Love in the dawn is honey sweet.

The lilies nestle at our very feet,
The roses blush to our left and right;
Kisses are balm when young lips meet.

Wedded today in this bower discreet
Our lives shall fall upon lines of light;
Love in the dawn is honey sweet—
Kisses are balm when young lips meet!

Met With a Serious Fall.

"You are very late this morning, Mr. Baldwin," said a dry goods merchant recently to one of his clerks. "Do not let it happen again."

"Very sorry," said the clerk humbly. "I met with a serious fall."

"Indeed," replied the merchant, relenting. "Are you hurt much?"

"Principally, sir, in your estimation," answered the clerk respectfully.

"Oh, never mind that," said the merchant kindly. "I am very sorry and had no intention to be severe. We are all liable to accidents. How did you get the fall?"

"Well, you see, sir," said the clerk confidingly, "I was called quite early this morning—earlier, in fact, than usual."

"Ah!"

"Yes, sir; but somehow or other I fell asleep again."

"Go to your desk, sir, and don't try that on again," explained the merchant, with an air of severity which was belied by the twinkle in his eye, which denoted that he enjoyed the joke.—New York Herald.

Lightning's Strange Selection.

Probably one of the most remarkable lightning accidents of the period was that which took place in one of the eastern counties lately. A man was shearing a sheep. Another man, passing on a pony, stopped to exchange a few words with the shearer and watch the clipping operation for a minute or two. He had been standing there but a very short time when a sharp crack of thunder was preceded by a blinding flash of lightning. The shearer was startled almost out of his senses by seeing the pony and its rider suddenly collapse in a heap, but in a second the man was up, quite unhurt. Then the shepherd, happening to glance at the animal beneath him, found that the lightning had served it as it had served the pony. The sheep was stone dead! This, it may be as well to state, is a perfectly true story.—London Tit-Bits.

French Politeness.

Suppose French politeness is a myth, it is one to be cultivated the world over. Even the humblest peasant in the smallest province is endowed with an all conquering courtesy that is brought into play in the most commonplace matters. If our men could only be taught some of it, how much more easily would run the wheels of life's machinery! Business is business, of course. The rush and worry of money getting dwarf the real nature, yet at the same time stocks would act no more irregularly, bills would be no less ready to be paid, panics would occur no more frequently if the arbitrators of great affairs would but remember to bring into their business life a little more of the softening influence or refined courtesies that are the flowers in a meadow of rank weeds.—New York World.

The Best Language For Telephoning.

The French language, it appears, is better adapted to the purpose of the telephone than the English. It is stated that the large number of sibilant or hiss syllables in English renders it a less easy and accurate means of communication. Some English words are especially difficult of transmission by telephone. The word "soldier" is cited as one of these. Proper names frequently occur in the midst of an otherwise perfectly audible and intelligent conversation which the ear cannot possibly catch. These must be spelled out, involving delay.—Electricity.

THE TWO EXTREMES!

HATS and BOOTS

Early Styles for Spring Trade.

25 cases of New Goods for the coming spring have already been opened out, consisting of 10 cases of the latest styles of English and American Spring Hats, and 15 cases of Solid Comfort Boots, Shoes and Slippers, from the best makers in the world.

At the HEAD to Stay!

Words are weak in attempting to describe our range in everything that goes to make up the smartest HAT STOCK to be found. We aim to get every first-class idea for the "top" extreme, and we are sure to please, as we we are always—"AT THE HEAD TO STAY."

WIVES, SISTERS, MOTHERS, do you like that Hat your Husband, Brother or Son wears? Send him to a Hat Store where they fit Hats to THE STYLE OF THE MAN. What looks well on some folks may not look well on him. We have a happy knack for head dressing. Don't spoil your credit by a seedy top-piece—look like prosperity. We have the pick of the styles from such famous English makers as Stanley & Co, Jackson & Co and Wilkinson & Co; and we have the celebrated American EAGLE brand of Fur Hats, union made. The prices won't scare you, either. If you buy your Hats at GOUGH'S you'll soon find out that you save just 20 per cent.

At the FOOT to Lead!

People who wear our Shoes say they enjoy as much solid comfort as the old-timers who wore sandals. But ours are handsome as well as comfortable. We sell easy fitting, durable Shoes, with all the style put on to them that such artistic makers as Slater & Son, of Montreal, can invent. We have all intermediate makes, as well as the cheaper grades from Lower Canada, where they don't pay much for making—sometimes nothing at all.

LADIES are reminded that all the best Boots marked at other stores to sell at $3.00 and $4.00 we mark at $2.00 and $3.00. Cheaper lines run from 75c to $1.50.

GENTLEMEN are reminded that all the best Boots marked at other stores to sell at $3.50 and $5.00 we mark at $2.50 and $3.90. Cheaper lines run from 90c. to $1.75.

It's the same way with Misses, Boys and Children's Boots and Shoes—the goods and prices will do the talking better than anything we can say.

FIREBUGS AT THE JUNCTION.

John McGroarity Arrested on the Charge of Incendiarism.

TORONTO JUNCTION, Feb. 27.—John McGroarity, of Woodbridge, appeared in court yesterday and pleaded not guilty to the charge of assaulting and attempting to rob Michael Whitty, farmer, who resides near Woodbridge. He told the magistrate he had a statement to make which if true seriously implicates a young man of the same place named Herbert Hollingshead. In January, 1894, the stables of Wallace Bros. and Dr. McLean, of Woodbridge, were burned. McGroarity said they were set on fire by Hollingshead. "How do you know he set them on fire?" asked the magistrate "Because I assisted him." was McGorarity's reply. He also told of some pretty larcenies in which he said they were both implicated, and on the strength of this damaging statement a warrant has been issued for Hollingshead's arrest. At the time of the fire McGroarity was working for Dr. McLean.

New Canadian Industry.

FREDERICTON, N. B., Feb. 27.—Before the Legislatures's Corporations Committee yesterday R. G. Leckie and his son appeared, in favor of a bill incorporating the Colonial Iron and Coal Company. Messrs. Leckie said they intended to spend nearly one million dollars in Queen's County developing mines, and in St. John establishing blast works and improved appliances for extracting coal. They promised to spend $400,000 on St. John work and said if given their charter they would begin at once and have the works in operation next year. They declared they intended removing the Londonderry Iron Works because St. John was a better distributing centre. They would bring about half their ore from Annapolis County, and get the rest in Queen's and from about Musquash and from Albert. They would bring all the coal from Queen's by water in summer and rail in winter.

Suicided Through Want of Work.

BUFFALO, Feb. 27.—Rudolph Hagenbach, a German cabinet maker, aged 53, suicided by hanging yesterday. He left this note for his wife: "Dear Caroline—When you receive these lines I'll be no more—no work—too old—therefore I cannot find work. I forgive and bid farewell to everybody, but a shoemaker I cannot forgive. Farewell. Caroline, I remain yours, Rudolph Hagenbach." The shoemaker referred to had brought suit against Hagenbach which was up for trial about the time Hagenbach suicided, and Mrs. Hagenbach was at the municipal court where the suit was in progress.

Is It Murder.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The terribly mangled body of Robert Huson, who for some years was connected with the officers' mess room at the military barracks here, was found on the C.P. R. tracks near Adelaide street Monday night about eleven o'clock. The victim's home is in Jarvis, Ont., and he was to have been married next month. Suspicions of foul play are entertained.

The Coroner's jury, after hearing some unimportant evidence, decided to adjourn until Thursday evening next at 7.30, when it is expected a verdict will be rendered. Nothing new was elicited at this evening's session of the jury.

Banquet to Hon. John Costigan.

MONTREAL, Feb. 27.—A complimentary banquet was tendered last night to Hon. John Costigan, Minister of Marine, by his friends in both parties. Over 200 guests were present and the dinner was a most successful affair. Dr. Hingston presided and there were representatives present from Kingston, St. John, N.B., and other places. Mr. Costigan, in reply to his health, which was enthusiastically honored, defended his public career and said he had always tried to do his duty. He also made a strong plea for toleration. Speeches were made by Premier Taillon, of Quebec, J. H. Metcalfe, Kingston, Senator Sullivan, Kingston, and others.

One Month in Jail for Fraud.

MONTREAL, Feb. 27.—Charles Spratt, of Ottawa, came before Judge Desnoyers in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday, to answer a charge of obtaining $300 worth of goods from the Ames Holden Company on false pretences. Previous to the accused being brought before the court his relatives had settled for the goods with the firm and they withdrew their charge and asked for leniency for Spratt. His honor gave him one month in jail.

Florence J. Allen in Distress.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 27.—Schooner L. J. Selig, which arrived to-day from Antigua, reports February 22nd, northwest of Bermuda, passing three-masted schooner, Florence J. Allen, of Bath, Me., dismasted, abandoned and full of water. The Allen was a vessel of 458 tons, 12 years old, and was on a voyage from Apatachicola to Philadelphia, having sailed from former port Jan. 21. She was commanded by Captain Eastman.

THE HAWAIIAN CABLE

Hebrew Bakers of New York Are on Strike.

BROOKLYN CITY HALL ABLAZE

The Harbord Athletic Committee's Opinion on Football—The Cuban Revolution—New York Bonds in Demand.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 27.—J. Cranston, one of the three men exiled from Hawaii for complicity in the recent revolt, has received a letter from Honolulu, which explains the reason why so many of the remaining foreign conspirators preferred banishment rather than stand trial. Ashford, the Canadian revolutionist, was convicted on perjured evidence, the letter states, and although this fact was proved at the trial, he received a heavy sentence. A gallows has been erected in the jail yard, and this fact, together with the manner in which the trials have been conducted, makes most of the prisoners glad to get away from the islands, in preference to entrusting their lives to a military commission.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—It is regarded as probable that when a second disagreeing report on the diplomatic bill is made to the Senate, Mr. Blackburn will ask for another vote on the Hawaiian cable, as he and his colleague, Mr. Bryce, do not intend yielding until ordered so to do by the Senate.

It is stated that the presence of three French ships of war in the harbors of San Domingo has been made the subject of diplomatic representation on the part of the United States at the request of the Dominion Government.

Secretary Gresham, it is assured, has pointed out to France that the United States also has long standing claims against San Domingo antedating those of France. The French reply, it is claimed, conceded this point, but represented that immediate reparation was demanded only in the case of a French citizen who had been recently assaulted, with the ascertained connivance of Dominion officials. The United States thereupon replied as it is understood that this was a matter which could not be held to warrant a hostile naval demonstration on the part of France and suggested that justice could be obtained more certainly in the absence of a threatening armed force. As far as can be learned the incident rests at this point. Should any further difficulty arise, it is possible that one of the vessels of Admiral Meades' fleet, now at Barbadoes, may be ordered to cruise on the coast of Hayti and San Domingo for the protection of American interests.

The process of numbering the new bonds was begun yesterday at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the first batch will be ready for delivery to the Treasury to-day or to-morrow. The Treasury gold reserve has reached $76,177,318 by reason of the gold received from the recent bonds sale being taken up in the Treasury cash account. The reserve is thus $35,000,000 greater now than it was on February 12, on which date it reached the lowest point since specie payments were resumed in 1879. So far the Treasury has received from the Belmont-Morgan syndicate $36,908,134 in gold and issued to it certificates to the amount of $35,819,191.

Secretary Gresham received a cablegram from Consul-General Ramon Williams at Havana, announcing that a state of affairs practically amounting to martial law had been proclaimed in Cuba. It appears from the despatch that the proclamation of the Governor-General has caused great excitement throughout the island where no general revolution exists, as it was the first notice the people had that the government was taking action to prevent disturbances in some sections from spreading.

In reply to a resolution the President today sent to the Senate copies of correspondence in regard to Samoan affairs.

The correspondence is exceedingly bulky and much of it relates to matters long since made public. The latest news from Samoa appears in a letter from Mr. Mulligan to Mr. Uhl, dated Apia, Jan. 2 last. "So far," he writes, "there is no appearance of a renewal of the war. There is little confidence felt in the permancy of the existing peace and among the natives hostile to the government there is a feeling of discontent and uneasiness. In my judgment, while a stable and real government cannot be hoped, for under the existing arrangements, with its endless division of authority, yet, if it were possible under the conditions it would not be permitted. It is not stating the case too strongly to say there is not a resident of these islands, native or foreign, satisfied with the existing governmental system.

Rev. Dr. Burtsell and the Church

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The Tribune to-day will publish an article saying that Rev. Dr. Burtsell is no longer anxious to return to his former position as pastor of the Church of Epiphany in this city. "Dr. Burtsell and his fellow leaders," it will say, "visit Washington and the delegation no more." They look now for the coming delegats in the person of Cardinal Gibbons and perhaps of Ireland himself; also for a division of the archdiocese and a bishop of their own heart, or at least for a coadjutor to Archbishop Corrigan. These things are talked about. Two of them must happen. There is to be a successor to Satolli and it is likely he will be an American. There is to be a See at Poughkeepsie and Mgr. Farrelly or perhaps Dr. Burtsell himself may be the candidate. The bishops of the Provinces are talking of a coadjutor for New York, who will put an end to its troubles. It is supposed that the archbishop will become rector of his new seminary. It is to open in 1895.

PRESENTS TO QUEEN VICTORIA

Bismarck's Birthday on April Fool's Day—The Japanese Minister Will Present His Credentials To-morrow—M. de Staals Offered Minister of Affairs.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The miners who were imprisoned at the bottom of the shaft of the Normanton colliery by the collision, have all been released and brought to the surface. One man was killed by the collision.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The news from St. Petersburg that the portfolio of Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs had been offered to M. de Staal, now Russian Ambassador to England, which was sent out by the United Press on January 31, has been confirmed from several quarters. It is considered unlikely that M. de Staal will refuse the new honor.

The Chicago organization, styling itself the Associated Press, yesterday sent out a London despatch announcing that M. de Staal, Russian Ambassador to England, was offered yesterday the post of Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs. The fact that this post was offered M. de Staal, several weeks ago, was announced by the United Press in a cable despatch from St. Petersburg on Jan. 31.

The Japantese Minister will present his credentials at Windsor to-day. He will be introduced to the Queen by the Queen by the Earl of Kimberley, Foreign Secretary.

Hon. A. J. Balfour, the Conservative leader, who has been a victim of influenza, is better and is able to leave his room.

Francois Coppee, the author and poet, is suffering from inflamation of the lungs and it is feared is dying.

Lord Kimberley next week will accompany to Windsor the Chinese Minister, who will take handsome presents to the Queen from the ex-Empress of China, in return for those sent by Her Majesty on the occasion of the ex-Empress' birthday.

Lord Roseberry, who has been suffering from influenza, is improving. His insomnia has lessened.

The Standard's Berlin despatch says there are 30,000 sufferers from influenza in Munich.

AN EXPLOSION..

One Killed and Two Injured—A Lady's Narrow Escape.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 27.—An explosion from an unknown cause occurred at 4:30 o'clock yesterday in an unoccupied two-story frame building at 25 to 31 Johnson avenue, and as a result John Fluha, aged 65, was killed and three other persons were injured. The building was formerly used as a dye factory. The explosion was immediately followed by a rumbling noise and the house fell with a crash. Dust flew in all directions and some of the heavy timbers were thrown into the middle of the street. One of them was forced into the side of an adjoining building, making a hole about three feet wide. The explosion was heard twenty blocks away. All of the adjoining houses on either side of the fallen building were shaken and glass was broken in all of them.

John Schoen, aged 14 years, living in a house adjoining the wrecked factory was sitting in the front prrior reading. He was hurled across the room and landed on his head in the corner and was cut about the head and face by flying glass. Mrs. Annie Weiss, of the same address, was in the hallway looking into the street. She was thrown to the ground with great force and remained for some time partly stunned.

Baron von der Golts, the admiral-in-chief, is sick with influenza and inflamation of the lungs. His condition is serious and much anxiety is felt.

The Japanese Looted But Little.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The Times will print a despatch from Che-Foo, saying that documents found at Wei-Hai-Wei show that Admiral Ting wisely decided to dismantle the main land forts as a source of weakness, but he was overruled. He afterwards determined to die fighting, but his captains refused to support him. The Japanese looted but little and committed no atrocities.

Explosion of a Cylinder.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27.—By the explosion of a cylinder charged with carbolic acid gas in the drug laboratory of the Smith, Kline and French Company yesterday, Frank Robinson, aged 21 years, was killed, and Frank Duffy, aged 23 years' was fatally injured.

Daily Examiner.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1895.

ITS USEFULNESS IS GONE.

A score of sound, substantial reasons can be presented to the electors to show that the present Dominion Government is not, and has not for long, been worthy of the confidence of the electors of Canada. A score of such reasons is given below:

1. Because it has increased the net public debt from $140,362,069 in 1878 to $246,183,039 in 1894, an increase of $105,821,960, an annual average increase of $6,613,872.

2. Because it has increased the expenditure, aside from capital expenditure, from $23,503,158 in 1878 to $37,585,025 in 1894.

3. Because in the face of failing revenue, hard times and a deficit for 1893-4 of over $1,200,000, it appropriated in the session of 1894 over $4,000,000 for railway subsidies, the objects of the grants in the majority of cases being to give aid to its candidates in the coming elections.

4. Because it has squandered the public lands in the Northwest by lavish and unnecessary grants to railway corporations, having granted in this way up to April last 44,242,296 acres, which is twice the quantity of land at present under cultivation in the Dominion.

5. Because it has squandered public moneys in worthless investments made to serve the purposes of friends, such as the Tay Canal, which cost $476,128 and last year cost $2,000 to maintain and yielded revenue to the amount of $136.

6. Because it has superannuated civil servants in the prime of life to make places for its own retainers, and has brought the superannuation service to that point when the receipts last year were $63,433 and the payments $263,710.

7. Because it has copied the worst features of American political rascality in the infamous Gerrymander Act of 1892.

8. Because by the "Franchise Act of 1885" it ceased to permit the Provincial lists to be used for Dominion elections, and adopted an expensive partizan scheme for making Dominion lists, with power to perpetrate gross outrages; and has given the country but one revision on an average each three years, costing in each instance over $350,000.

9. Because it went to the country at the last general election under the false pretences, professing to be on the point of securing a reciprocity treaty with the the United States, when no negotiations were in progress and no prospect of securing such a treaty existed.

10. Because it has distributed 25,000 square miles of timber limits among its friends and supporters regardless of value and without consideration.

11. Because it has utterly destroyed the independence of Parliament and secured the support of a slavish majority by gifts to members and their friends of timber limits, railway subsidies and other favours.

12. Because it makes no attempt to secure purity of administration, but on the contrary is governing the country by the most shameless and corrupt methods.

13. Because it is not an economical but is responsible for a system of extravagance and waste in every department.

14. Because, when the country is staggering under a burden of debt and taxation, no effort is made to reduce the debt or diminish the expenditure.

15. Because the tariff is not adjusted for the purpose of securing the revenue necessary for the economical administration of public affairs in the easiest way for the people, but on the contrary is made the weapon of rings and combines through the operation of which they exclude foreign goods and secure the power to charge exorbitant prices for their own wares.

16. Because the promises made on behalf of the National Policy were foundationless and false. It has neither checked the exodus, nor given a home market for our farm products, nor increased the price of such products, nor secured prosperity for the country.

17. Because the extravagance of the Government obliged the country to face a deficit of over $1,200,000 last year and there will probably be a deficit of $5,000,000 for the year 1894-5.

18. Because the buried secrets of peculations, frauds and maladministration in the various departments should be exposed to the light of day, and the accounts and records should be investigated by men who are not interested in concealing facts.

19. Because Canada is nearly at a standstill and her people are disheartened. Her present rulers are incompetent, and their policy worse than a failure. We want new men, new methods, a new policy.

20. Because Parliamentary enquiry into grave charges made against members of the Government in the Caron case was refused, the character and allegations of said charges changed by the Government to suit its own purpose, and the emasculated indictment thus prepared referred to a commission chosen by itself before which acquittal was foreordained.

The entering wedge of a fatal complaint is often a slight cold, which a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral might have cured at the commencement. Therefore, it is advisable to have this prompt and sure remedy always at hand to meet an emergency.

Doctors recommend Norway Pine Syrup because it is the best cure for coughs, colds. Price 25c. at druggists.

REVOLUTION IN CUBA.

The Government Does Not Regard the Revolt With Alarm.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The Herald says that cipher despatches say the revolution in Cuba has begun. It is headed by Jose Marte, who has been twice banished and who has just landed.

MADRID, Fed. 27.—The government does not regard the reported state of affairs in Cuba with any degree of alarm. Although 24 rebellious persons were recently executed in Cuba, the fact is not looked upon as showing any widespread revolutionary feeling. The government is of the belief that the reforms lately applied in Cuba will prevent any such revolts as have formerly occurred on the island.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 27.—The latest advices from Cuba confirm the reports of a general uprising of patriots there. A movement is simultaneous at seven different points on the island and the insurgents have attacked eight or ten interior towns.

At Matanzas, a spanish army officer was dangerously wounded last Sunday morning. Generals Marti and Gomez are at the head of the revolution. They reached the island from Vera Cruz, Mexico, on the 24th instant.

Military on Top.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 27.—Savannah escaped a riot last night through the intervention of the military. The trouble was started by ex-priest Joseph Slattery, a lecturer on "Roman Catholic Priesthood." For severl days efforts have been made by members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians to revoke the ex-priest permit to deliver the lecture, but the Mayor upon legal advice replied that it could not be done. Threats were openly made against the lecturer and the chief of police and a detail of officers was ordered on duty at the hall where the lecture was to be delivered. The lecture contained no offensive language, but the crowd which had gathered on the outside began to hurl stones through the windows and among the audience. The police ordered the crowd to disperse. It refused to do so and kept shouting. The mayor was notified and after a consultation with the chief of police decided to order out the military. The riot alarm was sent in and in half an hour eight companies of infantry and a troop of dismounted cavalrymen were on the scene. A portion of the mob kept yelling and hurling bricks at the windows of the hall where the ex-priest was. A few shots were fired in the air by the rioters but no one was hurt. The streets were cleared for a block in every direction and the troops remained on guard until the disturbance had subsided, when the lecturer was brought out and escorted to his hotel. The crowd followed and jeered along the streets, but there was no attempt at an open attack.

Who Knows Them?

BUFFALO, Feb. 27.—J. Richard Stanley & Co., operating as financial agents, have quit business in this city. It appears that they formerly did business at 96 and 98 Maiden lane, Toronto. The reason why they quit here is that they wrote a firm in Watseka, Illinois, who desired to sell out, to the effect that they had purchased in the person of Fred W. Baker, of Hamilton, Ont., but Mr. Baker must first receive payment of his travelling expenses so that he could inspect the property. They referred the Watseka firm to the First National Bank, the Third National and Mayor Jewett. The First National Bank is a myth, but Mayor Jewett is not, and he sent a detective to investigate the firm of J. Richard Stanley & Co. The person in charge of the office talked nicely to the detective, but when the officer paid a second visit to the establishment the firm's property had disappeared, the office was shut, and no one had any knowledge as to the whereabouts of the members.

The Work of Desperadoes.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Feb. 27.—Deputy Sheriff O'Brien, who was shot by the Griswold bank burglars, is very low and slight hopes are entertained of his recovery. The authorities have identified the wounded robber, who was captured. He is Cad McGuire of Omaha. The robber who shot O'Brien and then escaped is Charley O'Connor, also of Omaha. The authorities are hot on O'Connor's trail and expect to capture him. The postage stamps stolen were shipped to a man named Davis in Chicago. Davis, who is a South Water street saloonkeeper, was arrested last night in Chicago, together with his bartender, John Wulmartin. Shortly after the valise was delivered at the saloon. The valise was found to contain four large packages of stamps worth a little over $600. Davis is well known to the police.

Was He Justified?

KINGSTON, N.Y., Feb. 27.—At 1 o'clock yesterday morning Andrew Ostrich, an Austrian, who keeps a store at Rosendale, near this place, wished to close his shop and retire for the night. There was a crowd of six men in the store at the time, all of whom were under the influence of liquor. When Ostrich ordered the men to leave they became very angry and began to smash things. The proprietor ordered them to desist and upon their refusal he procured his revolver and fired seven times into the crowd. Wright Wood was shot in the left side and will die. Matthew Burns was shot in the leg and a bullet passed through the coat sleeve of another member of the riotous party. Immediately after the shooting Ostrich surrendered himself to the village authorities and was locked up in the county jail.

LIVE LAKEFIELD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mr. John R. Laing, of Peterborough, was in the village last week.

Mr. John Morrison has returned home from North Bay.

Miss Violet Wade was the guest of the Misses Stabler this week.

Rev. A. C. Reeves and wife, returned home from Cobourg on Saturday.

Mr. W. M. Graham is in Toronto this week, purchasing goods for the spring trade.

Miss M. J. Preston, of Smith, spent a week in the village with friends.

Miss Trennum, of Oshawa, is the guest of Mrs. S. Nelson.

Miss Eva Graham is attending the millinery openings in Toronto this week.

A sleighing party drove out to the residence of Mr. G. W. Fitzgerald, in Smith, on Wednesday evening, and put in a most enjoyable time, returning home at an early hour in the morning, after numerous upsets in the beautiful snow.

Also on the same evening another party went in the opposite direction to the home of Mr. Jacob White, in Dummer, and enjoyed themselves heartily. This party coming home got stuck in some of the large drifts and also had an upset or too, but all returned home safely, none the worse for their experience of a Canadian blizzard.

On Sunday morning at ten o'clock the members of Court Lakefield, No. 43., assembled at the court room and after the opening of the court, marched in procession to the Methodist church to the number of 48. Rev. W. Limbert preached to them an eloquent and able sermon taking for his text I Tim. 5, 8: "If any man provide not for his own and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel."

The reverend gentleman on starting out said that a great many thought it was not right to preach sermons to societies as very often it is used as an advertisement for the order, but if from a service of this kind people can be led to carry out the teachings of the Bible as found in the text and provide for their families, there cannot any great wrong be done.

He then went on to say that in the Canadian Order of Foresters they had three great principles represented,—liberty, benevolence and concord.

Liberty, one of the principles, is not that liberty which grows out of a disregard for the laws of the land with which we are identified, but that higher liberty growing out of observance of its laws. Benevolence is harmony with the first principles of the religion of the Bible. It partakes of that infinite benevolence which we recognize in God, and out of these will grow peace and concord with one another. From these considerations it is evident that the society is not a secret conclave of a nihilistic order for the destruction of the state, but one which is in perfect accord with the laws of the land and in harmony with truth and righteousness. In assembling together, to-day, we recognize three great principles and upon these principles rest the welfare and stability of the society at large. The welfare of the family, our relation to God and our obligation to the state. They are so linked together that whatever tends to enhance and sustain the interests of the one helps to establish and secure the stability of the other. The Divine order is 1st, the family, 2nd, the church, and 3rd, the nation. It does not follow that if we make provision for the first that we are going to neglect the other two. As a rule, those who do not recognize the principle as contained in our text, have to be supported by the state, instead of themselves helping the state; they are not the people who uphold the nation and sustain the Church of God, but as a rule the parties who look to the interests of their household are those who will support the Church and maintain the nation.

There is nothing dearer to man than home and home interests, and the man who looks after his home is looked upon with respect, and the man who does not is looked upon with reproach. Marriage is a Divine law, it has the sanction of Heaven, This is proved by the Word of God, and the fact that the world over there is about an equal number of males and females, shows that a wise Providence has made provision in this respect for family life, and for the fulfilment of this duty, viz., the care of the household, and these principles are recognized in your society, as you provide for any emergency that may arise. It might almost appear that the Apostle Paul had something of this kind in mind when he made use of this text, as before this he was talking of the widows, and he interjects the text in the middle of his discourse. One duty is exceeding plain according to the reading of the text, to make provision for our own household. We are taught in the Word of God to pray "Give us this day our daily bread," but we are not to fold our hands and expect it to be poured down as manna from heaven without any effort on our part, for another passage in the Bible says "If any man will not work neither shall he eat." God works through means both in providence and in grace, but we must pursue those means by which the plans and purposes of Providence will be fulfilled—who makes the earth to yield her fruits, and we may by working reasonably expect a share of it. There is another application to the word provide, as some say (to make provision for a rainy day.) Is not this right, as emergencies will arise? It is right and our duty to do this, as we know not what is before us, and through these societies much benefit has been received. Some will say, why not leave this in the hands of Providence? But is it not true that God helps those who help themselves. These societies have proved a benediction and blessing to a great many who have received benefits from them.

How many would be in a position (leaving out the societies) to make provisions for their families? Without them many would have been left in a cold and cheerless world, and the benevolence of the world would not go very far to help them.

Some will say is there not something wrong about the societies, because so many get out a great deal more than they pay in? Does not this show what is a fundamental principle of the society, viz, benevolence, and in such a way as not to place the recipient in humiliating positions of begging, obliged to appeal to friends for help? By their organized efforts how many a dying pillow has been smoothed by the thought that the widow and family would not be in want when the head of the house was taken away, and the widow comforted by the thought that the departed had taken time by the forelock and made provision for her necessities. May you go forth from this service with your faith strengthened in the principles of your order, and continue to enjoy that full spirit of liberty which grows out of a proper respect for the laws of our land, and may the benevolent spirit that grows out of the former, increase and abound, and may peace and concord continue like a three-stranded cord which cannot be broken. Thus may we remove any reproach which might be cast upon us for failure to fulfill the truth of the word. Remember that he that provideth not for his own, and especially those of his own house, hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel."

During the collection Miss Howden sang a solo in good voice.

The brethren then marched back to the hall where they passed a very hearty vote of thanks to Rev. Mr. Limbert for his able and eloquently delivered sermon.

The Christian Endeavour social held at the residence of Mr. H. M. Davidson, on Monday evening was a decided success; over 150 people were present and thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The following programme was well carried out:—

Refreshments were served and at about 12 o'clock all separated, and found a nice bright night for their drive home. The men who furnished the teams deserve credit for the prompt manner in which they responded to the request and the careful handling of the teams on the road in several cases avoided upsets.

ALD. A. F. STAGG, OF BROCKVILLE, ONT.
Restored to Perfect Health by South American Nervine.
Had Tried all the Local Doctors, but Failed to be Benefited.
Visited Massena Springs, but Returned in Despair—To-day Enjoys Perfect Health After Taking Nervine.

ALD. A. F. STAGG, BROCKVILLE, ONT.

A citizen whose influence carries a good premium in the growing town of Brockville is Ald. A. F. Stagg, an extensive stock dealer in that section of the province. For over fifty years he has carried on business in Brockville. The people know the man. How much he has accomplished during this half century in building up the municipality is known to them, and they have been ready to show their appreciation of these labors by making him a town father. Mr. Stagg, however, failed just where so many other men of active and aggressive temperament fail, namely, in exceeding his strength. About two years ago his nervous system became broken and shattered, and he was unable to do work of any kind. This was a serious blow to a man of so active a temperament, and with the volume of business he had on hand. He did, as any one else would do, and which is the natural thing to do, sought the assistance of the local doctors of the place. He tried not only one but all of them. Whatever the trouble was they seemed unable to master it, and did him no good. He went to Kingston, hoping to find greater medical skill in the Limestone City. He was no better off for his trouble. A friend influenced him to visit Massena Springs, it being believed that the peculiar charm that surrounds that spot would have its effect in giving back to Mr. Stagg his lost health. But it was simply a case of history repeating itself everything failed, and he remained home in utter despair, seeing nothing but early death before him. His neighbor, a Mrs. Johnston, who had been using Nervine with great success, recommended him to try a bottle. It cannot be said that he did so with any bright hopes of being benefited. To his great delight, however, he found almost instant relief. After taking several bottles he to-day says, in his own words, that he enjoys perfect health. To those who do not know the particular virtues of South American Nervine all this may sound like a miracle. Here was a man whose condition was known to every one in Brockville, for everyone knew Ald. Stagg, who was completely broken up in health, and whose disease the best medical skill could not relieve, much less remove, and yet a few bottles of this wonderful discovery, Nervine, gives back to him the health that two years previous he had completely lost. This is what Nervine will do in every case. Physicians fail usually because they doctor, as it were, on the surface. Nervine succeeds in every case because it immediately acts upon the nerve centers of the body, from which, as science has unmistakably demonstrated, flows the life blood of the system. When these nerve centers are kept in healthful condition disease that may exist in any part of the body speedily becomes an unknown thing.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE
Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, 'be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle with your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

Conductor Snyder at the Charlotte Street Church.

Conductor Snyder gave his popular lecture on "Queer People" to a large audience in the Charlotte street Methodist church on Tuesday evening. The address contained big chunks of wisdom in the shape of thought, varied with lighter packages of wit and humour, and for one hour and a half the orator kept his audience interested. Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., occupied the chair, and introduced the lecturer after prayer had been offered by Rev. J. E. Trotter. The proceeds will be devoted to the Ladies' Aid fund.

The low price at which the paper is offering it, is something for which they deserve commendation and encouragement. A feature of the enterprise worthy of especial mention is the students guide which classifies particular subjects.

THE PETERBOROUGH'S ARE THE CHAMPIONS.

THE INTERMEDIATE CHAMPIONSHIP COMES THIS WAY.

Over Eight Hundred Peterboroughians Journey to Toronto to Witness the Local Men Win the O. H. A. Trophy —The Crimson and White in Evidence.

It is estimated that the Peterborough people outnumbered, by two to one, the citizens of Toronto last night at the Granite rink and witnessed the boys from the Pride Grass City win the intermediate championship honours of the Ontario Hockey Association. There was a big crowd at the rink, but from every quarter encouragement was shouted to the Peterborough team, and high over all rang the bugle calls of Sgt. Hillier and the slogan which was given forth with such effect in Kingston, when the semi-final was won.

The game was, without doubt, the fastest ever played in the intermediate series, and the local men, never met foemen more worthy of their steel. In going up to Toronto the boys over the fact that Montgomery was almost too ill to play and Parsons, on account of a strained ankle, was unable to go upon the ice. Sam Adams was chosen at the last minute to take the latter's place and play at cover point, and a more happy selection was never made. It was a selection which, without doubt, won Peterborough the championship, as even the Toronto men acknowledged that never on Granite ice before had the position been played so well.

WERE RATHER DISHEARTENED

The puck was faced at 8.22 o'clock, Phelan securing it. King made a splendid shot on goal which was skillfully stopped. The ice was keen and in splendid condition and by the fast play at the beginning of the game it was apparent that the match would be of unusual interest. Toronto scored in four minutes.

After some pretty combination play, during which Adams showed up brilliantly at cover-point, King scored for the Peterboroughs.

During the next half war was brought into the Peterborough's territory with a vim and in the scrimmage one of the goal necessitating a delay of ten minutes. Two minutes after play was resumed Wonham and King made a rush down the ice together and the latter shot the puck between the flags, placing Peterborough in the lead by one game.

POSTS WAS SNAPPED OFF,

In two minutes Toronto tied the score but it only took three more for Adams and King to make a rush, the latter scoring again for Peterborough.

Toronto again tied the score, just taking two minutes to do it. Wonham scored the next game for Peterborough in two and a half minutes. In this game Roger Davidson held his end up well and attracted attention by his strong play.

In the eighth game, there was a heavy attack made on the Peterborough goals and it required all of Dixon's cleverness to save the flags. One stop in particular which he made was one, which called forth spontaneous cheer from the spectators.

MONTGOMERY RELIEVED BRILLIANTLY and passed the puck out to Phelan, who carried it down the ice and scored in two and a half minutes.

Peterborough, through splendid combination play, now led by a score of 5—3, but a decision of the referee, whereby King was ruled off for one game on a misunderstanding, had the effect of rattling the boys, who were of the opinion that the decision was misapplied, and the result was that in four minutes Toronto tied the score. Half time was called shortly afterwards.

The game was resumed at 9.15 and the play was very fast from the start; back and forth went the puck, carried from goal to goal by combination plays of the most brilliant description. Finally the Granites were forced to play a defence game entirely, and so thickly did they cluster around their flags that it seemed impossible for the puck to be forced through. A sigh of relief went up from the Toronto men when one of their number eventually relieved and the up towards the Peterborough posts. The Granite forwards started to follow up and for a brief instant left their flags unguarded as they rushed to the front. This one instant proved fatal, for though standing far down past the centre of the rink, Adams by a marvellous shot raised the puck through the flags and scored for Peterborough and placed them in the lead once more.

Cheer after cheer was sent up as the goal was won by one of the truest shots that ever was made on the ice.

Toronto made a big effort to redeem the lost point, and after ten minutes more of sharp play were successful, though on what might be termed a fluke, as so palpable an offside took place, as to induce the Peterboroughs to hesitate a second in expectancy of hearing the referee's whistle, but he, evidently,

DID NOT WITNESS THE INCIDENT, and the instant's hesitation was all that the Torontos required to enable them to even the game and place the score at 6—6.

When play was resumed it was known that there only remained five minutes in which to score before time would be called, and both teams accordingly commenced play with a firm determination of winning under any circumstances. The play was furiously fast, and slowly but surely the Torontos were forced back on the defensive while the puck whirled around and around their flags. Shots on the goal rained fast and heavy, and the Toronto defense played a magnificent game, but it was an uphill fight. Peterborough never show up so brilliantly as on the home stretch, and the close of last evening's game was no exception to the rule. All the play was within

TEN FEET OF THE GRANITE FLAGS.

Finally the puck was worked in behind the posts and sent through from there off Phelan's skate to Wonham who stood directly in front of the posts. With a lightning like sweep of his stick he reached the puck just a fraction of a second before a stroke from an opponent. The fraction of a second was all that was required, however, and a deafening cheer announced that Peterborough once more led the score by one point, the games standing 7—6. Just at the instant the puck struck the wall in the rear of the flags, timekeeper George Harkins jumped down on the ice and called time. It did not take the Peterborough contingent long to realize that the championship had been again won for the Plate Glass City and with a volley of hurrahs they swarmed out upon the ice.

The old Granite rink has witnessed in its time, but without a doubt there never was a wilder time in the building than at the close of the match. Every player was hoisted shoulder high in a trice and the Toronto people could not help joining in the enthusiasm too when they saw how the Peterboroughans proceeded to make little gods of their valiant hockey team, who were all carried off the ice in state on the shoulders of the excursionists. For fully an hour the ice was crowded with Peterboroughs anxious to shake another Peterboroughian by the hand and raise another cheer over the victory.

SOME STIRRING SCENES

The two teams lined up as follows:

Peterboroughs.		Granite II.
Dickson	goal	Livingstone
Montgomery	point	McArthur
Lefevre	cover point	Lillie
Davidson	forwards	Lillie
Phelan		Dixon
King		Ewing
Wonham		Johnston

Referee—Mr. C. G. K. Nourse.

NOTES.

District Passenger Pease, of the Grand Trunk, who has taken such an interest in the victories of the local hockey team, came up from Montreal and went up to Toronto on the special train with the boys and witnessed the match.

During the afternoon and evening the Peterborough colours, scarlet and white, were in evidence everywhere in the city, and courtesies were showered on the wearers thereof in every quarter.

Scores of ladies from Peterborough were present and witnessed the match.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

Respecting the hockey match the Globe says:—"The match by long odds was the liveliest in the O.H.A. series, either senior or Junior, play in Toronto this winter, and was witnessed by the biggest and most enthusiastic crowd of the season. Two excursions were run from Peterborough for the event, and nearly three-fourths of the spectators were from that town. Adams at cover point and Phelan and King on the rush line were the bright particular stars of the Peterboroughs."

"The Mail and Empire says: "As an all-round exhibition of hockey, the final match has not been excelled here this winter. The teams were very evenly matched, both played rattling fast games, and put up strong defences, and the players in each were on the puck all the time. The scoring was see-sawed from beginning to end, and, as the summary will show, the excitement was maintained at fever heat until the call of time. At the last though the Granites waged a terrific onslaught on Peterborough's goal, they were unable to get in, whereas when the scene of action was transferred to their own goal they were unable to keep out the hot shot directed by Peterborough's lightning little player, King. King was the star of his team, and, with Phelan, played a remarkably clever game. Wonham also was much in evidence for the champions, while Montgomery was almost unpassable at point.

Consumption—Low Condition

Wonderful Results From Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Miss Hannah Wyatt
Toronto, Ont.

"Four years ago while in the old country (England), my daughter Hannah was sent away from the hospital, in a very low condition with consumption of the lungs and bowels, and weak action of the heart. The trip across the water to this country seemed to make her feel better for a while. Then she began to get worse, and for 14 weeks she was unable to get off the bed. She grew worse for five months and lost the use of her limbs and lower part of body, and if she sat up in bed had to be propped up with pillows. Physicians

Said She Was Past All Help

and wanted me to send her to the 'Home for Incurables.' But I said as long as I could hold my hand up she should not go. We then began to give her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She is getting strong, walks around, is out doors every day; has no trouble with her throat and no cough, and her heart seems to be all right again. JOHN LANG THE MAN.

EAST PETERBOROUGH LIBERAL CONVENTION.

A LARGE AND ENTHUSIASTIC GATHERING.

John Lang, Esq., the Unanimous Nominee—He Accepts the Candidature—And Enters Upon the Fight to Win—Enthusiastically Supported by the Convention—Prominent Conservatives Working for Him—Addresses and Resolutions—East Peterborough to be Redeemed.

One of the most successful and enthusiastic political conventions—if not the most—was held in the Town Hall, Norwood, on Tuesday. The hall was well filled with delegates from every part of this immense riding which stretches from Rice Lake on the south to the borders of Algonquin Park on the north. Nearly every municipality in the riding was represented, and the delegates present were full of fight and enthusiasm and anxious for the fray. Among were the following gentlemen:—

THOSE PRESENT

Risk, John Fitzpatrick, Westwood; Dr. Moffat, Norwood; David Kelly, Dummer; John Stewart, Belmont; Wm. Sharp, Westwood; D. J. Connelly, Havelock; Robt. McCutcheon, Methuen.

BEGINNING BUSINESS.

Mr. J. M. Drummond, President of the East Riding Reform Association, occupied the chair, and expressed his pleasure at seeing so large a number present representing almost every corner of the vast riding. They were present for the purpose of nominating a candidate to contest the representation of the east riding, and to carry it. (Applause). He had every confidence that whatever local prejudices might exist in favor of any particular candidate would be subordinate to the general good of the Liberal cause and that the deliberation of the convention would result in the selection of a candidate that would be acceptable to all parts of the riding. The selection of such a candidate was but a beginning—only the signal for active aggression and united work and he was sure the result would be a victory for the Liberal cause on polling day. (Cheers). Mr. Drummond then called for and the following were made:

NOMINATIONS

John Brown, ex-Warden and ex-Reeve of Belmont, nominated by J. B. McWilliams, seconded by John Lang.

John Lang, ex-M.P., Otonabee, by Alex. Niven and John Findlay.

W. R. Roxburgh, Norwood, by Charles O'Reilly and Wm. Drummond.

Alex. Niven, Haliburton, by Dr. Stevenson and W. A. F. Campbell.

J. M. Drummond, Otonabee, by E. Hawthorne and Samuel Armstrong.

J. B. McWilliams, Peterborough, by John Lang and A. Niven.

J. R. Stratton, Peterborough, by Thos. Fraser and Jas. Robb.

John Findlay, by Geo. Nicholl and Jas. Moore.

E. Hawthorne, by Geo. Payne, jr., and Wm. Matheson.

Wm. Anderson, by John Findlay and John McMillan.

Wm. Hastie by S. Armstrong and Robt. Eason.

Thos. Fraser by L. Lonergan and J. J. Crowe.

Jas. Moore by J. McMullen and Robert Tudhope.

CANDIDATES WITHDRAW.

Mr. J. M. Drummond, while appreciating the honour, desired to withdraw his name, but he would willingly give his best support to any candidate that received the nomination.

Mr. E. Hawthorne and Mr. Anderson wished to withdraw their names. They felt it their duty to work for the return of any candidate that might be chosen.

Mr. W. R. Roxburgh was not a candidate, but he would use his best efforts to secure the return of the choice of the convention.

Mr. John Brown, of Belmont, wished to decline the nomination with thanks to the gentleman who had nominated him. He was indeed glad to see so many present and to note that the gathering was of so representative a character. He was present because he believed that the Liberal policy was in the interests of the country. He had been a supporter and worker for the N.P. since 1878, but he felt that the present government had made a mockery of the promises made in the name of the National Policy which had failed to answer the expectations of those who had assisted in making it the policy of the country. After a careful study of the platform and policy of the great Liberal party and its adaptability to the present needs of the country, he was prepared to support that policy and consequently the candidate the convention might agree upon, and he would put forth his best efforts to secure the election of a candidate in opposition to the present government, no matter whom the Conservatives nominated. The present government were not legislating in the interests of the farmer or workingmen and he wanted no more of their promises.

Mr. Charles O'Reilly, of Asphodel, known as a life long Conservative worker said he had supported the N. P. since 1878, but he believed it had failed in its purpose and and he was prepared to support the policy of the Liberal party and to give his aid in electing a candidate that might be nominated to-day.

Mr. John Lang said he was not anxious to be the candidate. He had been one term as their representative, and the position was an honour that should be passed around. There were other men than himself who could carry the riding. He himself had carried the riding several years ago, and it could be done again in the Liberal interests. If, however, he were the unanimous choice of the convention, he would feel it his duty to redeem the riding as he had done before.

Mr. Jas. Moore and Mr. J. R. Stratton briefly declined the honour and retired.

Mr. A. Niven said he was not a candidate. As he remarked when nominating Mr. Lang, he believed that if that gentleman consented to run "we can elect our man." (Cheers.) Mr. Lang had a strong position in the northern part of the riding, and if he were loyally supported in the other parts of the riding, there was no doubt of his being elected.

Mr. John Finlay, who sat alongside Mr. Lang, said he would like to withdraw, but Mr. Lang would not allow him to do so.

Mr. Thomas Fraser had no intention of running—there were other and abler men for the position of candidate. He had always supported to the full extent of his ability the choice of the convention, and he was prepared to do the same to-day. He would work as hard as he was able till the close of the poll on election day. He was sure that with united work we could carry the riding. The candidate must be loyally backed and all friends of good government must buckle to and elect their candidate.

This reduced the candidates to two, Mr. Findlay and Mr. Lang.

Mr. Findlay withdrew from the candidature, and moved, seconded by Mr. Niven, that

MR. LANG'S NOMINATION

be made unanimous.

The motion was carried amidst great enthusiasm and in response to loud calls Mr. Lang made a few remarks.

Mr. Lang thanked the convention for the honour of the unanimous nomination he had received. He accepted the nomination in the same earnest spirit in which it had been offered and he entered the contest with a determination to win the riding, and he was satisfied that with the earnest co-operation of his friends he could again redeem the East Riding. But he must have the assistance of every one present at the convention, and all the friends of the Liberal party. He wished to win the election himself and he felt that he could do so for the cause he represented was a good one. He preferred not being elected at all if improper means were necessary to secure his return. He would do his best to carry the riding, and he had no doubt that with earnest, active and aggressive work victory would crown the efforts of the Liberal party in this riding at the coming elections. (Loud Cheers).

MR. STRATTON'S ADDRESS.

In response to loud calls, Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., came forward and responded, giving a brief but earnest address. He said that the enthusiasm and unanimity of the nomination must be gratifying to the candidate, and it only remained for the Liberals of East Peterborough to rally solidly to his support and there could be no doubt of his election. Reference was made to the necessity of active, energetic work. In regard to the political situation the speaker said the question was can the electors trust the men in power at present? It had been promised by them in the name of the N.P. that it would bring prosperity. Had that promise been fulfilled? If the electors considered the matter in relation to their personal condition, the answer must be that those promises had not been kept, and a thousand indications existed of the great necessity of a change. In 1878, the farmers were promised good prices for their horses and to-day horses were a drug on the hands of the farmers—cannot be sold at anything approaching a paying price, and the prices of all farm produce had likewise decreased. The speaker did not hold the Government directly responsible for this state of things, but he blamed them for holding out misleading inducements to the people and deceiving them with false promises. Their whole policy had been one of deceit and false promises. Reference had been made to the misleading promises in regard to the operations of the N. P., in 1878. In 1882 Sir John Macdonald had promised the people that there would be a mighty

DELUGE OF BRITISH CAPITAL

to develop the country under the protection of the N. P. Had one jot of that promise been fulfilled? Were the majority of our manufacturing industries, outside of some specially coddled combines, in a sound and prosperous condition? Capital had not come in but the prices of farm produce had touched the lowest, (it was to be hoped the lowest,) figure in the history of the country. In the elections of 1891 the government attempted to delude the farmers with the bogus promise of its intention of securing a reciprocity treaty with the United States, when, as a matter of fact, no negotiations to that end had been made nor had the government any prospect whatever of being able to secure such a treaty. And in the elections of 1896, in this district especially, the Trent Valley Canal scheme had been re-galvanized into new life, and was being again used as a bait to the people to support the government. We all say we want the Trent Valley Canal, but what assurance had the people from the past history of broken promises and pledges to hope, from the present splurge of excessive interest just at the time of an election? The Government had used the canal as a tool to deceive the people. If the Government had been as much earnest in digging the canal as they had been in making it a bribe to buy votes, it would have been completed long ago. The speaker referred in strong terms of reprobation to the scandalous spectacle of a Minister of the Crown, at Peterborough,

HOLDING OUT THE BRIBE

in the declaration that the canal would be built if the government were supported. The speaker had not a word to say against the Trent Valley Canal; it was a work of importance, but he had only the strongest denunciation of the lavish expenditure and waste of public funds on public works in the shape of wholesale bribery. This policy that had been pursued in the past had resulted in the rapid increase of the public debt, which had jumped from 140 millions in 1878 to nearly 260 millions at the present time. And by the same system of extravagant and corrupt expenditure the annual expenditure from 23 millions in 1878 to 37 millions in 1894. The country had had a long siege of corrupt and extravagant administration, and the audience were asked if they expected anything better under the new regime. Could they expect anything better from the elevation to the position of premier of a man who had engineered through the Government by virtue of his position as Minister of the Crown, of the great Blind Shares scandal, by which Premier Bowell's son-in-law had a pull of several thousand dollars out of the public chest? The fact that a subservient parliament had whitewashed Mr. Bowell, did not make him any the less responsible for this grand political crime, to this day unrepented of. This crime was a direct result of the policy of the Dominion Government of administering the great trust of our public lands in the interests of partizans and supporters, while the policy of the Liberals was the land for the actual settler, the only policy in the interests of the settler and the country. The timber policy of the Dominion and Ontario Government were contrasted to the great disadvantage of the latter. The speaker warned the electors that the present would be a hard battle against the influences of corrupt practices. Reference was made to the scandalous waste of $100,000 of public money to prosecute and send to jail McGreevy and Connolly for their misdeeds, only to release them after two or three months' confinement. These criminals were but they were released because they threatened to divulge dark secrets, which would still further darken the record of the Government in connection with their crimes. Sir Hector Langevin was driven out of the Cabinet while bigger criminals still held office and enjoyed the emoluments of power. In spite of the big expenditure on immigration, we had lost not only the natural increase, but half the number of immigrants that had come into the country, showing that the country was so badly governed that the people forsook it. If for no other of the thousand reasons, for the one single reason of that costly fraud, the Dominion Franchise Act, the government should be hurled from power. Every revision cost the country $250,000, not to speak of the cost to the two great parties, and any reeve present could say that the lists were not so full and fair, as the inexpensive lists prepared under the municipalities. It was pointed out that the past history of Conservative government would make nice reading to place in our school books. Suppose a simple history of the annexation manifesto, signed by prominent Tories, should be put into the first book; into the second, a record of the rotten egging by Conservatives of Her Majesty's representative; in the third book, a story of how loyal Conservatives burned the Parliament buildings, and in the fourth, the story of the selling of the Pacific Railway charter for thousands of dollars to be used as a corruption fund.

NOT SENT TO GAOL FOR THEIR HEALTH,

After telling reference to the hollowness of the Conservative cry of loyalty, Mr. Stratton urged the electors to unite solidly in their candidate, and energetically fight out the battle on the broad platform of the Liberal party. The farmers in so doing would be waging a war in their own best interests by helping to bring to an end a fiscal policy that was enriching the few at the expense of the many, and that had been promised in its name. He would not be in favour of any sudden or violent change, but of procuring tariff reform by carrying out the policy of our honoured leader, Hon. Wilfred Laurier. He (Mr. Stratton) would help Mr. Lang in his contest to the utmost of his power and if the fight was carried on in the determined spirit indicated by the meeting, he had no fear of the result. Mr. Stratton's speech had been frequently interrupted by applause, and he was greeted with loud cheers as he resumed his seat.

Mr. J. B. McWilliams being called upon, said he would not say anything at present. He knew Mr. Lang as a good worker. He had defeated Mr. Burnham by 130 in 1887, and Mr. Burnham was not nearly as strong now as then. Besides the voter's lists in the East were in good shape from a Liberal point of view and the prospects of a successful fight were never better.

Mr. J. M. Drummond said that the thanks of the convention should be tendered to Mr. McWilliams for the great interest he had taked in the revision of the voters' lists, and on motion of Mr. Finlay, seconded by Mr. J. J. Crowe, a cordial vote of thanks was tendered Mr. McWilliams and Mr. T. Fraser for their work in connection with the revision of the lists.

Mr. McWilliams briefly acknowledged the vote and said he was glad to see present in fighting trim Liberals who had been in the front of the battle for 30 years.

Mr. Alex. Niven in the course of a few remarks said that having agreed upon a candidate, we should get to work. The riding was a hard one to canvas—it extended from Rice Lake to Algonquin Park. As he previously remarked the candidate was well-known in the northern townships, and he (Mr. Niven) and Mr. Lang would attend to that; if the electors of the south did their duty everything would be right. The Liberal policy was a good one for the country and commended itself to the great mass of the electorate and he believed there was now a good chance of carrying the country.

Mr. E. Hawthorne, reeve of Dummer, said he had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Laurier speak in the Massey Music Hall, Toronto, and had the pleasure of sitting in the hall that the farmers had furnished the funds, through Mr. Massey, to build. At this point the took place with the following result:

President—(re-elected) J. M. Drummond.

Township—Vice-presidents,—Dummer, E. Hawthorne; Norwood, T. Rork; Douro, Mr. W. Moher; Asphodel, Wm. Sharp; Belmont, Wm. Burgess; Lakefield, Samuel Wilson; Ashburnham, John Wright; Burleigh and Anstruther, Alex. Brown; Chandos, David Campbell; Cavendish, Austin J. Ford; Glamorgan, Chas. Way; Monmouth, Chapman Holmes; Haliburton, A. Niven; Cardiff, Wm. Ogilvie; Otonabee, Wm. Anderson.

Secretary—(re-elected) W. E. Roxbergh.

Treasurer—Mr. Geo. Stewart.

After this business the following resolutions were unanimously and enthusiastically adopted:

Moved by Thos. Fraser, seconded by Jno. Miller, and resolved,

That we, the Liberals of the East Peterborough Riding, in convention assembled, take this opportunity of giving public expression to the high esteem in which we hold our trusted and faithful leader, the Hon. Wilfred Laurier. We have none but feelings of admiration of his surpassing talent and generous and faithful service to his country and his party. Believing that under his guidance there would be for Canada a return to prosperity, commercially, and to honesty and integrity in the administration of her public affairs, we pledge ourselves that, come when the contest may, we will by all legitimate means strive to send from this riding a representative who will be in harmony with the teachings of the Liberal party and a supporter of Canada's favourite son, Hon. Wilfred Laurier.

Moved by A. Niven, seconded by W. Anderson, and resolved,

"That this convention, believing that the best and truest interests of Canada will be promoted by the return to power of the Liberal party, under the leadership of Hon. Wilfred Laurier, and recognizing the fact that in unity is strength, we pledge ourselves to give a hearty and resolute support to the nominee of this convention, and individually and collectively agree to use all lawful means to secure his election."

Moved by E. Hawthorne, seconded by Chas. O'Reilly, and resolved:

That the Liberals of the East Riding of Peterborough in convention assembled, desire to place on record their hearty endorsation of the platform formulated at the Dominion Convention of Liberals, held in the city of Ottawa in June, 1893. This platform, we are convinced, is in the best interests of the country as a whole, and we pledge ourselves to an unswerving support of the principles therein enunciated.

A cordial vote of thanks was also tendered Mr. J. W. Drummond for his efficient occupancy of the office of vice-president for three years.

After hearty cheers for the Queen, Hon. Mr. Laurier and Mr. Lang, the most successful and most hopeful convention of Liberals ever held in East Peterborough, separated.

Pretty.

A bedroom suite of native white maple with birdseye maple panels, now in A. It is almost white, of neat design, just the thing for a young ladies room. Though pretty and dainty, it is not expensive. dw

ALL IN ONE DREAM.

WORK ACCOMPLISHED BY A MAN IN A SHORT SPACE OF TIME.

A Story Showing the Remarkable Swiftness With Which the Mind Works When It Is Supposed to Be Taking a Rest—How Long It Took to Do Ten Hours' Work.

A few evenings since a number of newspaper men were in an office awaiting the arrival of a gentleman who was to call together a meeting that they had been directed to report for their respective papers.

A number of topics was discussed, and one of these was dreams and the extreme rapidity with which mental operations are performed. A number of experiences were given, but the one that attracted the most attention was that of a Call representative, who narrated what he had done in a dream.

"It was," said he, "in 1868 that after a hard day's work I reached home and lost no time in retiring. Glancing at the clock as I turned off the gas I noticed that it was just 16 minutes after midnight.

"Shall I tell you at this point how long I was dreaming or tell first what I did in my dream? That you all may better appreciate what was done, I will defer the matter until the end. Bear in mind that what is to be told was all in the dream. Seated in the old office on Commercial street, above Montgomery, I was endeavoring to put into presentable shape the facts of a trial that had taken place in the district court, when in came E. A. Rockwell, who was the chief editorial writer, and calling me by name said: 'You had better get ready and go to San Leandro. There's been a terrible railroad accident. There's 50 or 60 people killed, and I don't know how many injured.' George E. Barnes, at that time one of the proprietors and managing editors, had overheard Rockwell, and in that quiet way of his suggested that no time be lost in reaching Oakland, and there procuring a buggy and a pair of horses, to go to San Leandro or wherever the accident was.

"Rushing down to the ferry landing at the corner of Pacific and Davis streets, I reached there in time to find that the steamer for the other side of the bay had just pulled out, and that I would have to wait half an hour for the next boat. The delay was vexatious, and then when the ferry boat did move eastward it seemed as if she would never make her landing, she seemed to be going so slowly. When the slip on the other side was reached, there was some accident to the local train, and there was not any prospect of starting for an hour or more. There was not a team of any kind at the landing, so I had to walk to Oakland.

"A desire to make up for the time lost urged me on, and I think the time made from the landing to Broadway and Washington street has never been beaten by man. Near the corner I went into a livery stable and ordered a pair of horses hitched up. There was a delay there, for the proprietor had his doubts about the ability of the team making the trip out and back. Finally I started, and the way those horses flew over the road was a caution. When the scene of the disaster, some distance beyond San Leandro, about 14 miles from Oakland, was reached, I proceeded at once to gather the facts.

"Down on the notebook were penciled the names of 30 odd men, women and children who had either been killed outright or burned to death in some of the cars which had caught fire. Then followed the names of about 40 who had been injured, a description of their injuries and the opinions of the physicians who were in attendance as to the possible outcome in each case. Now, any of you who have had experience in gathering information of that kind can fully appreciate that it was not child's play, for the injured were in different places, and it required time to get around to them all.

"Then there was the obtaining of data about the dead. A number of them were well known residents of this city, others were from San Jose, so it became necessary to obtain enough to give each a decent obituary notice. In addition to this it became a part of my duty to get the statements of passengers, so as to describe their feelings when the train derailed and went over on its side down a little gully and be able to write up the narrow or fortunate escape of each. Then there were railroad officials to interview, and, as you all know, they are the hardest kind of people to obtain facts from.

"Well, it took nearly three hours to get all the matter that was needed for a sensational article that was to appear under a half column scare head. Then there was the ride back to Oakland settlement with the livery stable man, who swore that he would never rent a team to a newspaper man again, a rush in a hack to the ferry landing and the trip to this city. Without waiting to get anything to eat I made my way to the office and at once commenced to write up, telling every one who came to ask for details to let me alone. I did not write in copper plate style, and for that matter I never did, but I wrote and kept on writing until I had enough to fill what would make about four full columns of The Call of the present day and wrote that big scare head. As I handed the last line to the foreman to set up I heaved a sigh of relief and exclaimed, 'Thank goodness, that's done!' That is my dream.

"At that moment I felt a hand on my shoulder, jumped from the bed and heard my wife ask, 'What are you dreaming about?' I lit the gas, looked at the clock and discovered that it was 17½ minutes after midnight, or, in other words, that in my dream of less than two minutes I had performed all that I have related.

"I have figured on the time it would take me to do what I did in that dream and find that it could not be done in less than 10 hours under the most favorable circumstances."—San Francisco Call.

Overfastidious Taste.

Men overfastidious in their choice of tea have been victims of their too vivid imaginations. One man objected to a brand of tea purchased by his wife, pronouncing it "weeds," and accordingly selected a choice kind. His next cup of tea was pronounced perfect. The color was good, and "That's a cup of tea for you" was said with emphasis as he drank the second cup made from the "weeds" his wife had bought.—Good Housekeeping.

Times Have Changed.

Thieves who entered the house of the pastor of St. James Methodist Episcopal church in Harlem stole $800 worth of silver. The surprise is not that they stole it, but that the minister had it. Times have changed since the apostolic itinerant said, "Silver and gold have I none."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Choice Woods on the Farm.

There is money in the choice woods of the farm. A letter from a prominent New Jersey tool manufacturer offers $30 per 1,000 for beech seasoned one year and $50 for apple wood. Birch, maple, cherry, elm and hickory also sell for much more than they are worth at the woodpile. The wood must be sawed in some shape and can be sold in a great many directions, principally for making plane and other tool handles.—Detroit Household.

A Big Lobster Pound.

There is a lobster farm, or pound, as it is called, 12 acres in extent at Southport, Me. This pound is the most successful on the coast, whence 1,000,000 lobsters are shipped each year. The pound is formed by building a solid dam across a tidewater cove. This dam does not quite rise to high water mark, but across the top is placed a fence of iron rods, permitting a daily change of water and preventing the lobsters from escaping. In the spring and fall business is most brisk.

When the fishermen bring the lobsters to the pound, the "fish," as they are called, are hoisted to the dam, measured, and those which are more than 10½ inches long, the legal limit, are thrown in. If a lobster is clever, his life in the pound may be long and full of joy. If he is stupid, he will be fished, out with a drag seine and packed in a barrel, with a piece of ice for a pillow, and sent to Boston. The seine is made of stout twine and is weighted at the bottom with a heavy chain. Along the top is a row of corks, which sustain the weight of the seine while the chain drags on the bottom of the pound.

A single cast of this seine will bring up lobsters enough to fill 11 barrels. The chain as it sweeps along the bottom stirs up the lobsters, which immediately shoot backward into the slack twine. In taking them out the men wear heavy mittens, though even then they are often nipped. In the pound the lobsters are fed on salt herring, men rowing about in skiffs and pitching the herring overboard. This is called "feeding the chickens," and it takes about six barrels to make a light luncheon for the flock.—Boston Globe.

The Cat In Ancient Times.

The cat was so very highly regarded in England at one time, both as a rat and mouse catcher, and as an ornament to society, that we find the following salutary law passed by one of the princes of Wales:

"If any one steal or kill a Cat that guards the Prince's Granery, he is to forfeit a milch Ewe, its Fleece and Lamb. Or, as much Wheat as, when poured upon the cat suspended from its tail, with the head touching the floor, would form a heap high enought to cover the tip of the former."

Though the Welsh had a high opinion of the cat, the ancient Egyptians had a still higher. These intelligent and civilized people treated cats with great distinction. It was a crime to kill them, and when they died they received a public burial, at which the people mourned, having first shaved off their eyebrows as a token of sorrow. The most prominent cats were upon death embalmed in drugs and spices, and cat mummies have been found side by side with those of kings. When Cambyses, the Persian, attacked the Egyptian city of Pelusis, he cunningly provided his soldiers with cats instead of shields. When the host advanced, the Egyptians retired in confusion upon discovering that they would be unable to do damage to their enemy without seriously imperiling the lives of vast numbers of cats. And so the city was taken easily and without the loss of blood or of a cat. It cannot be disputed that the ancient Egyptian cats must have enjoyed life very much.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Yankee Doodle."

The tune of "Yankee Doodle" has had seven or eight treatises written upon it in the last 80 years, ascribing it to various dates and origins, even back to The Netherlands and the days of Cromwell and the Charleses. Dr. George Grove of London, author of the "Dictionary of Music and Musicians," has investigated thoroughly the various musical libraries and the British museum in England, finding no traces of it whatever, thus exploding all the mystical, traditional and apochryphal accounts thereof.

But "Yankee Doodle" had an origin and has a history. It was written by Dr. Richard Schuchburg, whose commission dates 1737, in the French and Indian war of 1755 under General Jeffrey Amherst and was intended as a "take off" on the "rag, tag and bobtail" recruits of the colonies that came into the army. It "took" so well, however, that the Americans have ever adopted it and would not part with it for anything. The first words,

Father and I went down to camp, were in the Boston Journal in 1768, and the first record of the tune is in Arnold's "Two to One," 1780, so that "Yankee Doodle," although written by a British surgeon, is really American.—Boston Transcript.

Easy Tests For Proving a Diamond.

It is an easy matter to detect the difference between a genuine diamond and an imitation. Take a tube of filtered water and drop the stone therein. If it is paste, it can be seen as it passes through the water, but if pure the eye is unable to see it at all. Another test is to place the stone upon a pencil dot made on a piece of white paper. If the dot is duplicated upon the facets you can rest assured that the stone is a fraud, but if not it is a good stone. The common belief that a stone can be tested by filing is erroneous, for the best diamond ever cut will splinter and break when rasped with this instrument.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

What John Wanamaker, the Most Heavily Insured man in America, Says:

(INTERVIEW WITH JOHN WANAMAKER.)

It is very generally known that Ex-Postmaster General John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, carries the largest amount of Life Insurance of any man in the United States. A representative of the press recently interviewed this gentleman while he was travelling with the Presidential party, and this interview will be found, we believe, of general interest:—

"You are said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, Mr. Wanamaker," remarked the press representative.

"How did you come to think of that?" he said with a smile. "You are not looking for any disaster under such excellent management as our friend Boyd is giving this train and party?"

"No," I replied. "A newspaper friend in San Francisco, who had heard the report, wanted me to ask you if it was true, and if so, what your business reasons are for it?"

"Well," he modestly answered, "I have heard it stated that I am the most heavily insured man in the country. I don't know about that. The amount of my policies is $1,550,000, and the value, with the accumulations since the policies were taken out, is about two millions of dollars."

"In what class of companies are your policies?"

"They are all in stock and mutual companies, and none of them in what are known as assessment or instalment companies."

"Are they full life term policies or on what is termed the 'tontine' plan?"

"I have generally taken ten and fifteen payment policies and very few life policies. With about all good companies a contract can now be made whereby there is no risk of losing a policy after two years' premiums have been paid. If the party insured chooses to withdraw he can get a paid-up policy. Indeed, I understand that some companies have forms whereby the insurer can after one year, if desired, withdraw and receive a paid-up policy. There is practically little risk, any more, in insuring in the old companies."

"Perhaps you would be willing to tell me how you came to insure so heavily?"

"I thought the matter out, and convinced myself that it was a good business venture. Besides, it seemed to me that I might, perhaps, give away more money in lifetime if there was a fixed certainty of putting it back into my estate by Life Insurance. I conceive that the best way for a man to carry on benevolence is not to leave it to be done through his will, but to do it in his lifetime, and I felt that Life Insurance would give me more freedom in carrying out some plans I have, and which I would be glad to see completed before I leave this world. If you want to ascertain what the circumstances were in placing the Life Insurance, I must go further in my answers and say that I should not have gone so far in my Life Insurance but for the skill of the agent who tackled me to insure to a greater extent than I would otherwise have done. He was an old friend who had been in mercantile business and who knew how to present Life Insurance without boring me. I feel to-day sincerely grateful to the man who followed me so discreetly with information about companies, and who kept the subject before me until I settled the question."

"When did you begin taking Life Insurance policies?"

"My first policy was taken when I was twenty-one."

"Do you consider it a good thing for a man of small means?"

"I certainly do. Most young men spend more for cigars during the year than the annual cost of a $2,500 policy in a good company. If they must have the cigars they might divide between cigars and Life Insurance and carry at least a $1,000 policy. I think every young man, before he is married, ought to try to get at least a $1,000 policy."

"Among how many companies are your policies divided, and where are they located?"

"About forty companies. Most of them are located in the East. A few are in the West and a few in Canada."

"Do you recommend Life Insurance to others, especially those in whom you feel a personal interest?"

"I can perhaps answer that best by saying that I presented a few years ago a $1,000 policy, paid up for one year, to every insurable head of family in my employ. Many of the prudent men who received them not only kept them but added to them, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that in not a few cases those policies have been the means of saving worthy families from want."

It will doubtless be of interest to our readers to know that John Wanamaker carries a large policy in the Canada Life Insurance Company, thus evincing his confidence in the soundness of Canada's oldest and largest Company. During the last few years quite a number of American capitalists have been convinced of the SUPERIOR MERITS OF THE CANADA LIFE, and have accordingly placed their insurance therein, in preference to any other company.

The Canada Life is now being recognized in the states of Michigan, Minnesota and Ohio as the Company that gives the best results for the least premium.

DEGENERATE CAPTIVES.

Where waters tremble into hillside lights
From rocky crevices and shaded pools
The wild stag paants, watch, full while he cools
His shapely limbs. His proud head towered the heights
He lifts to look in contemplative mood
On his companions feeding freely there
From nature's lavish feast, spread everywhere,
And asking no man's friendship or his food.

Where men betake themselves in tacit thrifts
Of city foulness runs a deer glen girt
With close set barriers. Here, tame, inert,
The deer caress men's hands for paltry gifts.

A Telegraph Line Before Morse's.

Honor to the poineers in the vast field of science! Mr. John Sime has published at the Chiswick Press in pamphlet form a very interesting memoir of Sir Francis Ronalds. Twenty years before Wheatstone and Cooke or Morse had patented their improvements in the telegraph, indeed while the first two were respectively lads of 12 and 14 years of age, Ronalds had sent messages over eight miles of overhead wires of his own construction and had laid and worked a serviceable underground line of telegraph of sufficient length to demonstrate the practicability of communication by telegraph between long distances.

Details of his overhead telegraph wires were published by him in 1823. Ronalds' residence at Hammersmith, where these experiments were carried out, is the house now and for long past occupied by Mr. William Morris, the poet, who has caused a tablet to be placed on the wall bearing the inscription, "The first electric telegraph, eight miles long, was constructed here in 1816 by Sir Francis Ronalds, F. R. S.," etc. An autotype facsimile of a portrait of this father of electric communication accompanies the publication. — London Telegraph.

Calculating the Distance of a Storm.

Although lightning and thunder occur always simultaneously, an interval of shorter or longer duration is usually observed between these two phenomena, which is due to the fact that sound travels only at the rate of 1,100 feet per second, while the passage of light is almost instantaneous. Based upon this fact, it is an easy matter to tell, at least approximately, how many miles a thunderstorm is away. A normal pulse will beat about one stroke to the second, and by counting the pulse beats during the interval of the lightning and the thunder the lapse of seconds is arrived at and consequently the number of feet, which can be reduced to miles.

For example: If 30 seconds elapse between the flash of the lightning and the crash of thunder, the storm center is at a distance of 33,000 feet, or about 6¼ miles. An almost accurate calculation can be made by using a watch with a minute dial.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Use Pure Water Freely.

Unhygienic habits report themselves unmistakably in the skin both in color and odor. To health and beauty it is essential that one should use pure water (rain water is best) frequently and freely and follow its use with brisk friction all over the body with a piece of coarse flannel, which is a wonderful aid to a soft and glowing skin, as it stimulates healthful circulation. Sun and air baths are necessary to the proper nutritive functions of the skin, and daily attention to the promptings of nature is imperative to save it from becoming a vehicle for offensive exhalation. Care will do much to put off the evil day of wrinkles and decay.—Exchange.

They Make Auroras to Order.

Artificial miniature auroras of the borealis variety have been produced by both De la Rive, the French savant, and Lenstrom, the Swedish astronomer. In Professor Lenstrom's experiments, which were made in Finland, the peak of a high mountain was surrounded with a coil of wire, pointed at intervals with tin nibs. The wire was then charged with electricity, whereupon a brilliant aurora appeared above the mountain, in which spectroscopic analysis revealed the greenish yellow rays so characteristic in nature's display of "northern lights."—St. Louis Republic.

Fruit Good at Any Time.

All fruit is said to be most wholesome the first thing in the morning—and surely no fruit is so cleansing and refreshing and very little so delicious at that hour as a big juicy melon, cooled over night and almost cracking open and voluntarily exposing its red heart after the knife has gone partly through it. Such a melon, however, is just as good at other hours in the hot days, for which it seems to be especially provided as a refreshing experience, something more than the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. It is no wonder the southern darkies are so fond of watermelons. In these most trying days of the long summer of the south the melon is more refreshing than chill dewdrops on the early morning grass, and to the overheated, overwearied and thirsty soul a good juicy ripe one "comes home to the business and the bosoms" of darky and white man alike.—Hartford Times.

A number of young folks attended the carnival in Peterborough last Friday evening.

A hockey match between teams picked from the village and high school clubs. The game was hotly contested and resulted in a victory for the high school team.

A very interesting event took place at the residence of Dr. S. P. Ford, last Thursday evening in the marriage of his daughter, Miss Lily, to Dr. J. M. Jory, a former resident of Norwood. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Jas. Anderson in the presence of a number of the relatives and friends of the bride and groom. Miss May Hugel assisted the bride and Dr. Kingston acted as groomsman. After the nuptial knot had been tied a sumptuous breakfast was enjoyed by those present. The happy couple left on the midnight train for Montreal. After an extended honeymoon Dr. and Mrs. Jory will settle in Bloomfield, where the Dr. has a lucrative practice. The best wishes of hosts of friends will follow them to their new home.

The annual winter races were opened on the pond here on Tuesday. There was a large gathering. The weather was fine, though somewhat cold for those standing on the ice. The named race and the three-minute trot were held with the following result:

FEMALE TROUBLES.

A Toronto Lady's Testimony Regarding Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—The efficacy of Dodd's Kidney Pills in all female troubles has long since been established, and scores of testimonials have been received in reference to the cures effected by the specific. The experience of Mrs. Mary Carleton of 25 Henry street, this city, is a case in point. Mrs. Mary Carleton writes as follows: "I was troubled for some time with a pain in my back and kidneys, and was recommended to try a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I did so, and the result was that in a very few days the pain left me, and I have been free from it since. Therefore, from experience I highly recommend your Pills to anyone suffering in this way." Poultry and Pet Stock Show—Berlin Assault Case—One Month in Jail For Fraud—Sir George Ross' Estate—Is it Murder?

COBOURG, Feb. 27.—The first annual exhibition of the Cobourg Poultry and Pet Stock Association was opened yesterday. The character of the exhibition is quite a surprise to the natives. Poultry of the highest grade commenced to arrive here on the evening express from the east. The first arrivals were magnificent from W. Gibbard, of Napanee; Dr. Mallory, John Merrow, T. H. Gales, of Colborne, and from the west on the midnight express a beautiful exhibit from Rev. Mr. George Legar, of Hamilton, consisting of Golden Rollands and Red-Breasted Games. Port Hope sends some of its world-winners. Among other well-known breeders are Brown & Langdon, who show about 20 birds, consisting of Golden Wyandottes, White Cochins and Red Banhums and Indian games; also J. L. Margaich, the Brown Leghorn man. McKnight & Osborne, of Bowmanville, are showing a very fine line of Hamberga, Javas, etc. But the greatest surprise to all is the high character of the Cobourg exhibition. Fred Field, the noted poultry fancier, shows at least fourteen red-breasted games, among others big gold medal cock. The exhibit of pigeons, canaries, etc., are very fine. To-day the dog exhibits will be open, when it is expected that nearly 100 dogs will be here for competition for some very good prizes. Mr. Kirk, president of the Toronto Kennel Club, will be the dog judge, and Mr. Jarvis, of the Ontario Agricultural Farm, will judge the poultry. There are at least 500 birds on exhibition.

South Perth Reformers.

ST. MARY'S, Ont., Feb. 27.—The annual meeting of the South Perth Reform Association was held here yesterday, commencing at 2 p.m. After the election of officers the selection of a candidate for the Dominion House in the approaching election was next in order. Mr. T. O. Robson, of St. Mary's, was first tendered the nomination, but declined. An adjournment for one hour was made in order to permit a conversation between Mr. Robson and the executive committee. After the convention reassembled the committee reported that Mr. Robson positively declined the nomination. Hon. T. Ballantyne was then tendered the nomination, but he also declined. The following were then nominated and allowed their names to go to the ballot: W. C. Mosorip, St. Mary's; G. H. McIntyre, St. Mary's; John Cameron, Usborne; and D. K. Erb, Downie. After several ballots Mr. G. H. McIntyre was chosen. After some consideration he also declined. Another adjournment was then made for supper and after again reassembling Mr. D. K. Erb, of Downie, received and accepted the nomination and the convention adjourned.

Berlin Assault Case.

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—The three ex-firemen, Massel Denyes and Silvert, appeared before Judge Lacourse yesterday on charge of assault preferred against them by Thos. Bishop, a month ago, and which had been enlarged till Bishop, who was seriously injured, could attend the court. He was present this morning and when put on the stand declared he was too drunk at the time to remember what happened. Eye witnesses of the fracas were then called upon to give evidence which went to show conclusively that it was most brutal assault and the judge committed Massel to two months, and each of the other two to one month each in jail at hard labor. This had a humiliating effect on the prisoners, who thought they would get clear with a warning. Gelbert has a large family of small children and much sympathy is expressed for them.

North York Reformers.

BRADFORD, Ont., Feb. 27.—About three hundred electors gathered yesterday at the North York convention to nominate a candidate in the reform interest. Wm. Cane, of Newmarket, occupied the chair, and Mr. Yule, of Aurora, was secretary of the meeting. The following gentlemen were nominated: William Mulock, M. P., the present member; E. J. Davis, of King; E. Jackson, Newmarket; A. Hughes, Sharon; Mr. Yule, Aurora; J. Ramsden, Mount Albert; J. Walton, Kettleby; Dr. Coulter, Aurora; C. Elliott, Bradford; E. Lundy, East Gwillimsbury; and W. E. Stoddard, of West Gwillimsbury. All the nominees delivered short speeches and retired in favor of Mr. Mulock. The meeting was a most enthusiastic one.

Fredericton Liberals' Convention.

FREDERICTON, N.B., Feb. 27.—The Liberal Convention here yesterday was attended by 175 delegates. After preliminaries, George F. Gregory was unanimously tendered the nomination. He retired, and after a half hour's consideration, declined on the ground that he had gone through so many campaigns that he could not spare time or money to undertake another, and also for reason that in 1891 he declared positively then that he would not again offer. Hon. F. P. Thompson was then tendered the nomination, but he declined for various reasons. E. H. Allan was next tendered the nomination and accepted. Mr. Allan is son of Chief Justice Allan, a clever speaker and very popular young man.

South Ontario Reform Association.

WHITBY, Ont., Feb. 27.—A meeting of the executive committee of the South Ontario Reform Association have made arrangements in the town hall here on Saturday, March 2nd, for a convention to nominate a candidate for the impending election to the House of Commons. Delegates to the convention are to be elected at primary meetings in each polling subdivision the day before the convention. Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture, is to be invited to be present to address the meeting following the selection of a candidate.

HYAMS CASE IN COURT

Preliminary Investigation of the Alleged Murder of Wells.

AYLESWORTH GIVES EVIDENCE

The Prisoners Ably Defended by Prominent Members of the Bar—A New York Lawyer Not Allowed to Take Part in the Defence.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—The preliminary investigation of the charge against the Hyams brothers of having murdered young Willie Wells, commenced before Police Magistrate Denison yesterday, and the intense interest taken in the case was shown by the large number of spectators present. What added to the already excited interests was the presence of New York's prominent lawyer, Mr. Francis L. Wellman, who has been retained for the defence. He came to the city yesterday, accompanied by his wife, nee Emma Juch. His partner, Mr. W. W. Gooch, was also present, having been retained for the prisoners. Besides these Messrs. E. F. B. Johnson, Q.C., W. G. Murdoch and T. W. Horne were also on hand for the prisoners. Crown Attorney Curry alone appeared for the prosecution.

Dallas Theodore Hyams and Harry Place Hyams, charged with the murder of William C. Wells, January 16, 1896, were told to stand up while the Magistrate read the charge. They looked well, but evidently the gravity of their position is deeply affecting them.

Mr. Johnston applied to the magistrate to have associated with the counsel for the defence Mr. Wellman, who has been for many years the solicitor for the Hyams family. The magistrate, however, said that such a proceeding would create a precedent which he could not be responsible for, and refused to allow Mr. Wellman to take part in the defence.

The hearing was then proceeded with and A. W. Barber, manager of the C.P.R. Telegraph Co., was the first witness called. He produced certain telegrams, but as they had not been sent by either of the prisoners his Worship held that they were inadmissible.

E. W. H. Aylesworth, the next witness, said H. P. Hyams married his wife's sister. He had known the prisoners about six years; had been in the brothers' employ; first entered it about February, 1892. He deposited a sum of money with them, for which he was to receive interest and employment at a salary. An agreement was made (produced) and signed by Martha E. Wells, William C. Wells, Harry P. Hyams and the witness, Wells. Aylesworth and Martha Wells were the parties of the first part and the sum of $2,700 was mentioned, which the three put in, and afterwards added $300 more. Each put in $1,000. Interest was to be paid at the rate of 1 per cent. per month. Salary was to be $8 and $10 per week respectively for Wells and witness. Wells was employed principally at writing a daily Dun Wiman sheet. Some of the copies were destroyed and some witness has since seen. Witness also did the same work and also did some reporting on different business houses. The brothers gave him the names to report upon.

After describing the work done by Martha and Willie Wells and himself the witness was shown a large quantity of envelopes and folios which he said had been written upon by the deceased and Miss Latimer, of the warehouse. Witness had seen envelopes burned by the prisoners. The money advanced by Wells, his sister and the witness upon going into the business was to be paid back in six months. A month's notice was given but the money was not paid because the Hyams said they couldn't get the money in.

The witness and Wells made an arrangement to meet the prisoners in the office subsequently and have a talk over the repayment of the money. When they went in a stack of bills a foot high was on the counter. The accused told the brother-in-law that they were going into the auction business on Colborne street. They would need some help, and offered to increase the salaries of Wells and Aylesworth to $10 and $15 a week respectively, provided they did not draw out their thousand dollars each. This was agreed to, and the witness was satisfied that Wells never got his money back as he was killed about three weeks afterwards. Aylesworth could swear that Harry Hyams told Wells on the Saturday before he was killed that he would pay back the $1,000 that had been borrowed.

Witness told of an interview that he and Wells had with the Hyams in which the prisoner advised them to insure their lives, mentioning the sum of $50,000. Both refused, saying that they could not pay the premiums. Subsequently Harry Hyams called at the witness' house and proposed that Wells take out a policy in Hyams' name, for which $2 500 was to be paid him inside of five years. At another interview in the warehouse the amount mentioned was $30,000. Aylesworth said that he had always been in the habit of going to the office every morning, but on the Sunday previous to Wells' death Harry Hyams had left word at his house on Mutual street for him to get some reports before coming down on Monday morning. He had seven places in all at which to call, and he did not complete the work until 12.30.

Two telegrams were produced, one sent on Saturday by Wells to his uncle in Pickering saying that he would be down and the other signed by Harry Hyams saying that they could not get away.

Photographs were exhibited of the hoist in the warehouse and witness when asked said that he had never known the weight in the shaft to become detached. The weight was produced and was carefully examined by Magistrate Denison.

Harry Hyams came into witness' house with his hands cut and bleeding. He said Wells had been hurt by the elevator and he thought badly. He had cut his hands in raising the weight from the young man's head. He went to the undertaker's and found the body of the boy there with the skull crushed.

Speaking of the insurance that was paid, Aylesworth said that he was present when the cheques amounting in all to about $34,000 were paid to Mrs. Harry Hyams. He knew that Hyams had secured nearly all of this with the exception of about $4,000. Personally he did not receive a cent.

In cross-examination witness admitted feeling strongly against the Hyams and that he had gone to Montreal and other places in quest of evidence against them. He was closely questioned as to the hook by which the weight was attached to the rope and said that if the one produced was not the identical one in use at the time of Wells' death it was one very similar.

Prior to January 16,1896, the date of Wells' death, he had heard remarks made about the elevator weight catching in the box. These were made by Wells himself and others. Orders had been given by Harry Hyams previous to the repairing of the elevator, that no one was to use it.

At the afternoon session of the court Mrs. Aylesworth, sister of Mrs. H. P. Hyams, gave evidence. She said that she had known the prisoners for six years and they were always talking of insurance.

DAIRYMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Interesting and Practical Addresses Made by the Members.

HARRISTON, Feb. 28.—The Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario held another successful district convention here yesterday afternoon and evening. Over 200 of the leading farmers of North Wellington were in attendance to listen to the excellent addresses delivered on the varied phases of successful dairying. A. F. Maclaren, Toronto, first vice-president of the association, occupied the chair. At the afternoon session J. W. Wheaton, London, spoke first on the work of the association and was followed by Prof. Harcourt, who represented the farmers' institute work of the province. He addressed the meeting on the subject of fodder, corn and the silo. The subject elicited much discussion from those present.

Mr. J. H. Monrad, Illinois, followed with an excellent address on the relation of the farmer to scientific teaching and the importance to the farmer of making the most of his opportunities. Mr. Robert Cleland, Listowel, a practical dairy farmer and cheese manufacturer, then addressed the meeting on the subject of dairy farming. His address was eminently practical and was listened to with much interest.

At the evening session Mayor Wait, of Harriston, presided. Addresses were given by Prof. Harcourt and Messrs. Monrad and Wheaton. The attendance at both meetings was good, considering the condition of the roads. The attendance at both meetings was good, considering the considering the condition of the roads. The association was unable to hold its convention at Kincardine on Tuesday, as the speakers were unable to get there because of the snow.

Stagnation in the Maten Trade.

MONTREAL, Feb. 28.—The Canadian Grocer says: Representatives from match factories of Canada met here yesterday to consider advance in prices. Cutting has been general and the market demoralized, production being much in excess of demand. The small concerns felt the competition keenly and were anxious to get all manufacturers to agree to higher prices. It was reported that some of them had loaded up some Quebec city jobbers at one dollar a case, though well-known brands are bringing $280 to $350. A statement of stocks in jobbers and manufacturers hands showd that they were so large that it would be impossible to get higher prices even if manufacturers combine on them. It was therefore decided not to take any action and the meeting adjourned indefinitely.

Close of Brockville Presbytery.

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 28.—The Brockville Presbytery, which has been in session here for a couple of days, closed its meeting last night. There was a large attendance of ministers and laymen but no business of importance was transacted. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society embracing all the auxiliaries in the Presbytery were in session at the same time. About 200 delegates were in attendance and the reports show that the past year has been the most successful in the society's history. An interesting feature of the meeting was addresses by Rev. Fraser Campbell, a missionary returned from India.

BIG BLAZE IN HALIFAX

Great Destruction to Property at Deepwater Terminus.

LOSS OF A MILLION DOLLARS

Half of This Amount Was Lost by the Dominion Government With Little Insurance—Several Steamers' Cargoes in Transit Totally Destroyed.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 28.—Fire broke out at deepwater terminus yesterday. The long wharf, together with a great quantity of goods, was totally destroyed. The Government immigrant shed was also destroyed before the fire was got under control. A strong wind blew from the north. The chief loss sustained is by the Dominion Government, whose property around the deepwater terminus is pretty well destroyed. The big immigration and other sheds are gone and the long wharf is burned. The grain elevator and the elevator-shute are also burned.

The loss by fire will reach about a million dollars. Of this amount the Dominion Government will lose fully half. The grain elevator and shute, which were completely destroyed, cost with appurtenances over a quarter of a million.

In the shed were two steamers' cargoes of goods, those of Indrani and Corea, and the remainder of several other cargoes. Great efforts were made to save this, but were unavailing. Nothing whatever could be removed. About 200 tons of these goods were for city merchants, whose losses will be very heavy, probably $250,000 in the aggregate, but different firms will loss from $500 to $1,000 individually. Then there are 200 tons more destined for New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario, probably $200,000 worth. The latter goods it is believed will be insured, the policies covering transit of goods till they arrive at their destination, but there is no insurance on the stocks of the Halifax merchants. Neither was there any insurance on 14 cars of coal, eight cars of potatoes and one carload of beef consumed. The Canada Atlantic railway lost $10,000 in cars burned. In addition to this there were large quantities of goods there waiting shipment to Newfoundland and these were all lost. The Armour Beef Company of Chicago lost four cars. The Government disinfecting apparatus, which cost $15,000, was also burned.

On Water street the wooden buildings from 150 to 385 were more or less damaged, most of them insured. It was the liveliest fire that has occurred in Halifax for many years, and the firemen, who put forth herculean efforts to prevent it spreading had many narrow escapes for instant death. As it was, several were badly injured. Several vessels only escaped by being taken out into the stream. How the fire started is a mystery. It will be some time before city merchants will know the amount of their losses as they have not yet received invoices of their goods.

Great crowds continue to visit the vicinity of the scene. General Montgomery Moore tendered the services of the entire military force to assist in overcoming the conflagration, but the chief of the fire department decided it was not necessary. When the fire reached the grain elevator there was a terrific explosion, nearly rending the building. It is believed to have been an explosion of dust. It was this that injured several men. The Royal Engineers offered to blow up the building if it was deemed necessary to prevent the spread of the flames. Nine cars of produce destined for the west Indies were entirely destroyed. A large number of firemen and others were cut off by the fire and only a prompt rescue by a steam tug saved their lives. It was thought for some time several had been cremated, but this turned out to be an error.

For a million dollar fire the insurance companies had a marvelous escape. The docks in the vicinity of the conflagration are two or three feet deep in floating debris.

To Fill Frank Joseph's Place.

HAMILTON, Feb. 28.—The position of assistant clerk of the Ontario Assembly, rendered vacant by the death of Frank Joseph, has been filled by the appointment of W. H. Wardrope, of the firm of Wardrope & Carpenter, barristers, of Hamilton. Mr. Wardrope will assume the duties of Secretary of the private committee which will keep him employed in Toronto during a session of the Legislature only and he will not withdraw from the law firm, in which he is now senior partner.

Trial of the Hendershotts.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—The trial of William D. Welter and John Hendershott, charged with the murder of the latter's nephew, W. H. Hendershott, will be commenced on Tuesday at the Elgin spring assizes, which will be held in St. Thomas. B. B. Osler, Q.C., will prosecute. Over one hundred witness have been summoned for the Crown and forty for the defence. An extra panel of jurors has been also summoned. Lawyers Robinson and Macdonald are counsel for the defence.

Suspicious Disappearance.

HAWKESBURY, Ont., Feb. 28.—Frank Sauve, a French-Canadian, who disappeared from here 14 years ago, returned last November, but is thought to have been murdered as he again disappeared. A man named Burrass was last seen with him. The latter subsequently displayed a plentitude of money and then he disappeared. The officers are looking for Burrass.

A Woman Fatally Burned.

BUFFALO, Feb. 28.—Josie Slahafske was fatally burned here. Her dress caught fire from a bonfire, which had been built to thaw out a switch on the New York Central road tracks near her home.

Consumption follows neglected colds, Norway Pine Syrup cures coughs, asthma, sore throat, bronchitis and lung troubles.

Daily Examiner.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1895.

A SPECIMEN BRICK.

The following interesting little paragraph is now going the rounds of the press:

The cotton combine has had a meeting in Montreal, and after paying a dividend of 8 per cent., carried $85,000 to the profit and loss account. The gross profits for the year are given at $197,000, and the reserve or surplus amounts to more than $600,000.

Here is a concern that cleared nearly $200,000 last year, and after putting away $85,000 was able to declare a dividend of 8 per cent. on its immense capital, including the huge sums locked up in the idle winsey mill at Brantford, and other mills scattered throughout the country, that this gigantic monopoly has first purchased and afterwards silenced in order that it may the more effectually control the market.

Let us betake ourselves now to the Dominion census returns. We find that in 1891 the Brantford winsey mill was reported to be in operation, giving employment to forty-five men, twenty-five women, twenty boys and ten girls, and paying $28,000 per annum in wages. What is the condition of that mill to-day? Shut down to help contribute to the $200,000 of profits. Where is the labour that was employed therein? Echo answers, Where?

In the same census returns we find that the Brantford cotton mill at the time the enumerator called was giving employment to fifty men, seventy women, thirty boys and thirty girls and paying $42,000 in wages. Just make a little calculation, and it will be found that the 180 hands received on an average $233 per annum each, OR THE MUNIFICENT SUM OF $4.25 EACH PER WEEK. A mere pittance assuredly! Yet twice within a year the corporation above referred to, paying 8 per cent. dividend on a largely watered stock after adding $85,000 to a rest amounting to more than $800,000, reduced the wages of its Brantford employees, and presumably of its employees elsewhere. What an outrage on civilisation!

This is how the "plate-glass" style of government works out in practice, but it is not the employees of such concerns as the Dominion Cotton company who are behind the plate-glass.—Brantford Expositor.

THE EAST RIDING.

The fight is now on in the East Riding. At the close of the most enthusiastic and hopeful convention ever held in Norwood, Mr. John Lang, the unanimous nominee of the convention, formally declared the campaign opened, and announced his determination to begin work from that hour, and the enthusiastic response made from the large assemblage showed that the Liberals are entering upon the contest with a vigor and determination that will assuredly bring success. The Liberals in East Peterborough have more than a fighting chance — they have a winning chance. They have a good strong candidate who redeemed the riding in 1887 by the large majority of 130. Last election Mr. Burnham, the Conservative candidate, only succeeded by the slender majority of 28. And he is held not to be so strong now as then, not so much on account of decline in personal popularity as on account of the waning popularity of the cause he represents. There are indications of a strong revulsion of feeling against the policy of the Government, while the cause of the Liberals is increasingly popular. Whenever the shrinking Dominion Government may bring themselves to the point of announcing the elections the Liberals of East Peterborough will be found with their armour bright, ready for the fray, and, whoever the government candidate may be, he will not find everything smooth sailing by any means, even though he may have the use of the mythical Trent Valley Canal to help float him along. The Liberals of East Peterborough go into this contest to win, and win they will in a fair field.

OLD COUNTRY AND CANADIAN WAGES.

The N.P. organs and orators are fond of quoting, as against free trade, the figures for wages in Great Britain. There is something fallacious in these quotations. While the rate of wages may be lower in the old country there is no doubt that this disadvantage as compared with the wages of operatives in protected Canada is largely offset by the constant employment the old country operatives receive. In Canada, under the combine system, employees receive work and, consequently, wages only so long as the mill or factory is in operation and we all know that as soon as our limited market is glutted, both work and wages are stopped. A manufactory that gives at the rate of three weeks work to its employees in three months, cannot be regarded as a great boon to the workingman or workingwoman. The bonused and protected manufacturer further protects himself by putting off the pay roll the moment the supply of manufactured goods becomes so large as to threaten to bring down profits below a certain high standard. He does this by depriving his workmen of employment. The pay roll takes a holiday, the supply of goods decreases, the demand increases in consequence and the prices are kept up. Workmen are too intelligent these days—read too many newspapers—to be fooled by the glowing tales of high wages the N.P. has brought them. Better a steady wage of twenty shillings a week in the old country than double that amount in Canada, with a supply of work at less than half time, and that only furnished at the caprice of the employer, who so arranges his business that the workingman bears all the losses and the employer has nothing but gain.

In the Legislature Mr. Marter is complaining that the public accounts were not tabled sooner. This is small cause for complaint, but Mr. Marter has never anything but trifles to complain of in the administration of the Mowat Government. The provincial fiscal year ends on Dec. 31st, and the public accounts were presented on Feb. 26th. The Dominion fiscal year ends June 30th, and though eight months have elapsed, there is not only no signs of the public accounts, but no sign of even a session, though the time of assembling Parliament has passed by nearly two months. If Mr. Marter wishes to have something really solid to kick against, he should get elected a member of the House of Commons.

Mr. Dalton McCathy may be quixotic, but he is certainly no coward. He has been quoting statistics all over Canada to show that the Canadian consumer is paying for cotton goods just about the English price with the duty added, thus proving that the cotton, like the sugar duties, plunder the consumer without benefitting the revenue. Mayor Kendry, of Peterborough, challenged the truth of this assertion and offered to bet $100 that he could show it to be false. Mr. McCarthy promptly accepted the challenge, and now some Peterborough charity will benefit by the wager. If we were disposed to bet it would be on McCarthy.—Brantford Expositor.

The government has created a home market for one farm product—butter. The system is different from the National Policy method outlined by Sir Charles Tupper and is vastly more simple. It consists in buying up the butter at a high price and sending it abroad for sale. The same system, the Globe suggests, adopted toward Canadian wheat, corn, barley, rye, cattle, hogs and poultry would fulfill the earlier promises of the grand old party. Of course it would be rather costly, but not so much so as the original plan.

The Sentinel-Review refers with approval to the action of Mr. Janes, who has written to his Liberal friends in South Oxford asking them to give their support to Sir Richard Cartwright. Mr. Janes was the rival of Sir Richard for the nomination in South Oxford, and he has displayed a very proper spirit.

The Mail and Empire says the Globe's cry "On to Ottawa" means "on to the treasury." The hope the Conservative organ holds out to the Liberals seems very like a "hollow" mockery in view of the fact that the Dominion treasury is five million dollars worse than empty.

In the Ontario Legislature on Feb. 26th, Dr. Ryerson, M.P.P., accused the government of "bulldozing" the Opposition. This merely balances the account. Last session Dr. Ryerson "calfdosed" the Legislature ad nauseam.
